About 20 valuable Holstein cattle and several horses died Sunday night in a fire that damaged a barn on the farm of Andy Erickson of Badger, prominent dairymen and vice chairman of the Minnesota dairy industry committee. M. Augustine New Director Land O'Lakes

Elected Friday in Minneapolis to Succeed Stenberg

Marian Augustine of Holt, president of L. O' L. District 17, was elected Friday to the 23-member of the board of directors of Land O'Lakes Creameries to represent this district, succeeding Art Stenberg, who had served the past several years. The election was conducted at the annual meeting of the huge cooperative at its central office in Minneapolis.

Also elected to the board was Truman Torgerson of Manitowoc, Wisconsin, representing District 25. M. H. Mauritson of Shelly was reelected president.

Approximately 3,000 persons attended the meeting, at which the Thief River Falls plant was represented by Stuart McLeod, manager; Morris Howick, Al Wilcox, Harry Peterson and Wallace Christensen.

The delegates at the session asked for a further clarification of details of the proposed self-help dairy program, seeking assurances that the plan would safeguard the interests of midwest milk producers. A self-help bill has been drafted by the National Milk Producers Federation and the National Grange.

Land O'Lakes is one of the largest co-op members of the NMPF and for years has been a leader in pushing dairy legislation that would tax dairy farmers so they could control their own supplies and prices.

Delegates to the co-operative's annual convention in Minneapolis questioned some provisions of the plan which they argued might discriminate against surplus milk producing areas like Minnesota and Wisconsin. They urged further study of the proposals.

Middle River Woman Killed in Car Mishap

Mrs. Hilda Peltola, 76, Dies in Hospital Here Last Friday

A Middle River woman, Mrs. Hilda Peltola, 76, died in Northwestern Hospital here Friday shortly after suffering fatal injuries in a one-car accident about 16 miles north of Thief River Falls earlier in the day.

According to the highway patrol, the car driven by Edward Peltola, (age not learned) Mrs. Peltola's husband, went out of control and rolled over in the ditch along the road near the highways 59 and 32 intersection, about four miles north of Holt.

Mr. and Mrs. Peltola were brought to Thief River Falls by Collins ambulance of Middle River. Peltola's injuries were of a minor nature and he will be released from the hospital today, according to authorities there.

Funeral services for Mrs. Peltola have been set, tentatively, for this afternoon.

The highway patrolman investigating the accident said poor driving conditions probably contributed to the car's going out of control. It had been snowing all that day and roads were slippery.

Testing Pennington Herds for TB and for Brucellosis to Start

LIQUID FERTILIZER IS TOPIC AT ST. HILAIRE TUESDAY

Liquid fertilizer will be the topic of discussion at a meeting of farmers Tuesday evening, March 18, at 8 o'clock in the St. Hilaire school auditorium under the sponsorship of Rolland Bros. Service of St. Hilaire. Motion pictures also will be shown.

Cattle in Pennington county is now being tested for brucellosis and tuberculosis. A meeting of veterinarians was held in the meeting room of the City Auditorium today, March 17 to determine the schedule and to make arrangements, according to Dr. John Bennett, supervising veterinarian of the test.

The purpose of the test is to re-accredit the county as a modified, accredited tuberculosis-free area, and re-certify Pennington county as a modified certified brucellosis-free area.

These tests do not only locate any disease in the county and prevent the diseases from spreading, but also make possible freer movement of cattle to other states which have health restrictions on cattle shipments from un-certified areas. Human health is also protected by removing disease carrying cattle.

The testing of cattle will start immediately and is expected to be completed in a couple of weeks, prior to spring field work, weather permitting, Dr. Bennett stated. Farmers will be notified of the date their herd will be checked and facilities for holding cattle will expedite the testing. Only cattle over six months of age will be tested.

At the time they were placing wreaths on the head of each person at the table.

Red Cross Drive Under Way Today

25 Workers Attend Kickoff Breakfast in Rex This Morning

Approximately 25 volunteer workers were in attendance at a drive kick-off breakfast of the Pennington county Red Cross chapter this morning at the Rex Cafe, at which Mrs. I. R. Gevins, county chapter president, presided.

A sound film, "Neighbor to Neighbor", dealing with methods of solicitation, and how money from solicitations is used, was shown by F. C. Bills, Moorhead, representative of the American Red Cross.

In a brief address to the workers, Bills said the Red Cross faces a crisis brought on by the heavy drain on the ARC disaster fund.

Due to the many disasters in which the Red Cross was called on for help, the organization's disaster fund was depleted with expenditures of over $60 million recorded last year. Over $300,000 was spent in Fargo alone, in 1957 Bills stated.

Bills also outlined procedure used when emergency leave for servicemen is negotiated through Red Cross channels. He emphasized that all leaves are granted by the military commander of the individual serviceman, not by the Red Cross.

The Red Cross is merely an unbiased channel of communication between the serviceman, his family and the armed services, Bills emphasized. Whether or not emergency leave is granted depends on the gravity of the situation, usually based on the medical diagnosis or prognosis where illness in the serviceman's family is concerned.

Following his brief talk Bills answered questions and the group discussed various problems which confront Red Cross solicitors. Solicitation [illegible] were distributed to the workers, some of whom will start their portion of the drive today.

Wendell Olson, business district solicitation head, asked that all businessmen and employees give generously when the workers make their calls this week.

The same request was made by the other drive heads of the people in the areas in which they will be soliciting. In the city, in addition to Olson, Joanne Wedul, is chairman on the east side, Mrs. H. G. Halverson, west side; Mrs. A. M. Aase in Zeh's Addition, and Mrs. Margaret Race in the local schools.

Steigers Build Huge Tractor as Family Do-it-yourself Project

On practically all farm areas a tractor that will pull a 5-bottom plow is judged as a big one by most farmers. A tractor that will drag 10 acres in one round, ora one that needs to be refueled only once every two days would be considered merely a long stretch of the imagination, in the minds of these same farmers, however.

Not so with the John Steiger family. John, a healthy looking speciman in his early sixties, and his two sons, Maurice, 30, and Douglas 25, have quite a large family farm about eight miles southwest of St. Hilaire. The size of the farm dictated that several "large" diesel tractors—or a single monster tractor—do the work on their holdings, so they chose the monster, plus one of the "small" diesels (by the Steigers' standards) capable of pulling a 5-bottom plow as a good power combination for their operation.

However, the kind of tractor they wanted wasn't available on the market so, after about three years of study and planning, they started work on their own version of a really powerful tractor.

The result of their experiment is startling to the person seeing it for the first time. To say it is impressive is crass understatement.

The Steigers don't have livestock on their well-kept and attractive farmstead. There is a good hip-roof barn reminiscent of days when stock did roam the land, however, and the men have remodeled it into a room workshop and equipped it with machine tools well above what is found in the average farm shop. It is in this shop they are building their big tractor.

Last fall they did decide to start work on the tractor and by February they had purchased the components from various manufacturers and were on the job. The project is mostly finished now and takes up most of the space in the shop. The first thing one sees as he enters the door is two monstrous rear wheels of the machine and he is inclined to wonder if the Steigers aren't building a gigantic road-building machine instead of a farm tractor.

After walking around the rear of the tractor and viewing it from the side one sees the general plan of the machine and how it is different from a common tractor or a road-building machine.

The tractor has four wheels, all the same size, with 18x26 Goodyear tires, each having approximately 20 inches tread. The machine doesn't turn in the manner of most tractors but pivots in the center instead, with the 201 brake hosepower G.M.C. diesel engine mounted partly ahead of the front wheels, and the rear wheels trailing behind the pivot.

The axles are Timken planetary types and a Fuller 1440, 8-speed transmission transmits the engine power to the drive mechanisms of each of the four wheels. The only part of the tractor drive mechanism made by the Steigers is the power divider. Speeds listed by the Steigers range from 1.81 m.p.h. in first gear to 17 m.p.h. in eighth gear. A 17 inch B&W clutch is used.

Despite its size the tractor has a 10-ft. turning radius. It is equipped with hydraulicaly-operated power brakes and steering. It seems almost incongruous that such a huge machine is steered with a tiny lever approximately 5/8 inch in diameter and a foot long!

The tractor's cooling system has 30-gallon capacity and it takes 120 gallons of diesel fuel—enough to last two days—at a single filling! It is obvious the Steigers wanted a machine that would do the greatest amount of work in the least possible time.

The tractor chassis was fabricated by the three Steigers from heavy steel stock and the wheel cover were made from thick sheet steel. It gives an impression of ruggedness just standing there in the shop. When Maurice Steiger climbed into the operator's seat his head cleared the shop ceiling by mere inches—and there is a high ceiling in the shop! The operator mounts his seat via steps in the rear of the front wheels.

Although the tractor was not painted at the time this reporter visited the Steigers, the machine did not look crude or home-made. On the contrary it showed excellent and pains-taking workmanship throughout. All seams in the machine were very neatly welded and when ground and painted will give every impression of the tractor's having been built professionaly. A green finish is planned.

Asked whose idea the tractor was, Maurice Steiger gave most of the credit to his younger brother Douglas. However, he stated, all three of them shared in the design and work. He said they were equipped with machine tools, among them a lathe and presses, to do most of the work but at times had to enlist the help of Thief River Falls firms. Some parts called for milling on a milling machine which they don't have.

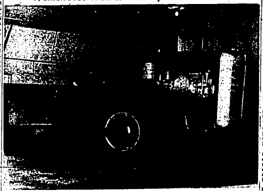
This is not their first machine-building experience, Maurice told the Times reporter. They once built two swathers which drew wide attention in the upper mid west some years earlier. Eventhough the tractor is not finished, word they are building it has reached out far and wide so that they have about five visitors a day to see their handiwork. The visitors come from as far away as Minot, N. D. to the west and Canada to the north, Maurice said.

Since the project was started, the Steigers stated, they discovered there is a similiar tractor manufacturd by a Washington concern but at a price considerably above what their machine is costing them to build.

Maurice said they have high hopes for success of the tractor and proudly stated that while they used standard manufactured component parts in its construction, the design is all their own and they have gone out of their way to be original.

And, there certainly is no denying it looks completely different from how most people expect a farm tractor to look! And, judging from results of other Steiger projects the tractor will probably be a huge success, too.

Tremendous Tractor Built by Area Farmers



This is the big diesel tractor built by John Steiger and his sons, Douglas and Maurice, on their farm west of St. Hilaire. Powered by a 201 b.h.p. General Motors diesel engine the tractor is expected to do the work of several smaller 5-plow diesels and carries a two-day fuel supply in a 120-gal. tank.

The project of building the tractor was started after the first of the year and is now nearing completion. Although standard manufactured parts were used the Steigers' design is original.

St. Hilaire Farmers Who Built Own Tractor

The Steigers need a large tractor to work the approximately 2000 acres they farm southwest of St. Hilaire.

Tractor Operator Sits High

Maurice Steiger sits in the driver's seat of the monster farm tractor he and his brother, Douglas, and father, John, built in their farm workshop west of St. Hilaire this winter. The controls are all hydraulically actuated and a very small lever is all that's needed to steer the machine, despite its gargantuan size. An idea of the size is indicated by the small clearance of Maurice's head below the ceiling of the shop, which is about 8-ft. high.

2 Minor Traffic Accidents in City over the Weekend

Only two minor accidents occurred over the week-end to disturb the tranquillity of the city, according to police, with combined damages from both accidents came to less than an estimated $150.

In the first accident which happened at the St. Paul av. Nora st. intersection about 12:55 Sunday, cars driven by Charles Boren and George E. Ferris, Jr., both of this city, collided, causing about $15 damages to each of the vehicles.

The other accident occurred at the Kendall av. Nora st. intersection. Donald E. Molskness, city, driving east on Nora, hit a car driven by Roy Craven, Grand Forks, N. D., who was driving north on Kendall. Damages were estimated at $50 to Craven's car, $25 to Molskness'.

No charges were filed in either case, police said.

Operator of City Dump Injured in Tractor Accident

A city employee, Carl M. Johnson, 68, operator of the city dump south of the city, escaped with leg and other injuries Friday, March 7, in a tractor mishap at the dump.

Johnson was pushing waste over the steep bank at the dump about 11 a.m. when he went a little too far and the tractor went over, throwing him clear. Had he not been thrown clear he may have suffered even worse injuries or even death according to city authorities.

Johnson had been confined to Northwestern Hospital from his injuries but probably will be released today, City Clerk P. G. Pederson stated.

HOME OWNER'S QUESTION BOX

Q—Our old roof is in pretty bad shape and we're afraid it might start to leak at any time. But a neighbor said we'll have to wait for warmer weather to have a new roof put on. Is this true?

A—Your neighbor is wrong. A new roof of asphalt shingles can be applied successfully at any time. In fact, cold weather actually is a good time to re-roof, since the work schedules of most roofing contractors aren't as heavy as they are in other seasons.

Q—My brother-in-law says our house doesn't need insulation because it has brick veneer walls. I disagree with him because the walls seem to be cold on the inside. Who's right?

A—You are. Brick veneer or any other type of masonry does not prevent much heat loss. You can test this yourself by placing your hand on a concrete or cinder block basement wall in winter. It will be cold, no matter how warm the basement is. In fact, tests have shown that a 3-inch thickness of mineral wool insulation will stop more heat than nearly 6 feet of solid brick.

Q—How can I make caulking around a bathtub last longer?

A—Paint it with enamel the same color as the walls or tile above the tub. The waterproofing action of the enamel will give the caulking compound longer life.

Q—How can plastic tile be cut to fit around fixtures?

A—A coping saw works best for intricate cuts in plastic tile.

Q—Is there a remedy for chalking plaster walls? We can't get wallpaper to stick.

A—Coat the wall with a half and half mixture of shellac and alcohol. This seals the plaster with a waterproof surface and the wallpaper will stay in place.

Q—How can I repair large cracks in a plaster ceiling?

A—It's not practical to attempt to fill the cracks, since the new plaster needs more support. Remove plaster on each side of the crack to a distance of about 6 inches. Place a strip of metal lath in the clearing, nail it to the old lath, and fill the opening with new plaster. Do this in thin layers, permitting each layer to dry slightly before adding a new one.

Q—Is a prime coat always necessary on new wood?

A—With rare exceptions. The type of wood, too, determines the kind of prime coat you need. If the wood is porous, the priming coat should contain enough oil to fill the pores. Resinous woods need priming coats with a high turpentine content to dissolve the resins and open the pores.

Q—What's the correct height from the floor for a wall socket?

A—Twelve to 18 inches in most rooms. A 48-inch height is recommended in kitchens, laundries, and workshops.

Q—How do I keep curtain rods and metal venetian blinds from rusting?

A—Wax them. The rods will slide easier, and the blinds will collect less dust.

Q—Can a broken ladder rung be repaired?

A—Cut the rung off flush with the inside of the rails. Make two blocks of hardwood, drilling holes in them the same diameter as the new rung. Fit the rung tightly into the two blocks, and bolt or nail the whole assembly securely to the inside of the rails.

Painting Hints from Paint Headquarters

Painting Your Kitchen . . . or Bathroom?

by Bud Kelly

You want your bathroom and kitchen to be bright, cheerful rooms . . . right? But also, you want them to be easy to clean . . . to have walls easy to wash.

That's why the right type of paint is so important. And that's why we recommend SUPERMIX 4-Hour Enamel so strongly.

Its' made with a durable bakelite type of paint . . . so it stands up to repeated washings. It dries with a soft gloss. You flow it on with a brush . . . smoothly, easily . . . and you'll never see a brush mark.

We're talking here about new work, plaster or woodwork. For re-painting older homes, use SUPERMIX Satin Finish. Or you may prefer Super Kemtone. This is a latex flat wall paint, probaby the most popular wall paint in this country.

Concerning color. Stick to the cheery, light shades — yellow, blue or green. But watch out for too-yellow greens in bathrooms. They aren't very flattering to a lady's complexion.

As for the actual painting: brushing does the best job with SUPERMIX 4-Hour Enamel and Satin Finish. Super Kemtone goes on like a dream, with a roller. You'll be surprised how easy it is.

Are you planning to paint soon? We'd love to help out . . . with the right tools and paints. And most of all, with tips that make painting easy. Fun, in fact. Come in and let's talk about it.

Old Porch Becomes Useful Room

Porch enclosed with window units of ponderosa pine adds year around living space, new exterior beauty to this house in Minneapolis. Use of old screened porch below was limited.

Wood window units can make conversion of a porch into a year-around room easier and far less expensive than you'd imagine.

This is because window units of ponderosa pine, such as the ones used in the photographs, are available in stock from building material dealers and can be installed quickly and with a minimum of labor.

The units come with frame and sash made to fit together. Hardware and weatherstripping are attached, and the unit needs only to be fastened in place and painted.

The large glass units in the porch above have fixed sash at the top with an awning window section at the bottom. A bank of six individual awning units was installed one one side. These awning windows open outward for full ventilation. They also can be left open during a rainstorm, since the glass becomes a tiny "roof" that keeps raindrops out.

The porch shown was converted by a professional. However, these and styles of other window units of ponderosa pine can be installed by a home-handyman with an average amount of skill.

'New' House—Old Site

Remodeling Solves Problem

Remodel or tear the old house down to the ground and build anew?

This is a problem faced by many owners of old, outdated houses, particularly farmers who can't move away to new locations, or families who don't want to leave the friendliness of a familiar neighborhood.

In the case of Dennis P. Haines, of Haven, Kans., the answer was remodeling, since the old house occupied the best site on his wheat farm and was in sound structural condition.

As the "before" and "after" photographs show, remodeling changed the awkward-appearing house into a modern-looking home, giving greater comfort and more space, plus the conveniences of up-to-date living. The total cost was less than a third the price of a new house of comparative size.

Principal structural changes included removal of an upstairs wing, enclosing one front porch for a kitchen, and another porch for an office.

The house was given a complete new look by reroofing it with a deep shade of asphalt shingles to make it appear lower, and choosing a color for siding that harmonizes with the new roof.

Haines specified asphalt shingles, since they had given years of trouble free service on the old house and are available in a wide choice of colors.

Old house, bottom, became "new" house, top, after it was remodeled by its owner, Kansas wheat farmer Dennis Haines. New roof of asphalt shingles and new windows of ponderosa pine help give the house its modern look.

To bring more light into downstairs rooms, new windows of ponderosa pine were installed all the way around the house. These are stock units consisting of a wide pane of fixed glass above modern hopper windows which open for ventilation. Windows upstairs were flanked with louver shutters of ponderosa pine to make them look bigger.

Other new features included a new heating plant central air conditioning, a modern new kitchen, and complete interior redecorating.

The remodeling was designed by Arthur B. Campen of Peoria, Ill., modernization consultant and remodeling editor of Practical Builder magazine.

Thieves Win NW Hockey Playoffs

Coach Paul Bedard's senior hockey Thieves added the Northwest Hockey league playoff title to their Northwest hockey league championship when, on Sunday afternoon on the Arena ice sheet, they outlasted the Roseau Cloverleafs to score an 8 to 7 win in overtime and gain the decision in the two-game total-goal series by a margin of 15 to 13.

Opening the series at Roseau on Saturday night, the Thieves had to rally from a 5 to 2 deficit at the end of the first period of play to overtake the Leafs and win by a 7 to 6 score.

Darryl Durgin, who tallied five goals during the encounter, and had one assist, notched three of his goals in the second period as the locals marked up a four-goal cluster to take a 6 to 5 lead.

Dickie Johnson, the fast-skating left wing for the Leafs, scored a tally at the 5:47 mark of the third period, giving Roseau a 6-all tie; but Durgin's goal, at the 6:10 mark, with Glenn Carlson assisting, gave the Thieves their 7 to 6 win.

Playing here on Sunday afternoon, the never-say-die Cloverleafs, with veteran Bob Harris scoring three goals in the third period, evened the series score at 12-all, and forced the series into a ten-minute overtime period.

The Thieves entered the third period of play holding a 3 to 2 lead in the game and a 4 to 2 lead on total goals for the series, and when Durgin, at 6:12, notched a marker, it appeared that the playoff title was wrapped up. Not so, for Bob Harris and Dick Johnson banged in a pair of quick goals. Durgin, up to his old goal-scoring habits, flipped in a tally, but a couple of goals by Harris knotted the series at 13-all.

In the ten-minute overtime stanza, Durgin, with DelRay Offerdahl on the assist, beat goalie Hedlund with a backhand shot at 4:40; and when Monty Markstrom, from close in, hit the mesh at 5:10, the Thieves held a two-goal lead. Bob Harris pared that lead to one goal when he registered an unassisted tally at the 8:38 mark. And the game and series scoring was concluded at the 9:02 mark when Durgin, with Mike McMahon setting up the play, scored.

Ox Team In Training

Henry Clausen of Goodridge is an old hand at the business of converting cattle into ox power. He provided the yoke of oxen that performed here during the 50th anniversary celebration in 1954 and that Delmar Hagen of Gatzke is going to drive down the Pembina Trail to the state fair this summer.

Pictured above is Mr. Clausen and two Holstein steers he is now teaching to work and he thinks they will be ready for exhibition in various centennial parades this summer. He is having a regular yoke made and expects to have a suitable cart to give his show the proper historic atmosphere.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

The Genius Boys

It is apparent that the public relations division of the University of Minnesota's athletic department is being manned by boys who have a genius for creating ill will and major irritations.

Listen! With the NCAA hockey tournament being played in Minnesota's Williams arena, and with the North Dakota Sioux meeting Harvard in a first round game on Friday night, local civic officials believed that it would be a worthwhile gesture to present modest gifts to Joey Poole of the Sioux and Lyle Gutu of the Crimson.

Joey and Lyle are products of Prowler hockey, the two being teammates on coach Dennis Rolle's state high school champions of 1954, and the thought was expressed that in honoring Joey and Lyle, native-born hockey talent would be given proper recognition. The Twin City writers, and Minnesota officials, have whined and wailed about the influx of Canadian talent to such an extent that you would think they would favor the proposal honoring Joe any Lyle.

Dennis Rolle, in behalf of the local committee, made a phone call to the tournament officials, requesting the allotment of three or four minutes between the second or third periods to make this presentation. Was this allotment made? They explained that they were on such a tight time schedule, with the period breaks being taken up by "entertainment," that they could not accede to this request. What a fumble! And what a lost opportunity for increasing the prestige of Minnesota-born hockey talent.

Entitled to Mention

While the gala festivities that are being planned for Minneapolis' Leamington hotel on March 20th, 21st, and 22nd are primarily for the purpose of celebrating the 20th anniversary of the winning of the state high school basketball championship by Gen. Lee's 1938 Prowlers, it is perhaps worthwhile to mention the Prowler cage team of 1932, for they also won a state championship.

This 1932 squad, like that in 1938, had an undefeated season, winning twenty-three games while losing none. (The 1938 team was ever-victorious through a twenty-eight game season.) Here's the squad that gave Thief River Falls its first basketball title: Captain John Chommie, Wendell Kielty, Art Myrom, Arnold Stadum, Lloyd Annstad, Paul Dahl, Lawrence Nicholson, Ing Hendrickson, John Langseth, and Les Ihle. The coach, Roger Dooley.

And we're sure that the accomplishments of this 1932 team served as an inspiration and incentive for the 1938 club. Fact is, two of the boys on the 1938 squad, Earl Nicholson and (Lionel) Stadum, had brothers playing on that 1932 team, namely, Lawrence Nicholson and Arnold Stadum.

It is to be hoped that some members of this 1932 team will be able to attend the Saturday night banquet at the Leamington.

The Region's Best

There was not much doubt, at least not among the tournament officials and the locker-room experts, that coach Bun Fortier's Bemidji Lumberjacks were the region's best and well-earned their sixth consecutive region eight basketball title. Basketball fans in districts 30, 31, and 32 can get some solace out of the fact that Bemidji's starting line-up — Ray Cronk, Marc Kolden, Fred Swenson, Bob Engel, and Karl Kendall, as well as their number one reserve, Larry Rybak —are all seniors and will be graduated by the time another basketball season comes around.

On the individual performance level, this year's regional tourney exhibited several standout performers, and the selecting of a five-man all-regional team was comparatively easy.

Bemidji's Ray Cronk, with a pair of high scoring games—he tallied 37 points against Crookston in the semi-finals and followed with a 36-point effort against Fertile in the finals — must be a unanimous choice for the center position. So outstanding was Cronk's play that it was the consensus that if the six-foot, six-inch center had been playing for either Crookston or Fertile, the Pirates or the Falcons would have won the championship.

And closely pressing Cronk for the tournament starring honors was the Fertile Falcons' classy all-round athlete, Arlo Brunsberg. Brunsberg, especially in the Falcons opening round tilt against Stephen, caused many oh's and ah's from the fans by his spectacular play-making.

Entitled to a position on the regional all-star team would be Bemidji's greatly improved Marc Kolden. Kolden, at six-feet four-inches, gives the Lumberjacks additional rebounding and tip-in scoring strength. He takes much of the "pressure" off Cronk, and allows the lanky Bemidji center to roam on the outside without having the Jacks sacrifice their close-in play.

We will round off this all-star team by placing Fertile's nimble and fine-shooting Lyle Sannes at a guard; and Crookston's inspiring Ken Wold at a forward.

That would be quite a lineup: forwards, Marc Kolden and Ken Wold; center, Ray Cronk; and guards, Arlo Brunsberg and Lyle Sannes.

Deductions for Child Care and Alimony on Income Tax Reviewed

(This is the eleventh in a series of articles on Income Tax. These articles are made available as a public service by the Minnesota State Bar association, public relations committee.)

On your federal return you may be entitled to deduct certain child care expenses up to a maximum of $600. The deduction may be claimed by a woman or a man who is either a widower or is divorced or legally separated from his wife when paid the purpose of enabling the taxpayer to work. But if the woman is married and reports, together with her husband, more than $4,500 as adjusted gross income, the amount in excess of $4,500 must be subtracted from the deduction otherwise allowable unless the husband is incapable of self-support. The payments must be for care of a dependent who is either under 12 years of age or physically or mentally incapable of caring for himself. You cannot deduct payments made to a person for whom you claim an exemption. No deduction is permitted for child care expenses on your Minnesota return.

The rules are complicated and it is not easy to determine whether a deduction is available and if available to compute its amount. For that reason it may be advisable to obtain Form 2441 from the Internal Revenue Service, and use it for computing your deduction.

Alimony payments which satisfy certain technical requirements may be deducted on both your federal and Minnesota returns. First, in order for the payments to be deductible, you must be legally divorced or separated under a legal decree or written separation agreement, and the payments must be required by the decree or written agreement. If you are separated under an oral agreement or without agreement, no deduction is permitted. Second, to be deductible the payments must be either payable over an indefinite period or a period exceeding ten years where the principal sum payable is stated. If the payments will terminate on your former wife's remarriage, they are deductible, since the payment period is of an indefinite duration. Third, if your payments are also for the support of your children, an allocation of your payments between support and alimony is required, since only that part paid is alimony is deductible.

If your former spouse is paying you alimony which he may deduct, you are required to include the amount of such payments in your gross income. But you are not required to include amounts paid to you for support of your children.

Organize Citizens Committee to Tell of 3 Amendments

Harold Thomforde, Former Mayor of Crookston, Is Co-chairman of Group

A statewide voluntary citizens committee is currently being organized to disseminate factual information on the three constitutional amendments Minnesota voters will consider in the general election, November 4.

Co-chairmen of the group are County Commissioner Lew Larson, Mabel, Minnesota, and Harold Thomforde, former mayor of Crookston. Mr. Larson is former president of the Minnesota Association of County Commissioners. Mr. Thomforde is president of the League of Minnesota Municipalities.

According to the chairmen, an organized effort to inform voters about these amendments, all of which are concerned with the structure and organization of government, is particularly necessary because of the complexity of Amendment No. 1.

Amendment No. 1 revises the home rule and special legislation provisions in the constitution. Amendment No. 2 increases the terms of the governor, lieutenant governor, state treasurer, attorney general, and secretary of state from two to four years starting with the election in 1962. Amendment No. 3 permits members of the legislature to serve as a local government attorney other than county attorney and to run for another office without resigning as a legislator until taking the new office.

The home rule amendment (No. 1), if passed, will permit the legislature to set the majority requirements for adopting and amending home rule charters. At present these majorities are set out in the constitution, with 57% required to adopt and 60% required to amend a home rule charter. None of the other states which authorize the adoption of home rule characters require special majorities.

Eighty-six Minnesota cities are governed under home rule charters, which means that a local charter commission drafted and the people adopted a document setting forth how the city should be governed.

Seek to Interest Young Men in Dairy Industry Careers

Career Day Is Set for March 29 on St. Paul Campus of Minnesota 'U'

Minnesota's fourth annual Dairy Industry Career Day devoted to acquainting prospective college students with the opportunities of university-trained men in a career of leadership and service in the dairy industry will be held Saturday, March 29 in Haecker Hall on the University of Minnesota St. Paul Campus.

Junior and senior high students, their parents, high school counselors, dairy industry personnel, high school graduates and members of the county American Dairy Association committees are invited to attend the session which begins at 9:30 in the morning and concludes at 2:30 p.m.

A full program for the day has been arranged by university officials. One of the highlights of the program will be the appearance of lovely Judy Merritt, Lakeville, Minnesota's Princess Kay of the Milky May.

Following conclusion of the program in the afternoon there will be a guided tour of the entire St. Paul campus for those who wish to get a complete picture of the agriculture facilities of the University of Minnesota.

The youths will learn that the demand for college trained men in the dairy industry far exceeds the supply and that there are many opportunities in the field for persons of widely different interests.

Buying of Savings Bonds Increases in State in 1958

Sales, However, Lagged in Pennington County in February, Report Shows

Purchases of Series E and H savings bonds in February, 1958 were 32 per cent above a year ago, the Minnesota savings bonds division announced today.

February purchases of $6,805,000 bring the Minnesota year-to-date total to $14,321,000, an increase of $2,422,000, or 20.4 per cent over the first two months of 1957. These percentage increases are substantially above the national figures which show an increase of 13 per cent in February and 11 per cent for the first two months of 1958.

County Savings Bond Chairman J. M. Roche reported that savings bond purchases in Pennington county totaled $10,612 in February, bringing the two month's purchases to $41,273 or 19.8 per cent of quota.

In District 1 of which this county is a part, purchases totaled $395,474 or 22.1 per cent of quota.

Nationwide, February E and H sales were in excess of redemptions for the first month since July, 1956. This brought a congratulatory statement from Treasury Secretary Robert B. Anderson, "It is good for the country to have the Savings Bonds program moving forward in this way. This is important, not only for the individuals who are buying these bonds but also for the economic health of the nation by providing better distribution of the public debt."

Thief River Watershed

Organization of an anti-wetlands association in the Mud Lake area has aroused much interest, and some bitterness. The association has a twofold purpose; to change Mud Lake from a refuge for waterfowl to an upland game sanctuary, and to improve drainage, with special emphasis on the need for beaver eradication in agricultural areas.

The association probably will accomplish some good. It already has high lighted the fact that while the beaver is a fine animal and deserves protection under certain conditions, it is also true that under other conditions the beaver is a destructive animal and should be so dealt with.

In recent years the sportsman-minded conservation department has been more concerned about the welfare of the beaver than about the needs of the farmer. The department now admits that a drainage ditch is not a proper place for a beaver dam, and, as a result, it is likely that both the laws and the enforcement of the laws will get some realistic revisions.

The weakness of the program suggested by the anti-wetlands group lies in the fact that it ignores the real need of the area it would speak for. That need is a comprehensive Thief River Watershed development project that would deal intelligently with all phases of the problem and the special private and public interests, some of them conflicting, that are involved. The Mud Lake problem, and how it is disposed of, is just one of the many things that must be taken into consideration in planning the redevelopment of the watershed.

The watershed need has failed to secure the attention it deserves largely because of the inability of various groups of farmers in the watershed to argee among themselves. The man-made drainage system that spreads out over most of the watershed is a large and unwieldy thing, and needs to be reorganized. Before there can be a satisfactory solution for the overall problem factions must be dissolved and differences compromised.

But the fault does not lie entirely with the residents of the area either. Both state and federal agencies are responsible in part for the problems. By both the things that have been done and by the things they have failed to do they have contributed to the causes for the ill will and misunderstanding that make it difficult to get united action behind a sensible program of redevelopment.

We have no quarrel with those who say that this or that should be done about Mud Lake. It is our opinion however, that the anti-wetlands group will not be successful in its attempt to drain the area that has been established as a federal refuge for migratory waterfowl. It is a question that will not be decided locally but in Washington, and until we see letters assuring us that Senators Thye and Humphrey and Congresswoman Coya Knutson demand that it be abandoned we would hold out little hope for those who seek such action.

But we are certain that Senators Thye and Humphrey and Congresswoman Coya Knutson, and those who speak for us in St. Paul, will go along wholeheartedly in support of any effort that has united local backing to find solutions to the watershed problems.

The state and federal governments have special responsibilities in this area. In reestablishing the Thief and Mud Lakes they acquired certain lands and the right to flood these lands. But they also acquired a responsibility to the drainage system of which these lands are a part.

Judge Paul A. Lundgren established several years ago the state's responsibility to share in the cost of repair and improvement of a drainage system in which it had acquired lands in eastern Marshall county. A law sponsored by Senator Donald Sinclair made the money for such a participation available. These assessments were on lands acquired by the state as a means of providing financial assistance to the county.

The Mud Lake and Thief Lake waterfowl projects were not established as local relief measures but as projects intended to benefit the entire state and nation. With the state's responsibility established for lands acquired through forfeiture, there should be little question about the responsibility of the state and federal governments in assuming their fair share of the costs of maintaining adequate drainage in the drainage systems in which they have acquired property voluntarily.

As we understand it, residents of the Mud River watershed, the area draining into Mud Lake, have taken steps to organize under the provisions of the Small Watershed act. The first action would be a survey to determine their needs and the possibility of improving their drainage. That is a sensible first objective.

The Thief River watershed as a whole is too large to be organized under the provisions of the Small Watershed act, but we do have the authority, already vested in the Red Lake River Drainage and Conservancy District, to proceed with such a general survey.

We believe this possibility should be further explored, seeking the support of both federal and state agencies in a study of the entire Thief River watershed. A preliminary study probably could be obtained without too much cost, and out of such a study might come a plan upon which all could agree and behind which all could unite.

The problem should be approached with this thought in mind, that out of such a study might come a plan that to on one individual or group would be entirely satisfactory. The problem will have to be approached in a spirit of compromise. Only in that spirit is there a chance for acceptance of a program of development and redevelopment of a large area that has great possibilities.

The Winnipeg Tribune noted that the fifth anniversary of the death of Joseph Stalin, March 5, slipped by unobserved in Moscow. The Tribune ventured no opinion as to the kind of observance that might have been appropriate. Considering the qualifications of his successors we are not sure the anniversary of his death should be an occasion for celebration.

Minneapolis apparently is taking appropriate steps to maintain order during the days and nights of the state basketball tournament. The officials have our sympathy. It never is easy to draw a straight line between good and bad, and it is especially difficult in dealing with the behaviour of youth. Under the circumstances it probably would be better to be too severe than too lenient in dealing with the first offenders.

QUESTIONS answered for VETERANS

Additional information or assistance on veteran's benefits may be obtained by writing or visiting the VA Contact Representative at the Grand Forks VA Office.

Q—I took out my GI insurance on January 31, some years ago. What is my premium due date for months which do not have 31 days?

A—Your premium due date for months without 31 days would be the last day of the month.

Q—When I enrolled in Korean GI Bill training I put down as my goal an AB degree in history. Now I want to go on for my MA degree in the same field. Since I wouldn't be changing fields, would this count as my one and only change of course?

A—Yes. The reason is your original objective was an AB degree. You now are changing your objective to an MA degree. This would count as a change of course, even though you do not change your field of study.

Q—My employer is transferring me to another city. I want to sell my GI house and get my GI loan loan eligibility restored. What evidence do I have to submit to VA?

A—To restore your eligibility, you should write VA a letter setting forth all details of your move. Include your certificate of eligibility if you received one. If not, your discharge certificate. Include a statement from your employer, giving reasons for your move. You also must relieve VA of liability on the original loan, either by paying the loan in full yourself or the new purchaser must do so.

Q—May a student under the War Orphans Education Program take a series of unrelated courses in college?

A—No. Under the law, he must establish a goal and must take a program of education leading to the goal. Unrelated courses leading to no goal would not be permitted.

Happiness . . . Her Summer Target!
CAMP COURAGE THE EASTER SEAL CAMP

THIS WEEK

—In Washington

With Clinton Davidson

The hardest man in Washington to discourage is, without doubt, Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. A week seldom passes that he does not reject demands that he resign.

If harsh criticism—and he has had an abundance of it—gets under his skin he shows no sign of it. Eggs and verbal brick-bats have rained down on him for more than five years.

Since January, 1953, he has spent almost $20 billion on programs authorized by Congress to help farmers. Yet poll after poll has shown that most farmers want him to quit.

Benson, himself, disputes those polls. He would rather rely on the mail he receives which, he says, runs more than three to one in favor of his staying. How many of those are from farmers he doesn't say.

The Congressional Record has printed more than 100 speeches by congressmen demanding that Benson resign. At least a dozen delegations from Congress have faced the Secretary and insisted that he get out.

Recently one such delegation told him that if he didn't go soon he would cause 25 to 30 Midwestern Republican congressmen to be defeated in November. Benson told them, in effect, that he didn't believe it.

Some of those most active in the "dump Benson" campaign claim that Vice-President Nixon is one of their leaders. Nixon, however, has neither confirmed nor denied the reports. Benson says they are not true.

In the Senate and House Agriculture Committees, where farm legislation must originate, Republican and Democratic members have been almost equally critical of Benson and his farm policies. They've made life miserable for him in the hope [illegible] tion leaders in Washington has ranged from lukewarm to openly hostile. Generally, the Farm Bureau has been less critical than the others.

Benson, on the other hand, is not without staunch supporters. Most important of those is President Dwight D. Eisenhower. He not only refuses to ask Benson to resign, but publicly endorses his farm policies and insists that he stay.

For almost every speech in Congress demanding that Benson resign, there has been another praising him. Principally, these have been made by congressmen from Northeastern states and from predominantly urban districts, but he also has supporters from farm states.

The enigma of it all is that Benson is generally well liked, personally. He is respected for his unshakable devotion to his convictions. A deeply religious man, he simply turns the other check to his assailants.

He has said repeatedly that he does not seek personal popularity. The fact that his program does not appeal to many farmers, or to Congress, does not discourage him. Only one thing counts: His firm conviction that what he stands for is right and in the long-time best interest of farmers and the nation.

REPORT from the GOVERNOR

by Orville L. Freeman

Headlines last week reporting on increasing numbers of unemployed startled many Americans who had, until then, given little thought to matters relating to "recession". Public officials and leaders in our economic life began to discuss causes and cures. It might better be said that they began to discuss these subjects publicly, for many of us have been concerned for some time about what should be done to restore and maintain a high level of prosperity.

Not a Sudden Change

The economic downturn that has come to be called a "recession" was not a sudden development. Many trends during 1957 indicated what was ahead. For example; in January, 1957, Minnesota had about 20,000 more people employed than it had in January 1956. This showed a normal and healthy increase. But throughout the year of 1957 this rate of increase slowed down. By January 1958 employment in Minnesota was only slightly above that of the same month in the previous year. And by February, 1958, the number of employed in Minnesota was 5,000 less than in February, 1957.

Minnesota's Relative Position

Nevertheless, Minnesota is much better off than many other areas. Reports at the beginning of the new year showed that not only had the average income of Minnesotans increased over the previous year, but it had increased more than that in any other state except Florida and Arizona. In improved per capita income, then, we were third highest in the nation.

Minnesota has also had a new period of growth in industry. New enterprises are becoming successful, and increased vigor is noted in older, established fields. We are looking forward and planning for greater progress in the coming years.

Tied to Entire Nation

We must always recognize, however, that no matter how must we may do to improve economic conditions within our own state, our economic life is in nearly every respect tied to that of the entire nation. The policies and programs that influence economic conditions are national in their scope. An individual state can do some things to improve its own position, but measures to increase employment, to enhance farm income, and to stimulate business expansion must be nationwide if they are to really meet the problem. The tight credit policy and higher interest rates that were imposed nationally, for example, had serious effects on economic life in all parts of our nation.

National Measures

We must therefore work for national measures for improvement. For many years I have urged on the national government a sound program to improve farm incomes—for our farmers have been suffering from an economic recession for many years. Some time ago I joined with other governors in appealing to the national government for measures to improve our economic position in other areas. And here in Minnesota we have taken action to stimulate economic growth.

State Action

We have adopted measures over the past few years here in Minnesota to launch the greatest state building program in our history. Many of these building projects are now getting under way, and we are doing everything possible to speed them up. We are providing increased employment, particularly through our conservation and highway departments, wherever we can. We are now calling for the planning of a sound program of public works, to provide employment on worth-while construction.

I am confident that we can look forward to greater prosperity than ever before,—but confidence must not blind us to the need for action in behalf of those who are seeking work today. We can achieve this prosperity, not by saying that it is around the corner, but by abandoning any idea of complacency, and by determining to make every effort to improve conditions. We have the resources and the ability to do this,—we must make sure they are used effectively and in the right direction.

SENATOR THYE Reports TO YOU

from the UNITED STATES SENATE

Congressman Quie

Albert Quie, the newest member of our Minnesota delegation in Congress, arrived in Washington a few days ago and was sworn in as the Representative from the First District. Joining with me to greet him at Washington's National Airport were Congressman Walter H. Judd, Congressman H. Carl Andersen, and other friends and acquaintances. We want to extend to Albert Quie our best wishes in his new and challenging job.

New Defense Contracts

Minnesota again received new proof of a growing potential in the field of national defense work. The Navy just awarded contracts to two Minnesota companies — Northern Ordnance Company and General Mills. Northern Ordnance received a contract to manufacture missile launching systems in the amount of $14,182,000, while General Mills will manufacture classified aircraft weapons in the amount of $6,350,000. The awards once again demonstrate the vital part which Minnesota industry has played and will play in the development of defense weapons including the new missiles. It is a tribute to Minnesota's group of highly-skilled workers and to the ability of Minnesota's companies to accept challenges in the highly-specialized field of modern weapons.

Gun Regulations

The Alcohol Tax Unit of the Internal Revenue Service has dropped several proposals concerning firearms—proposals which stirred up widespread protests last year. The Tax Unit wanted to require all buyers of weapons and ammunition to give their signatures at the time of purchase. Weapons would include revolvers, pistols and high-powered rifles. Dealers would have been required to preserve the signatures. Also they asked that all shotguns and small rifles be stamped with the maker's name and serial number. In hearings held last August, I protested against such regulations, feeling they were unnecessary and time-consuming.

Summerfield Reports

Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield has reported to me as follows concerning proposed post office construction: "You may be sure that Minnesota will receive every consideration in the formulation of any modernization program of the postal plant that may be approved by the Congress."

Two Harbors Post Office

In line with steps being made in this direction, I have notice that a new post office building for Two Harbors is now approved under the provisions of Public Law 519 (the Lease Purchase Act). Public advertisement has been made soliciting competitive bids for the construction and lease purchase of that building. Bids are scheduled to be opened in Washington on April 30.

Acreage Reserve

The sum of $250,000,000 has been authorized to be added to the acreage reserve program; the money will be used for 1958 contracts. This means hundreds of Minnesota farmers can now take part in the acreage reserve sign-ups. In my appeal to President Eisenhower on February 17, I stressed the fact that so many Minnesota producers were being shut out of the 1958 program because funds were not made available. I ask farmers to write to me if they have any difficulty in signing up with their ASC Committees.

"Sound Idea"—But—
Hap Wilson is a young fellow on our paper—and crazy about that little daughter of his. But like all of us he's learned that kids can present problems.
"Every night I have to read her the same story," he complained. "The most sugary one in the book—about Billy Bumblebee!" So I finally recorded the story on a tape recorder. Showed her how to play it whenever she wants.
"Know what she says? That it sounds fine but that she can't sit on the machine's lap!"
From where I sit, Hap had good intentions, but he has to understand his daughter's point of view, too. Many of us often make the same mistake. For instance, you may like tea, I prefer a glass of temperate beer. The important thing is that we both understand each other's point of view. There are two sides to every "story"!

Shootin' the Breeze

BY Mack Draper

Back on that everlasting topic of conversation, the weather, 1957 and 1958 will probably go down as freak in that respect. Despite all the rain of 1957 there was a bad fire hazard in the brush country all around until Friday's snow somewhat dampened matters.

To top it all off, tho, one area farmer discover he still had a good crop to harvest. Bud Molstad was out combining red clover last Tuesday and Wednesday and reported he got a fair yield. It's a good thing the Molstads decided to try a test round or two of the field with their combine . . . they had been burning off some meadowland and intended to burn the clover plot too, but the combine test proved this would have been a costly mistake!

To settle a local family argument we must report that a recent classified ad run in this paper DIDN'T concern a pair of glasses a certain lady here thinks her spouse lost. He tells us he just doesn't like to wear 'em, Ma'am!

Despite the fine winter we've had the local flying club's airplanes have spent most of the season hangared.

Why not take the Cruiser out for a little cross-country boys? You can keep it out as long as three days, you know!

Really, it's unfortunate more local people don't take advantage of the low-cost means of flying the club affords. You can belong to this, or any flying club, and fly a plane cheaper than owning your own. In most cases it actually is as cheap as driving your car, believe it or not, when you take trips by air.

Flying clubs have been the answer to many fellows' yen to fly who wouldn't be able to do so otherwise. Our local club is one of the earlier ones and has had a write-up in one national flying magazine. It is also one with exceptionally low rates for plane rental.

Travel by light airplane is faster than most people think, too. Even with the slowest of them it's possible to travel up to three times the distance an automobile can cover in a day.

I once made a leisurely cruise from Denver, Colo. to Grand Forks in less than seven and a half hours, in an old war-surplus job that cruised around 110 m.p.h., as an instance of this. The same trip by car at speeds of 80 or more took over 24 hrs. actual travel time.

Another fellow I know of took off from a North Dakota airport in a 65 h.p. light plane one morning. That evening he was in Texas—and his cruise was less than 100 m.p.h.!

That more people don't have an interest in flying is deplorable in a nation that's supposedly ahead of others in every respect. Small airports cost less money to build than roads—and the airlanes are far less crowded than the superhighways!

You're missing a lot if you don't fly.

By the way, I understand that Sherm Booen, who has a TV show about subjects aeronautical in Minneapolis, is coming up sometime this summer to take movies of, and interview our old friend, Delmar Hagen, Gatzke, about his trip from Pembina to St. Paul by ox cart, via the old Pembina Trail.

Booen will probably stop over here before going on to Delmar's farm. Too bad we folks around here can't see Sherm's TV show every Sunday evening.

Delmar, incidentally, says he'd like to trade his oxen, cart and all, for an airplane at the end of the trail in St. Paul. Know of any possible takers? It should give some aircraft maker lots of publicity if he'll trade with Delmar.

We hope Delmar can swing such a deal. SO LONG!

Rosalie Luoto and Wayne Chase Speak Vows in California

Rosalie Jan Luoto, daughter of Mrs. Olga Luoto of Sauk Centre, formerly of Middle River and Wayne Stephen Chase, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Chase of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania exchanged vows at a beautiful candlelight ceremony conducted by Reverend Kenneth Johnson in the First United Lutheran Church on Friday, Feb. 9th, 1958 in San Francisco, Calif.

The bride was dressed in a ballerina length white silk gown with a white lace bodice, bracelet length sleeves and bouffant skirt. A single Juliet veil caught in a seed pearl coronet completed her bridal costume. The brides' bouquet was accented by white orchids with cascading streams of satin ribbon and white carnations. The altar was banked with bouquets of carnations and white stocks. Before the ceremony Sylvia Luoto, sister of the bride, rendered several selections on the pipe organ and then began the familiar strains of Lohengren's wedding march as the bride proceeded down the aisle.

Mrs. Milton Belway, matron of honor, a cousin of the bride was gowned in beige satin with an overlay of lace and carried matching russet accessories. Her corsage was of white orchids. Mr. Milton Belway acted as best man. After the double ring ceremony some seventy-five relatives and friends gathered at the home of the Belways for the reception. Canapes, Hor d'ourves, finger-tip sandwiches and punch were served from the buffets adjoining the bridal table. The tiered wedding cake was surrounded by gardinias and maiden hair fern. The bride was formerly a student at the city college of San Francisco and the groom is presently employed in San Francisco where the young couple will make their home.

Pastures of Bluegrass. Timothy and Bluegrass can yield from each acre the same amount of total feed value as you would get from 5 tons of legume hay. All it takes to make this possible is proper fertilizing and pasture management. Evidence that this is true comes from the University of Minnesota's North Central School and Experiment station, Grand Rapids.

In a demonstration at the station last summer, research workers there kept a complete feed and milk production record on a 33-cow herd grazing on 10 acres of permanent grass pasture. It was 80 percent bluegrass and the rest was timothy and bromegrass. There were 10 1-acre plots. Two received no nitrogen. On other plots, researchers compared 50, 100, 200 and 300 pounds nitrogen per acre.

Cows grazed the area on a "ration-a-day" plan. When one field was grazed, the cows were moved to the next tallest pasture. The grazed field was clipped and station workers spread the manure droppings. Look at the results! Costs per pound of the total digestible nutrients (TDN) in the plot where 200 pounds nitrogen was added was 30-40 cents less than a farmer would pay for each 100 pounds of TDN in alfalfa brome hay or oat silage. And it was considerably lower than the TDN cost in corn grain or silage or 16-percent-protein dairy concentrate.

The 200-pound rate gave the best over-all yields. One acre receiving this rate provided all the grazing needed for the 33 cows for 13 days. The demonstration also showed, however, that high rates of [illegible] pasture pay off when proper management practices are followed. These include ration-a-day grazing, clipping ungrazed forage and spreading the droppings.

Season for Trapping Beaver Opens Mar. 22

The 1958 trapping regulations for the taking of beaver and otter were announced today in St. Paul by Conservation Commissioner George A. Selke.

In general, beaver may be trapped in that portion of the State north of Trunk Highway 210, beginning at Breckenridge and terminating at Duluth, from March 22 to May 5, both dates inclusive. South of this line, beaver may be trapped from March 22 to April 28.

Otter may also be trapped in that portion of the State north of Trunk Highway 210 from April 14 to April 28, both dates inclusive.

The following state-owned game refuges and public hunting grounds will be closed to the trapping of beaver and otter: Carlos Avery (sanctuary portion only), Mille Lacs, Roseau River (sanctuary portion only) and Hubble Pond.

Beaver may be trapped within the Mud Lake, Upper Mississippi and Tamerack National Wildlife Refuges, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Not more than ten (10) beaver, and not more than three (3) otter may be taken by any one licensed trapper during said seasons.

It is unlawful to set or tend any trap set for wild animals between the hours of 6:00 p.m. and 6:00 a.m.

In announcing the regulations, Commissioner Selke pointed out that no single season regulation will answer the complex harvesting problems that exist.

Said Selke, "Making intelligent trapping regulations becomes even more difficult when the following facts are considered: (1) Prices paid for beaver pelts remain low. (2) Many States, including Minnesota and Canada have surplus beaver populations in remote areas but poor prices keep trappers out. (3) Beaver continue nuisance activities, such as flooding roads and plugging culverts in many areas. (4) Beaver continue to be a problem in farming counties where they plug drainage ditches and cut valuable trees. (5) Beaver are extremely helpful in maintaining water levels on heavily traveled canoe routes in the wilderness areas. (6). Reasonable numbers of beaver should be maintained on North Shore trout streams, but beneficial effects will diminish if they become too abundant. (7) In some of the low-lying pulp producing counties in the north, the timber destroyed by flooding by beaver is worth more than the beaver or its pelt. (8) Beaver create many fine waterfowl and furbearer areas, and are a ready source of water in fighting forest fires."

"It would appear," added Selke, "that with high beaver populations, increasing nuisance complaints, low fur prices, lack of trapper interest and a potential for die-off, in some trouble areas of the northwest, consideration may have to be given to other ways of reducing surplus beaver populations causing damage following the close of the regular trapping season."

"In addition," concluded Selke, "landowners suffering substantiated damage as a result of beaver activity may be eligible to receive a special trapping permit to alleviate the situation."

Ford Bell, chairman of the board of directors of Red Owl Stores, last week announced the election of Alf L. Bergerud as president. He succeeds Glenn R. Grife who has been elected vice chairman of the board.

Bergerud became genral counsel of Red Owl in 1934, was elected vice president in 1943, and has had charge of the Red Owl real estate, construction, labor relations, public relations, and legal departments.

Under his direction Red Owl launched an accelerated expansion program in 1955 which has resulted in 75 new Red Owl stores throughout the Northwest, 25 of which have been erected in the past year.

Withholding Tax Opposed by State Taxpayers Group

Says It Is Self-employed, Not Salaried People, Who Are Guilty of Tax Evasion

While outstanding economists and leaders of both political parties in Washington are considering a substantial cut in federal income taxes to bolster our economy, advocates of state income tax withholding for Minnesota are still proceeding with their campaign for legislative adoption of their plan, Charles P. Stone, General Counsel of the Minnesota Taxpayers Association, said today.

"Thus, we have the anomaly," Mr. Stone stated, "of our Minnesota taxpayers facing the prospect of being required to pay more state income taxes (by reason of the doubling-up payment feature inherent in any withholding plan), thereby reducing their purchasing power to that extent, at a time when a substantial reduction in federal income taxes is being contemplated for the very purpose of increasing that purchasing power."

"The opposition of the Minnesota Taxpayers Association to the adoption of withholding in Minnesota has not lessened since the 1957 session," Mr. Stone continued. "The insistence of its advocates on only a nominal forgiveness of 15 percent of the first year's tax (we have yet to observe any willingness to make a greater concession), thus requiring our taxpayers to pay almost 3 years' taxes in 2 years, is only one of many reasons for our continued resistance to the installation of a withholding system in our State.

Others include: (1) it will set the stage for gradual and steady increases in our individual income taxes, and provide a ready-made vehicle for the financing of ambitious spending proposals without seeming to cost the taxpayer any money; (2) the cost (both to the State and to the employers) of installing and maintaining such a system is too great in relation to the additional revenue which could be collected; and (3) if some of our salaried individuals need an easier and more convenient method of paying their state income taxes, the obvious answer is to return to the quarterly installment payment system rather than to install a costly withholding system."

"The Taxpayers Association repeatedly has pointed out," Mr. Stone concluded, "that if there is any substantial evasion of the Minnesota income tax, it is by the self-employed rather than the salaried individuals; that withholding will not catch these non-filers; and that comparison of state and federal income tax returns is the answer to this problem."

VA Starts Pilot Study of Claims

Being Made at Request of Veterans' Organizations

Veterans Administration today announced a new pilot study now is under way to review veterans' claims that were disallowed after World War II.

Summer G. Whittier, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, said the pilot study is the converse of the current review of compensation and pension claims that were allowed over the same period.

Mr. Whittier said the pilot study is being conducted in the Veterans Administration Regional Offices at Brooklyn, New York; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Togus, Maine; Wichita, Kansas; Seattle, Washington; Columbia, South Carolina, and Lubbock, Texas.

Through this study, Veterans Administration will come up with one of three conclusions:

1. A review of disallowed claims would not be worth the effort; or, 2. A further extension of the pilot study would be in order; or, 3. A full-scale nationwide review of disallowed claims is necessary.

Mr. Whittier ordered the pilot study at the request of veterans' organizations which believe Veterans Administration may have errored in disallowing some of the claims.

MINNESOTA CENTENNIAL STORY

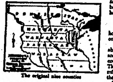
CHAPTER TWELVE

Cutting, Naming Counties

✯ The county was an especially important unit in a new and growing frontier commonwealth. People needed records of the ownership of property, an authority to levy and collect taxes, a board to lay out and mend the frontier trails and roads, a sheriff to maintain order and courts to settle disputes.

A Vast County

The first county government to rule over a few of the first comers to what is now Minnesota was that of Crawford county of the territory and state of Michigan. This great county, laid out before the days of the surveyor, had irregular boundaries. The east limits were a line drawn north and south through the middle of the portage between the Fox and Wisconsin rivers. The west boundary was the Mississippi and the north boundary was the irregular beginnings of the streams which flowed northward into Lake Superior.



The original nine counties

Later Crawford county, Michigan, became part of Wisconsin. In 1841 part of the western lands of this county were given up to create St. Croix county of Wisconsin. Joseph R. Brown was the principal advocate of this county. His claim became the site of the county seat of Dakotah which was later to become a part of Stillwater.

The Territorial Counties

One of the first acts of the first Minnesota territorial legislature was to create nine counties. Three, Benton, Ramsey and Washington, were comparatively small. Two to the north were immense and four stretched from the Mississippi to the Missouri rivers.

Measured by the Horse

Minnesota now has 87 counties. They average a little less than a thousand square miles in area. This would mean a typical county might be about thirty miles wide and of about the same length.

Some citizens say that Minnesota has too many counties and courthouses. That may well be true in these days of the automobile. However, the counties of Minnesota were laid out in the days of the horse and the slower moving ox. The purpose was to make the counties of a size whereby citizens might go to a centrally located county seat and return to their homesteads in a single day. By starting early the citizen might go to the capital city of the county, attend court, ask for roads, pay his taxes, visit the bank, buy some tea and tobacco and be home late at night.

A typical county seat in the 1850's

Variation in Counties

Most of the counties first built a courthouse costing about $2000 and a jail costing $500.

While most of the counties were of about the same size some were smaller and some larger. Minnesota's smallest county is Ramsey with 160 square miles. The largest is St. Louis with 6281 square miles. This is the largest county east of the Mississippi river in the United States.

The most populous county is Hennepin with 677,000 inhabitants at the last census. The county with the smallest number of people is Cook with 2900.

The history of many counties has been enlivened by contests for the county seat. Records have been carried off in the dark and even buildings moved away by night. Sometimes elections were held in which there were more votes than voters.

Naming the Counties

Several Minnesota counties have been named after presidents of the United States. These are Washington, Lincoln, Jackson, Polk, Fillmore and Grant counties.

A typical jail

Other counties were named because of some outstanding physical features. Such are Pine, Lake, Clearwater and Big Stone counties. Cottonwood honored the prevailing big tree of the prairie. Lake of the Woods county was named after a great body of water with thousands of islands. St. Louis county was named for the river which, in turn, was named for a saint. Another county was named from a rock that could be cut with a knife, Pipestone. Blue Earth county received its name from the color of some of its soil.

Other counties took their names from the men who may have first seen their lands. Father Hennepin would be gratified if he could know that the county with the most people would bear his name. He liked publicity. Beltrami had big ideas and his name was laid on a large area. Lewis Cass explored the area named for him. Carver was an Englishman who wrote one of the first books about Minnesota. Le Sueur spent a winter in the Minnesota Valley eating unsalted bison and digging the blue earth for its supposed richness in copper.

The Indian Names

The first people left their names for a state and some of its counties. Winona was lovelorn and cast herself from a high cliff. Anoka connotes an industrious and peaceful Indian worker. The Isanti were an early tribe on Mille Lacs. Itasca was named for the lake of origin of a great river. Kandiyohi was a good place to spear red horse in the spring. Koochiching was named for the falls on the Rainy river. Mahnomen signified grain and is the county with the White Earth reservation where the Chippewa were to farm. Wabasha was a very wily Sioux.

Honoring the Pioneers

Joseph R. Brown left his name in many places in Minnesota. Martin McLeod came down from the Red River country and served as a lawmaker. James M. Goodhue was Minnesota's first publisher. Norman Kittson traded out of Pembina. Several prominent Faribaults lived and worked in Minnesota. Aitkin was a trader at Sandy lake and Allan Morrison another trader farther down the river. Edmund Rice was prominent in many ways.

The name of many counties constitute living monuments to great men of Minnesota.

This Chapter of the Minnesota Story Is Sponsored By LAND O' LAKES CREAMERIES, INC., Thief River Falls Branch

Land O' Lakes Creameries Inc. was a child of adversity. It come into being in the period that followed World War I, when the price of butter in New York dropped from 76 cents to 29 cents. It was in desperation that the dairy farmers of Minnesota then organized to save their industry.

The Thief River Falls branch of Land O' Lakes Creameries Inc. was a child of misfortune. In 1925 a group of farmers of this area had organized the Thief River Poultry Association in an effort to obtain a better market for turkeys, poultry and eggs. They sold their products through a state cooperative, the Minnesota Poultry and Egg Association.

In 1928 they shipped a dozen carloads of turkeys to this association on a pool basis, but the creditors of the state organization moved in before the proceeds of the sale of the turkeys could be distributed. The Thief River Association was automatically busted, owing its patrons about $35,000. That was a sad winter hereabouts.

But the farmers weren't licked. They formed another association. Stuart McLeod was a director of Land O' Lakes at that time and John Brandt was approached on the possibility of that organization acting as sales agent for the local group. There were negotiations. The Thief River Falls Commercial Club was invited to participate.

The result was that Land O' Lakes agreed to build a poultry plant here providing the community would invest $45,000 in first mortgage bonds. The Commercial Club took over the job of selling the bonds and $45,000 was a lot of money at that time. But the response was excellent. The bonds were sold. Construction on the poultry plant was started in August of 1929. The new plant went into operation on November 9. That was a day of celebration in Thief River Falls.

Now, thirty years after that discouraging experience with a bankrupt poultry association, and resulting directly from what at that time was a community disaster, we have the Thief River Falls branch of Land O' Lakes, in several respects the biggest industry in our city and the largest Land O' Lakes operation outside of the headquarters plant in Minneapolis.

Since it started operating in the fall of 1929 the Thief River Falls branch has enjoyed a steady growth and its operations have been greatly extended. It's various activities are organized into four departments. Eggs and turkeys are the responsibility of Leonard Anderson, and the greatly expanded facilities that now are being provided at the "south plant" for the processing of turkeys indicates that the organization looks to this area as one of its main sources of turkey meat.

The hatchery department has been expanded several times since the original plant was built and it now operates exclusively as a producer of turkey poults. A hatchery at Grand Forks, once a Bridgeman operation, has been moved here, and the combined facilities are now housed in the building formerly occupied by the Thief River Grocery. With the Grand Forks hatchery operation the services of Al Wilcox were also acquired, and he now not only directs the present hatchery business but also is the manager of the general offices of the Thief River Falls branch.

In 1938 Land O' Lakes entered the seed business on a small scale and this operation has expanded into a big Feed, Seed and Fertilizer department, with Harry Peterson serving as manager and assisted by Bud Schuster in charge of the seed business. In 1934 the Peavy elevators on the east side of the Soo tracks were acquired and two years later a large warehouse was added to this plant. The size of this operation is indicated by the fact that there now are 15 rush season the plant operates around the clock. More than 40 varieties of feeds are manufactured as mashes, pellets and granules. Into these feeds are blended the field crops produced in this area, including a large volume of alfalfa meal, and they are distributed to the livestock and poultry producers of a large area in northwestern Minnesota and northeastern North Dakota.

A department of milk and ice cream, managed by Elmer Sandberg, is becoming increasingly important. Milk processing and packaging has been concentrated in the Bridgement plant, a division of Land O' Lakes, but the procurement of the grade A product is the problem of Mr. Sandberg's department. Separate distribution systems serve the city and a large area of Minnesota and North Dakota.

Grade A milke production is a comparatively new development in this area but good progress is being made and it is hope that a limited market can be further expended. Land O' Lakes is following the universal trend toward larger and more efficient manufacturing operations and the ice cream manufacturing operation is now in a state of reorganization.

In terms of manufacturing and processing, Land O' Lakes is the largest business operation in Thief River Falls. It is near the top as a wholesaler. In terms of total payroll it is second only to the Soo Line.

The company has more than 90 people on its local payroll regularly and in the busy seasons this total is doubled. In terms of dollars the payroll totals about $450,000 annually.

The Thief River Falls branch operates a fleet of 32 trucks, serving a great variety of needs from house-to-house milk deliveries to big semis hauling maximum loads. Some refrigerated units represent a big investment.

Most of the trucks carry a pay-load both ways. The feed department provides tonnage for several of them that leave on regular schedules and that return loaded with butter and eggs picked up at various creameries and stations.

First manager of the Thief River Falls branch wwas B. O. Norby, long time resident of this city. He was active in the organization of the ill-fated Thief River Poultry Association and did a tremendous job of reorganizing the members and building a new association thru wwhich they eventually recovered all that they had lost.

Stuart McLeod, present general manager of the Thief River Falls branch, has served in that capacity since 1942. Prior to that he was district chairman and Land O' Lakes director, an office to which he was elected in 1926. And before 1926, as a Guernsey milker from Goodridge, he was one of the young fellows who made speeches at creamery meetings urging that such an organization as Land O' Lakes should be formed. He is one of the pioneers.

And many folks hereabouts will agree that the bankruptcy of the old Thief River Poultry Association can now be looked back upon as a fortunate failure. The Thief River Falls branch of Land O' Lakes Creameries was a child of misfortune. Fortunately the parentage was honorable and adversity was not a permanent handicap to the sturdy youngster.

400 People Assemble in Oklee Wednesday for 1958 Farm Forum

Over 400 people participated in the Farm Forum held at Oklee high school Wednesday. Much interest was expressed in the material presented by economists and an active pannel discussion highlighted the forum in the afternoon.

Dr. Leo Day, economist, University of Minnesota, the first speaker of the morning indicated the changes in farm size from 1940 to 1954. In Minnesota the number of farms decreased by 32,000 from 197,000 in 1940 to 165,000 in 1954. Although farm numbers dropped they were bought by neighbors who expanded the size of their operation to buy modern conveniences of life and to pay for mechanization. The drop in farm numbers does not indicate any major move to corporate farming, he said.

Day stated farmers now take of twice as many livestock, and twice as many crop acres, per farm worker in comparison to labor requirements in 1940. He also pointed out that farm jobs have moved to town. The churning of butter, baking of bread, and cutting of meat is now done in towns and the farm wife purchases them finished products. Some farm labor has followed this movement of farm jobs to the [illegible].

Dr. Elmer Learn, economist University of Minnesota, showed that the farm production was 60% of the national product in 1910. In 1957 it amounts to 5 percent. This 5 percent of the nations productivity is highly important and the economic health of the farmer is of concern to all. He also pointed out that industrial prosperity in recent years was not shared by agriculture largely because of failure to bring production in line with demand.

Dr. Paul Quintus, deputy administrator, U.S.D.A., Washington pointed out that give away programs in under-developed countries were not easily instituted or administered. Giveaways affect economies of our exporting allies; they must fit local conditions and conform to desires of the governments in the underdeveloped countries; caution also needs to be incerzized to avoid black marketing of products given to countries. Foreign policy decisions also affect trade policies, Quintus stated. Many intricate and delicate details need to be considered in foreign trade.

Road Load Limits Are Now In Effect

County highway engineer Joseph Seidel announces that statutory four-ton per axle load limits are effective on all county roads as of today and that they will remain in effect until May 15, subject to extension if necessary. Roads are now being posted, he says.

Will Call for Bids on River Valley Road

Widening to Cost $40,000, Engineer Seidel Estimates

A resolution requesting the state commissioner of highways to call for bids for the widening of the county-state road No. 1 from River Valley west 7½ miles will be requested by the county board, according to Joseph Seidel, county engineer. The proposed letting date is May 6. Estimated cost of the improvement is $40,000, which would increase the grade from 21 to 31 feet, and make it ready for a sand lift and bituminous treatment.

Construction now provided for or contemplated in that area will mean high standard, surfaced roads from trunk highway 59 to River Valley with connecting links south to Oklee and north to trunk highway No. 1 through Highlanding.

Mr. Seidel states that the county probably will also ask for bids for a temporary gravel coat on the Highlanding road that has been let for construction this year. Estimated cost is $18,000.

The widening of the road to the River Valley bridge from the west will be on the north side of the road, for which additional right-of-way has been secured. The surface of the present road along this stretch will not be damaged in this widening process, Mr. Seidel states.

Many Routine Matters Acted On By Council

Firm Power Boosted 600 Kilowatts; Will Supply Present Needs

Routine business was conducted at the regular monthly meeting of the city council Tuesday evening, during which there was a notable lack of weighty problems.

The council approved a letter of agreement with the U. S. Department of Interior that gives the city a substantial increase in firm Bureau power. Under this agreement as of March 8, according to Morris Owen, superintendent, this will make it possible to meet all of the city's power needs until the end of August, without operating the diesel engines, providing present favorable water conditions continue. The water wheels are now generating more than 500 kilowatts, he says. Another increase in the firm power contract with the government may be expected by January 1 according to city attorney Robert Wurst.

It was agreed that two city fireman should attend a fire school at the University of Minnesota April 29-May 2 and the council also voted to send a city representative to a state school for clerks and finance officers March 26 through 28.

Use of the downstairs meeting room by the CAP cadets Thursday evenings was approved, subject to clearance of city clerk's office.

A $1000 house movers bond to William Reese was approved but lack of signatures resulted in tabling of the Times' performance bond temporarily. Bids for city depositories were also postponed for later action.

In the hearing of the Ostrud's second addition water and sewer project the council decided to table the project for further study. The question evolves around whether to proceed with the entire project this year or to furnish water and sewer services to the new Mission Covenant church, to be built later this year, only, for the time being. One objector appeared at the hearing.

The salary of R. G. Mabey, city assessor, was set at $335 per month, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1958, by unanimous vote of the council.

Wyandotte Man Drowns in Well on Farm on Tuesday

J. Arthur Larson's Body Recovered from Well Wednesday Afternoon

A Pennington county farmer who had been missing approximately 22 hours since Tuesday evening was found Wednesday about 5 p.m. in a well on his farm in Wyandotte township, about 11 miles southeast of Thief River Falls, Sheriff Charles Richards reported today.

The body of J. Arthur Larson, about 53, was recovered from the well shortly after it was found and brought to Thief River Falls where an autopsy was performed this morning by Dr. George B. Martin, county coroner.

Larson lived on the farm with his father, J. R. Larson, 88. He had left the house late Tuesday and when he did not return, a search was started by other relatives living nearby. Richards was called Wednesday afternoon after they believed they had located Larson in the well.

Authorities believe Larson had been drawing water from the well when he suffered a heart attack or dizzy spell. However, the cause of death was established as having been drowning, although a post-mortem examination was made to see if such an attack or dizzy spell did precede his falling into the well. The report from the examination was not back this morning so details are not known.

Larson was known to have a history of heart trouble and dizzy spells which led to the belief that either may have been the underlying cause of his falling into the well.

Because we're conveniently located and open long hours, we're a handy place to pick up change or a bottle of aspirin. Warns About Fire Hazard In Area

By Mrs. Harry McLean, Grygla Correspondent

John McMartin, Soil Conservationist, urges people in the Grygla-Gatzke area to be careful of fires: Grass is tinder dry and burns almost explosively and because of the large amount of land in the soil bank and the small amount of fall plowing; fires can and are running wild throughout the area.

The fires are burning up tons of valuable organic matter, McMartin points out. "Our soils are not naturally very high in organic matter" McMartin said "and farmers must work hard to maintain high organic content of the soil". It seems rather foolish to wantonly destroy the basis for a profitable agriculture.

Fires also burn up property. A few buildings are burned up but probably the largest loss is in fences and utility poles.

Fires destroy trees. Some of the woods in the area are beginning to come back naturally to young spruce, a potentially valuable crop. Fires sweeping through those woods will kill them off and delay for many years the time those woods will have any value. Even the aspen woods may have value, if pulp prices go high enough, but fire scarred and diseased they are worthless.

Fires destroy wildlife and wildlife habitat. Almost everyone likes to hunt and hunting will be poor if fires destroy the food and living quarters of our wildlife.

Fire waste time. The Grygla Fire Department has been out on four fire calls this past week representing many man hours of time. If this time were not voluntarily given, it would represent a considerable cost to the fire setter.

"It would be best," McMartin said, "to not burn at all, but if you must burn be sure you confine it to the area you want to burned. Have enough man-power, wet sacks, and other fire fighting equipment to control the burning and be sure to put out all fires when through burning."

Ewings Apply for Rotary Sponsored Exchange Student

Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Ewing of this city have offered to provide a home for next year's Rotary Club sponsored foreign exchange student and in making application have expressed a preference for a girl from either Greece, Turkey or Pakistan. This will be the fourth exchange student to be a guest in Thief River Falls. The present and two previous students, all boys, have been guests at the R. M. Barzen home.

First of the three was Kiyoshi Tanabe of Japan, and in a letter to Mr. and Mrs. Barzen received last week he stated that he is acting as treasurer for the 70 Japanese students who have returned to their native land after spending one year in this country. This group is now giving direction to the Japanese guest program and they are busy raising funds, finding homes and making general arrangements for the American young people who will visit them this summer.

The exchange is making great strides thruout the country and thruout the world. There now are 1,039 foreign students from 29 countries in the United States and year by year the number has about doubled.

Kiyoshi was with the first group that came from Japan and the present guest, John Sutisna, is a member of the first group to come from Indonesia. Gilson deSouza who was here last year, was with the first group from Brazil.

Minimum Tillage Trials Reported

A number of Minnesota farmers learned again last summer that corn yields aren't reduced a bit by planting on undisked and undragged soil.

These farmers, 18 in all, conducted carefully-planned field trials on "minimum tillage," in cooperation with soils scientists at the University of Minnesota.

"Minimum tillage" means working the soil as little as possible. It eliminates most or all of the disking and drag harrowing before planting corn.

Curtis Overdahl, extension soils specialist, and George Blake, soil scientist, say that 12 farmers had greater yields from minimum tillage and six had lower yields, in comparison with fields where conventional tilling practices were used. In most cases, though, the differences either way were too small to be important.

On the average, yields were 2-5 bushels per acre greater from minimum tillage.

Minimum tillage helps avoid much of the excess soil compaction—and as a consequence, poor soil structure—that often results from overworking soil. Other advantages are less erosion, more water "trapped" in the soil for later use, less weed growth in the loose soil between the rows and less cultivation. The first cultivation can be delayed until corn is 6-8 inches tall.

Trees Can Be A Crop For Future

Under the 1958 Conservation Reserve, Minnesota farmers can get some special help in planting trees—an important "crop for the future."

The sign-up period for this program is open until April 15.

Marvin Smith, extension forester at the University of Minnesota, points out that trees can bring a good income after they get started and the 10-year Conservation Reserve contracts have run out.

This is one crop which never has been and likely never will be in surplus. The U. S. Department of Agriculture expects a 25 to 40 percent greater need for trees by 1975.

Land which is either too poor, to steep or otherwise unsuited for farm crops can yield a good return if planted to trees. Farmers and other land owners interested in starting a timber crop on such land can get in touch with the county agent or local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

From the county extension office, you can get general advice on local markets for forest products and about State and Federal programs for financial and technical aid to tree planters. ASC committees will explain the terms of the Conservation Reserve and the Agricultural Conservation program.

Judging Starts in Mental Health Poster Contest

Students of Lincoln High School of Thief River Falls submitted posters last week for the state-wide mental health poster contest, sponsored in the state's high schools by the department of public welfare, the department of health, and the Minnesota Association for Mental Health.

Posters on the theme "Mental Health is our Business" are being judged by a committee headed by Herman Meier, Bagley art instructor. Others serving on the committee are Mrs. Ada McAllister, superintendent of the Clearwater County memorial hospital, and David Lohn, executive secretary of the Clearwater County welfare board.

Winners selected will be announced in about two weeks. First, second, and third place winners and students given honorable mention will receive certificates, and their posters will be forwarded to a judging committee for the Northern region of the state, where local winners will compete with students from 21 other schools for regional honors. The school of the first place regional winner will be awarded an engraved cup.

Regional awards will be announced April 15, and final state-wide winners will be selected during Mental Health Week, April 27-May 3.

This Area Escapes Heavy Snowfall

Cool Temperatures Rule; Range from 11 up to 37

Weather in northwest Minnesota has been a very dull affair the past 10 days, neither winter nor spring, nor wet nor dry. Cooler than normal temperatures were the rule but the region still has managed to miss most of the bad weather that continues to plague the eastern U. S.

While upper midwest residents bask in this relatively mild weather, heavy snows hit Baltimore and New York, with the current bad weather extending from the mid-Atlantic states to New England.

Temperatures here since March 10 ranged from a high of 37 Tuesday, March 11, to a low of 11 this morning. Skies have been mostly cloudy with intermittent light snow, although not enough to measure has fallen at any one time. There has been little day-to-day variation during the entire reporting period.

The KTRF forecast calls for more of the same, at least through Saturday. The current weather is the result of a high pressure ridge which extends from central Canada through the U. S. and is staying put while two low pressure troughs on either side of the ridge also show little movement.

It will be mostly cloudy with little temperature change and the likelihood of scattered snow flurries through today. Little change is expected Saturday. Highs today will be in the thirties and the low tonight is expected to be 10-15. Light winds will prevail.

Few Offenders in Municipal Court

Monday's municipal court session here was a quiet affair, a few offenders faced Judge H. O. Chommie and were given fines or jail sentences.

Two cases were brought to court by Sheriff Charles Richards. Frank Rohrer, Goodridge, pleaded guilty to a charge of petit larceny and was sentenced to 30 days in jail, sentence suspended.

Nick Fast, Warroad, pleaded guilty to careless driving and drew a $10 fine, plus court costs.

Two city police cases were cases were those of Donald E. Molskness, city, failure to display 1958 car license, fined $5, and Janet R. Leslie, city, improper U turn, also fined $5. Both pleaded guilty to the charges against them.

In justice court Monday at Goodridge, before J. P. David M. Brown, Melvin Stenberg, Grygla, pleaded guilty to a careless driving charge and was fined $10 plus $8 costs. Stenberg was brought before the court by Goodridge Police Constable Herman Sturre.

Grade Labels Are Needed for Honey

Commissioner Explains New State Requirement

Commissioner of Agriculture Byron G. Allen today called attention to the fact that all honey now offered for retail sale in Minnesota must bear grade labeling in accordance with industry approved state regulations which became effective September 23, 1957.

"We have experienced some difficulty in launching the new program, but the greater part of the industry is already following the new regulations," Allen said.

"In addition to the name and address of the packer or distributor and the net weight of the product, the label must be imprinted with one of the Minnesota honey grades which are Minnesota Grade AA Premium; Minnesota Grade A Fancy; Minnesota Grade B Choice; and Minnesota Grade C Standard."

Mr. Allen added, "This requirement is in line with grade and quality labeling procedures in other food commodity fields such as milk and other dairy products, eggs, poultry and meat, canned goods, potatoes and vegetables. Consumers need these grading guides to make their selections at the retail level. Farmer producers need grading and labeling programs if they are to be paid for their quality product."

Exports Important to Farmers

Abundant farm production resulting from resulting from increased technology has made exports more important than ever before, a Farm Forum audience at Oklee was told Wednesday by Paul E. Quintus, deputy assistant administrator of the Foreign Agricultural Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Farmers of Minnesota and of every state have an important stake in maintaining a high level of exports, said the official of the USDA foreign market promotion acres—3 times the cropland of Minnesota—went abroad. He said that "one can only shudder" at the bad effect on U. S. farm income if these products had had to compete on the domestic market.

Exports last year absorbed more than half of U. S. wheat, cotton, and rice production and accounted for almost one-half of tallow, one-third of soybean, one-fourth of tobacco, and one-fifth of U. S. lard production.

"Some of these items are not from Minnesota," Mr. Quintus said. "But all farmers have a direct stake in all exports. Acres compete with one another no matter where they are. Any loss in exports forces producers of the export crop to switch to production for the home market."

The Foreign Agricultural Service official said that U. S. agricultural exports have been expanding for the past 4 years, stimulated by aggressive marketing efforts by private trade and the U. S. Department of Agriculture. In 1957 the export total reached a record high valuation of $4.7 billion. Emphasis won on dollar sales. About 60 percent of the total sold for dollars—the second highest dollar volume in history.

Quintus explained also how exports are made under special government programs such as Title I of Public Law 480. Title I provides authority to sell agricultural surpluses for foreign currencies to countries short of dollar exchange.

These currencies are then used for foreign economic development projects and to pay U. S. expenses and finance U. S. programs abroad. He described the constant efforts of the Department's agricultural attaches and other officials to achieve a lowering of foreign barriers to U. S. farm products through direct negotiation with foreign officials; through international trade agreements providing for lowering of tariffs for mutual benefit of the United States and other countries, and the participation of the Department and private specialists in international trade fairs and commodity promotion programs.

Quintus also stressed the importance of agricultural imports which have approximated $4 billion annually in recent years. These imports are principally coffee, cocoa, tea, rubber, bananas, sugar, wool and silk which supplement U. S. production of food and fiber. Such imports increase the ability of other countries to buy U. S. farm products.

He stated that some agricultural imports are products of the U. S. has in surplus, but said that the volume of competing imports is generally minor compared to exports. Also, he explained, there is effective machinery for protection against excessive imports. Imports controls under Section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act are now in effect on wheat and wheat products; rye and rye products; flaxseed and linseed oil, peanuts and peanut oil; certain dairy products, cotton tung oil and almonds.

HOME Garden TIPS

ORRIN C. TURNQUIST

New Ornamentals

Two garden chrysanthemums are available this year which have been developed and introduced by the University of Minnesota.

Minnehaha is a medium-tall, upright, bushy plant with salmon-colored, rose-tinted, fully double flowers. It starts blooming about mid-September and continues until killing frost. By September, the sturdy plant is usually completely covered with blossoms. Almost as wide as it is tall. The plant should be set in the middle group or background of the flower border.

Princess is a vigorous-growing, high-mound type of plant reaching a height of 15 to 18 inches. The double, 2 inch flowers are old rose in color, with gold centers and gold-tipped petals. Since the petals are split at the ends, this variety is in the carnation-flowered class of chrysanthemums. Blooming starts early in August and within a few weeks the plant is covered with blossoms and continues blooming until freezing weather.

Also on the list of new introductions from the University this year is Radiant, a flowering crab apple. The tree is compact and upright in habit of growth, with sturdy, wide-angled crotches. Its form makes this variety ideally suited for landscape purposes on smaller properties. The new foliage, in the spring and early summer has a bright reddish cast, contrasting nicely with the green foliage. The flower buds are a deep red, opening to a deep pink, with single flowers of medium size. The flowers are produced annually, in profusion, making a brilliant display for about a 10-day period.

The flowers of the Radiant crab are followed by small, bright red fruits that average ½ inch in diameter and reach their peak of color in early September. The fruits retain their bright color until heavy frost in late October. They remain attached to the tree and serve as food for birds during the winter months.

The trees are completely hardy in all parts of the state tested and appear to be highly resistant to scab, cedar rust, and fire blight.

QUESTIONS answered for VETERANS

Additional information or assistance on veterans' benefits may be obtained by writing or visiting the VA Hospital, or the Bismarck or Grand Forks VA Offices.

Q—I am studying for my doctorate degree under the Korean GI Bill. How many hours of classroom work does VA consider to be full-time?

A—For graduate studies, there is no set number of hours. VA accepts the word of your school whether you are on a full-time or part-time basis.

Q—I understand World War II veterans can pay GI insurance premiums once a year and save money. Does this same privilege apply to those of us who hold Korean GI term insurance policies?

A—Yes. All holders of GI insurance—whether World War I, II or Korea veterans—may pay premiums on a yearly basis, rather than monthly.

Q—I am a Korean veteran with a service-connected disability. Does this automatically entitle me to vocational rehabilitation training?

A—Not necessarily. You must be found in need of vocational training to overcome the handicap of your disability in order to receive the training benefits.

Q—If my son goes to school under the War Orphans Education program, will VA pay his tuition as well as a monthly living allowance?

A—No. Under the law, VA makes one payment for each month of training. Generally this goes to his living parent or guardian. Out of this must come all training expenses, such as tuition and books. VA does not make separate payments to the school.

Northrop Indians on Warpath, Win 3 Championship Trophies

The spacious high school gymnasium was a beehive of activity on Tuesday evening as the city's grade school athletic and recreation program was climaxed by the annual Bjorkman trophy award night.

Following a diversified program of entertainment, which featured grade school basketball, folk dances and games by grade school girls, the annual grade school basketball champions vs. the all-stars game was played.

Coach Phil Beadle's champion Northrop Indians, on Ray Nelson's drive-in shot in the final minute of play, edged out the Knox-Washington squad, 8 to 7. Don Mathieu's free throw, late in the period, had broken a 6-all tie and given the all-stars a 7 to 6 lead.

Following the playing of the champions vs. all-stars game, the evening's program was concluded by the presentation, to the various team captains, of the Bjorkman trophies emblematic of grade school athletic championships.

The Northrop Indians monopolized honors, winning the three trophies awarded. John Weigelt, in the absence of captain Tommy Whisler, accepted the trophy for the grade school baseball title. The Northrop football captains, Richard Jensen, Ken Larson, and John Hellquist, accepted the championship football trophy; and the Northrop basketball co-captains, Richard Jensen and Ray Nelson, received the basketball trophy in behalf of their team and school.

St. Bernard's school, winners of the grade school hockey title, received their trophy previously, with co-captains Pat Munt and [illegible] Hanley accepting the emblem.

Most Effective

There is considerable publicity emanating from Bemidji to the effect that this season's Lumberjack basketball squad is the best that has ever represented Bemidji, district 29, Region 8 in the cage sport. That's a moot point.

We'll agree that this year's Lumberjack team is the most effective, but we'll argue the point as to whether or not it's the most efficient club to ever play for Bemidji. Ray Cronk and his rangy associates are a capable team, and it won't be a surprise if the Lumberjacks carry through this week's state tournament to win the state title.

Our nomination for the Bemidji club that played with the most finesse and competitiveness would be that Lumberjack squad of a couple of season's ago. That was the Bemidji team that had such get-up-and-go players as Jack Whiting, Darrell Erickson, Richie Carter, Joe Mayer, Dale Lauderbaugh, Fred Barker, Ross Fortier, and others. This outfit, lacking height, drove to within a couple of points of the state championship, losing to Brainerd in the finals. This ever-pressing squad seldom made a mechanical error and, by the aggressive tactics, they capitalized on the miscues of their opponents to roll up their victories. They were a bunch of opportunists.

This season's Lumberjack outfit, and we have seen them in action a number of times, will make the bad pass, will give up the ball on traveling infractions, and be guilty of more erratic play than has been customary from a Bemidji club. But in spite of these misplays, the Lumberjacks have trundled through a season that, except for one game, has been undefeated. Perhaps this is a sign of greatness.

The Favorites

Doug Tegtmeier, a native of the Bromkes-Svea City area, of which Willmar is a suburb, and Al what's-his-name, the city's two self-nominated experts on things basketball-wise, have gone into orbit and are flashing back signals to the effect that, come Saturday night, the state high school championship finals will be a contest between Willmar and Bemidji. And that this finals game will find the Willmar Cardinals defeating the Lumberjacks. They have arrived at this conclusion in spite of the fact that in an early-season game, played on the B.S.T.C. floor, Bemidji defeated Willmar, 70 to 63.

Of course, those two local experts have hedged their predictions by claiming that Austin shouldn't be shorted, and that Brainerd has a hustling squad, and that Cloquet represents the always strong Range region, and that Mankato has tournament potential, and that Mora may be a "dark horse" contender. The only club they have given up on is Brownton.

They'll be a Stronger Club

That was a massive dose of disappointment that the North Dakota hockey fans were forced to swallow on Saturday night when, in the final of the NCAA tournament being played in Minneapolis, the Sioux dropped a surprising 6 to 2 decision to the Denver Pioneers. This disappointment was heightened by the fact that during the season's play, the Sioux had taken the measure of the Denver club in three of four games.

And now the Sioux' hopes and plans are for next year, and these hopes are high and the plans promising. Last Monday night, March 10th, we were fortunate enough to be over at the Winter Sports building in Grand Forks as freshman coach Bart Thorndycraft's Sioux freshman team played, and defeated, the St. Boniface Seals, winning by a 6 to 2 score.

From this year's Sioux varsity squad, only four players—Jim Ridley, Ed Willems, John Armbruster, and Don Cough—will be graduated, and the battle for those vacant spots on the squad should be terrible. Among the more promising freshmen are such players as goalie Tom Forrest, defenseman Steve Thullner, wings Bart Larson and Bob Caouette, center Ken Wellen and wing Pat Angers. With normal improvement, these boys should make coach Bob May's season of 1958-59 a happy one.

The End of the Season

Officially the winter season, or the hockey-playing portion of the winter season, came to end on Sunday night at the Arena rink, when "coach" Roy (Club) Langevin's Fire Dept. team, by a 3 to 2 score, defeated the Bartenders in their annual Pennington county independent hockey challenge match.

The win for the Fire Dept., and it must be rated as an upset as the Bartenders had a marked edge on skating ability, was the result of a superb rush by Jack McGill, who showed surprising speed as he rushed down the ice and, with a bit of stick-handling, befuddled goalie Dennis (Spanky) Sullivan with a backhand shot.

The highlight of the game, perhaps, was a rink-length goal that was scored by the Fire Dept. Wendell Olson skidded a clearing shot out of the north zone and towards the south goal, defended by Spanky Sullivan. A nonchalant Sullivan attempted to stop that slow-moving puck with his stick, but the elusive disc slipped under the toe of the stick and into the net. From then on the Bartenders refused to speak to their goalie.

Easter Seals Are Mailed This Week

Organization Supplies Services to Crippled

The use of a wheelchair and learning to walk in a walker—these are important things to a crippled child or adult.

They are two of the many Easter seal services for thousands of crippled Minnesotans, both children and adults. Easter seals are now in the mail for 900,000 Minnesotans.

The direct aid program of the Easter Seal Society makes it possible for handicapped persons throughout the state to have the use of a wheelchair, walker, hospital bed, portable lift or some other special equipment.

During the past year, Easter Seal funds made available hundreds of pieces of special equipment and other special services. This assistance was provided in 83 Minnesota counties.

Other Easter Seal service programs include Camp Courage for crippled children, near Annandale and Maple Lake; a special speech camp near Stillwater; financial support of rehabilitation centers in Duluth, Virginia, Mankato, Winona and St. Paul; employment of the handicapped parent and professional education, research and accident prevention program.

Northrop Wins Three Trophies

Prowler Reunion Plans Are Complete

Mr. Glenn Carlson, in a communication to the Times, stated that plans have been completed and that everything is in readiness for the 20th reunion of George Lee's 1938 Prowler state championship basketball squad this weekend. Banquet reservations, and this banquet will begin at 5:30 p.m. on Saturday evening at the Leamington hotel, are meeting with a favorable response from former Prowler athletes, and friends and fans of the 1938 squad.

Mr. Carlson added that in the event some fans should make last-minute decisions to attend the reunion, and in need of hotel reservations, these fans are requested to send telegrams to Mr. Carlson at the Leamington hotel. Mr. Carlson has a number of hotel reservations available.

Several of the 1938 squad members, notably Earl Nicholson and Mel Haughom, have been in town this week visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. H. R. Peterson, secretary of the State High School Board, has made a 30-seat allotment to the 1938 Prowlers, and the group will enjoy the state high school basketball tournament games on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday from court-side at the Williams fieldhouse.

Curling Club Elects Officers; Prizes are Awarded to Winners

The local curling club climaxed its second season of competition, and its most successful, with a banquet and meeting held in the Eagles' club rooms on Tuesday evening.

Jarvis Prichard, chairman of the nominating committee, presented a slate of candidates for positions on the six-man board of directors. Elected were Everett Amundgaard, Leonard Furuseth, and Clifford Jorde for two-year terms, and Ray Olson, Ardell Liden, and Lawrence Lubitz for one-year terms. This board of directors in turn named the executive officers, selecting Mr. Amundgaard as club president, Mr. Furuseth as vice-president, Mr. Jorde as secretary, and Mr. Liden as treasurer.

The ladies' divison of the local curling club also named a pair of officers, electing Mrs. Everett (Lois) Amundgard as chairwoman, and Mrs. Leonard (Millie) Furuseth as vice chairwoman.

It was agreed that if ice conditions are favorable, and if the Arena ice sheet is available, that a mixed bonspiel will be held at the Arena on Sunday, March 23rd.

The Al Kimbrough rink—Kimbrough, skip, Justus Larson, third, Bob Wurst, second, and Kenny Liden, lead — were presented with sports shirts as prizes for winning the curling league playoffs.

During the season's competition, the National league and the American league competed in match play to select the top four rinks in each league to compete in the playoffs. The National league's top four rinks, in order, were Ivan Bundy, Glenn Olson, Ray Olson, and Al Kimbrough. In the American league play, Al Thompson, Ed DeLap, Lawrence Lubitz, and Wally Tunberg were the winning rinks.

In the playdowns, Tunberg defeated Bundy, Kimbrough won by default from Thompson. DeLap defeated Ray Olson, and Lubitz defeated Glenn Olson.

In the semi-finals, Kimbrough edged out DeLap, and Tunberg, in an extra-end match, eliminated Lubitz. In the championship finals, curled on Monday night, the Kimbrough rink defeated the Tunberg rink.

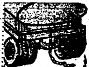
TODAY Some PRESCRIPTIONS CAN Actually BUY TIME
. . . many times the ingredients of a prescription will hold back, retard the growth of harmful bacteria . . . thus giving your body time to build up its natural defenses against germs, bacteria, viruses.
This is just another reason why prescriptions today are one of the biggest bargains in history.
RESOLUTION and BRAVERY
Men like Pasteur, Lister, Koch had to struggle for scientific truths against the forces of ignorance, heresy and superstitions.
But they won their battle just as surely as brave men fighting in combat.
Today's brave men of medicine and science are continuing the battle against disease. New medicines, drugs, vaccines are constantly being produced for better health, physical and mental welfare.
We take great pride in our complete prescription department and invite you to see our services.


PROTECTION
The length of chain hanging from the rear of a fuel truck is a simple precautionary measure against the accumulation of static electricity. Without the protective chain the truck could be turned into a blazing inferno.
Health protection measures should be taken, too. The most important is seeing your physician for a thorough physical examination at least once a year.
By doing so, you may avert a serious illness.

Deductible Expenses on Income Tax Cited

(This is the twelfth in a series of articles on income tax. These articles are made available as a public service by the Minnesota State Bar association, public relations committee.)

Most of the expenses which are deductible in your federal return as "Other Deductions" and in your Minnesota return as "Other Deductions Authorized by Law" fall into the categories of business expenses and of expenses incurred for the production or collection of income or for the management, conservation, or maintenance of property held for the production of income. Some expenses connected with employment which may generally be deducted are tools, professional journals, special uniforms, fees to employment agencies, and dues to a union or professional society. To be deductible your uniform must not be adaptable to general wear. If it is not adaptable to general wear you may not only deduct the cost of purchasing it but also any cost incurred in maintaining it, such as cleaning or laundry.

Many employees are allowed large deductions for entertainment expenses incurred for primarily business reasons. Such deductions may take many forms, such as meals, beverages, and club dues. However, if you are not reimbursed for your business entertainment expenses, you may be asked to prove that you are required to incure such expenses as a part of your job, or that your compensation is directly affected by the expenses, such as is usually the case with salesmen paid on a commission basis. Unless you have kept very careful records, large entertainment expense deductions will likely be disallowed if your return is audited. You can anticipate that any deduction claimed for entertainment expense incurred in your home will be very carefully examined.

Other expenses often claimed are for preparing tax returns or giving tax advice. If you are paying someone to manage your investments, you may deduct the costs of such services. The cost of maintaining a safe deposit box may be deducted, if it is used for the safe keeping of your income producing property, as may be the cost of publications purchased for investment assistance.

Two additional deductions are allowed on your Minnesota return. If you were a candidate for political office you may deduct your unreimbursed expenses up to certain maximum amounts. See page 5 of your Minnesota instructions. Contributions to political candidates, Parties, or causes made by individuals, up to $100 are also deductible. If you paid tuition or transportation expenses for a dependent attending and elementary or secondary school you may deduct such expenses, with a maximum of $200 for each dependent. This deduction does not apply to dependents attending colleges or universities.

We believe in advertising, you might, too, if you gave it a trial.

North Shore Trout Season Open Apr. 1

Regulations Unchanged, Says Director Kimball

There will be no change in the early North Shore trout fishing regulations this year, according to James W. Kimball, director, division of game and fish. The law provides the season may open as early as April 1 for brook, brown, and rainbow trout on North Shore streams, from Lake Superior to the nearest natural barrier within three-fourths mile from the lake.

Since the law prohibits the taking of trout prior to 10:00 a. m. on the opening day of the trout season, the season will officially open on these streams at 10:00 a. m., Tuesday, April 1. All of the streams which come under this special regulation are listed in the 1958 synopsis of fishing laws.

Fisheries officials indicate the sea lampreys have taken some rainbow trout; but since rainbow trout inhabit the comparatively shallow waters of Lake Superior, they are not as susceptible to lamprey predation as are the lake trout.

Comparatively few rainbow trout are taken during the early season; but it provides some very interesting fishing, since it is the only time of the year that anglers can try their luck on trout which spend most of their lifetime in Lake Superior.

Pedestrian Deaths Total 17 Since Jan. 1

Minnesota's traffic fatalities dropped for the first two months of 1958, compared to the similar 1957 period, despite a 112% increase in pedestrian deaths, according to a February report issued by the Minnesota highway department.

During February, 41 persons died in traffic mishaps, bringing the 1958 two-months total to 79, compared to 86 during the same period of 1957.

However, during the same two months, 17 pedestrians were killed compared to eight during the 1957 period. Seven of these pedestrians were killed on rural roads with the others dying in urban mishaps.

The rise in pedestrian deaths brought a warning from Harry A. Sieben, Minnesota highway safety director, that pedestrian must take their share of responsibility for safety on streets and highways.

"Safety lanes, painted cross walks, traffic lights and other mechanical devices are used to help pedestrians stay alive in today's high speed traffic," he said. "But too often many pedestrians disregard these devices and the rules of walking, based on safe practices and walk themselves to death.

"Pedestrians are competing with fast moving vehicles weighing 20 to 30 times as much as themselves. When there is a collision between these two bodies, the human doesn't have a chance. But he does have a big chance of avoiding that collision, with the use of ordinary common sense. His attitude is as important as that of the driver and it must be the right one."

We'll Trust the Courts

The Senate judiciary committee is not apt to act favorably on a bill that would limit the authority of the Supreme Court in certain fields, it is reported, but we are not greatly concerned about whether they do or don't. The court would decide whether or not the limitations were constitutional and it is not likely that any dangerous limitations would survive.

In general the proposed limitations would apply to the authority of courts over actions taken by congressional investigating committees and orders issued by regulatory bodies having to do with subversive activities. Our off hand guess is that it is in these fields that private citizens are most apt to need protection from overly zealous and power-drunk politicians. The courts, we are sure, are right most of the time, and the batting average of the politicians is not high.

Where Do We Go from Here

Uncle Sam's navy now has no battleships in active service. The last of the 45,000 ton dreadnoughts, the Wisconsin, was retired to a reserve status last week.

And so the old style battle wagon gives way to the more effective fighting ship, the carrier, and, as was pointed out at the retirement ceremony, the carrier may soon give way to the submarine or the guided missile.

The significant thing about this retirement of the Wisconsin is the fact that it was not launched until late in 1943, two years to the day after Pearl Harbor. Since that comparatively recent date there has been an historic change. We have advanced into the age of nuclear power.

The question about which we all are now concerned is, "Where do we go from here."

Classrooms Now Ample?

Last year the pressure of the public school education lobby was all for federal aid for school buildings. Without federal aid we couldn't possibly get the additional needed classrooms.

Now the lobby leaders have shifted their attack to what they believe is a more vulnerable front. The classroom shortage is no longer a problem. That seems to have taken care of itself. What we need now is federal scholarships so that we can turn out more scientists. Or so it was a few weeks ago. Since we placed a moon of our own in the sky the Sputnik hysteria has abated considerably.

But the education lobby will press on for federal aid. In what form it comes is not a matter of primary concern. The main objective is to get one foot in the door. Once federal aid is established in any form the main battle will have been won. From then on the only problem will be to have it expanded, and that will come gradually.

But it's nice to know that the shortage of classrooms is no longer an issue.

Thye-Humphrey Split

Senators Ed Thye and Hubert Humphrey parted ways last week. They differed over a farm question. Dairyman Thye tried to write a rider into an appropriation bill that would freeze supports on dairy products at their present levels. Humphrey voted against him, agreeing with the purpose of the rider but arguing that it was not the way the good purpose should be accomplished. Now, according to reports, they no longer are friends.

Perhaps it is just as well that the inevitable break comes now. Thye was neutral when Humphrey ran for reelection four years ago and it will be Thye who will suffer by the break at this time, with a tough campaign for reelection ahead of him. The opposition of Humphrey will hurt him. But maybe this will make a fighter out of Honest Ed and if that is the result his chances for victory may be improved.

Thye goes into the contest under a triple disadvantage. He carries the Republican label and that will be a handicap in Minnesota this year. He will run as the candidate of a party that is without an effective organization and that can give him little help. And he will be opposed by a candidate who will have the backing of a party that is highly organized under a capable and politics-wise leadership.

Thye's only chance for survival is a hard-hitting campaign in his own behalf, based on his personal record of honest and conscientious service.

Six-Point Program

Ninteen members of veterans agricultural classes at Mankato gave Al Stedman material for an interesting column in the St. Paul Sunday Pioneer Press. As a group of future farmers, they suggested a six-point farm program which caused farm editor Stedman to wonder:

> "How this amazing document found a way past all of the laments of the oncoming doom of the family farm, demands for soil bank payments and for fixed dairy and wheat price supports, we don't know.
> "Anyhow, here it is, true as life, with each name in the signer's handwriting. If anyone imagines that these farmers of the future are beaten by adversity, or believe all they hear, or have stopped doing their own thinking, he should study this letter.
> "For these are all young men, mostly 24 to 30 years old, married, veterans largely of the Korean war, who are starting farming. They are beginning at a time of high costs of land and equipment. They are exposed to the small farm, dairying, price and cost handicaps that other farmers face. Uncle Sam provides their on-farm training, but it's up to them to acquire land to farm.
> "If any farmers anywhere have a stake in the future, these veterans have. If anybody knows about the squeeze on the family farm, or the troubles of dairymen, or the effects of price pegging, they should know it."

Here is the six-point program they recommend:

1. Cancel dairy support prices in exchange for a free market for Grade A milk throughout the entire U. S.

2. Cancel crop supports in exchange for the Department of Agriculture handing over all of the surplus commodities it holds to the State department who would use it to fight communism. These commodities would be held off national and world markets. Commodities going out of condition could be sold on the national market and replaced with fresh stock from the national market.

We believe that without the load of all the government held surpluses, we can adjust production to the present demand.

3. We do not believe that the "family farm" is in danger of dying. It is just becoming larger.

4. We would like to see some program developed to help rehabilitate those farmers who are squeezed out as family farms grow in size.

5. We endorse Public Law 480 (providing for sales of farm exports for foreign currencies) and would like to have more research in developing new crops and more uses for old crops.

6. The government program of renting land from farmers is dangerous if it returns the farmer over 5 per cent on his investment as it may attract outside investors. However, it could be a good safety factor in case of a depression if it paid enough to cover taxes and bare cost of living.

Borrowed Nonsense

During the late holiday season we had occasion to place a telephone call to an acquaintance who holds an executive position with one of the larger industrial firms. "He's out to lunch," his secretary confided, "but he won't be gone long—nobody took him."

—Quote.

"How can I get this message across to every married woman in the town?" an advertising agent asked a publicity man.

"Very simple", was the reply, "Just address letters to every married man in the town and mark them all 'personal'."

Never miss an opportunity to make others happy, even if you have to leave them alone to do it.

The horny-handed boy had been hired to do some hauling. The job completed, he was informed that it would be necessary to submit a statement before being paid. After much study, he produced the following: "Three comes and three goes at four bits a went, $3."

OUT-PERFORMS Them All in Growers' Own Weight and Compare Tests.
FUNK'S G HYBRID
Don't miss out on corn income you could just as well be collecting. Make certain you plant every acre of your corn ground to the highest-producing hybrids you can get. How do you tell which are the highest producing? Thousands of profit-minded corn growers now choose their hybrids this proven way:
THEY WEIGH AND COMPARE
In their own fields, with the hybrids side by side. Picked with their own pickers. Weighed on the scales of their choice. They figure their own results. These corn growers report Funk's G-Hybrids out-perform the best of all comers, by averages of from 5 to 15 bushels an acre. Time after time. Field after field. Year after year.
FIGURE IT OUT. Yield averages like that can easily give you an extra wagonload for each bushel of Funk's-G you plant. A load of corn you wouldn't have had, had you chosen any other hybrid seed. Make certain you get these extra bushels. This spring plant your entire corn acreage to Funk's G-Hybrids.

How quiet the night is! Have you ever stepped out of doors around midnight and listened? The sounds of night are so mysterious in the stillness. Darkness, heavy and muffled like black velvet drapes is all around you. When your eyes become accustomed to the blackness, strange shapes and figures loom up as trees and shrubs take form. The plaintive "whoo-whoo" of the nocturnal creature, the owl sounds so far away.

As the wood-lands recede under the onslaught of the clanking bulldozers, the owl departs deeper into the remaining forested areas. I hate to see the trees pushed down. Song birds must find homes elsewhere. Animals, rabbits, fox, yes even deer must find new hiding places. June-berries, pincherries, choke cherries, all reel before the blades. The fragrance of flowers and coolness of leafy shade are no more. Wide expanse of open fields are on every side where the winds can whip and fan the loose soil, filling spring skies with choking dust. Progress? I wonder?

In Roman times soldiers received a "salarium," or salary, of coins made of salt. As vital to humans then as today, salt was very scarce and more eagerly sought than gold.

The world's largest bats, the "flying foxes" of Java, have a wingspan of nearly five feet.

Want a new tractor?
Farmer friend of ours (and family) was in telling us about the new model he'd just picked out. And it's a dandy. Has the power attachments, power hitch—even power steering—and a lot more pull on the drawbar. Walks away with a 4-gang like a Percheron pulling a pony cart.
A shrewd move on the part of this farmer because now, he says, he can make himself more than twice as efficient.
When a new tractor is an investment in good farming like that, we're for it!
So if you've picked out a new tractor—or even if you're just thinking about one—drop in and tell us about it. We'll do all we can to help you get it. [illegible] it will give you the help you need!
Chances are we can finance it for you in any one of several different ways. And at low bank rates.
We at the bank have faith in the future of farming, faith in you. And we're ready to demonstrate it. Right today.
We're here to help you get what you want

Companion Crop Studies

When oats are used as a companion crop for legume-grass mixtures, cutting the oats for hay or silage can mean higher forage yields the following year.

Alfalfa-timothy mixtures in recent field tests yeilded 3.55 tons per acre where the companion oats crop the year before had been cut for hay in early July.

In comparison, where oats were combined in August and the straw removed, forage yields the next year were 2.5 tons per acre. Combining and then clipping the stubble increased forage yields during the following year to 2.19 tons per acre, but this was still a good half ton less than where the oats had been removed for hay or silage.

The reason for better results from cutting the companion crop for hay is that this practice gives the legumes a better chance to develop the first year. This means more vigorous, hardier plants.

The experiment also showed little difference between broadcasting fertilizer at seeding time or applying it in a band below the legume seed. This was on a fairly heavy soil, however, and might not hold true on lighter soils.

Corn Fertilization

If you wind up with less than 12,000 corn plants on each acre this year, it won't pay you to use more than starter fertilizer on the field.

But if you follow the right practices and are now getting lessthan 80 bushels of corn per acre, it will pay you to invest up to $30 per acre in fertilizer for the crop.

These pointers come from a summary of results prepared by Charles Simkins and Curtis Overdahl, extension soils specialists at the University of Minnesota.

In 1957, farmers who had less than 12,00 plants per acre increased yields by less than 6 bushels per acre through using fertilizer. When population ranged from 14,00 to 16,00 plants per acre, fertilizing increased yields by 12.5 bushels.

But farmers who had between 16,00 and 18,000 plants per acre—the recommended population—using fertilizer increased yields by almost 26 bushels per acre.

Also it often doesn't pay to use heavy nitrogen applications when the corn is on land that was in alfalfa the year before. On the average, farmers who used 100 pounds of nitrogen for corn following alfalfa or on well manured land lost up to $15 per acre on their investment.

The trials showed that fertilizing according to soil test gave most return for each fertilizer dollar spent. At the same time, the wise farmer will allow for the nitrogen in the legumes in the past years and for the nutrients in manure that was applied.

Public Urged to File Accident Reports

Many people who should, are not filing accident reports with the Minnesota highway department, according to G. A. Hatfield, director of the drivers license division.

"There are several excellent reasons in favor of these people filing reports," he said. Minnesota law requires only that drivers of vehicles involved in accidents file accident reports with the commissioner of highways. No provision is made for others who may be involved.

Four classes of persons are most often concerned. They are pedestrians and bicyclists who are involved in collision with motor vehicles, persons whose parked cars are struck and property owners whose property is damaged by a motor vehicle.

"In each case," Hatfield pointed out, "if $50 damage is done or there is personal injury or death, the driver must file a report or face loss of his driver's license. Those others involved just neglect to file or don't realize that it might be to their advantage."

Pedestrians, bike-riders and property owners may find it to their advantage to file a report and bring the action under the Safety Responsibility act which provides penalties for drivers who cannot show monetary protection for such accidents, he said.

Hatfield went on to cite other reasons for all persons concerned to file reports. The Accident Records section of the Highway Department can use such data from reports to add to the department's knowledge of accidents and their causes. Information regarding trends in types of accidents or similar accidents which occur in a single area may well be of assistance to the engineer and the statistician.

The owner of a parked car which is damaged by another may find his interests served if he files a report since the driver of the offending vehicle might leave without giving his name and address and later file a report with the department. Other drivers may promise to pay and later default. In either case, if the injured party files a report it will be to his own self-interest, Hatfield said.

He concluded with a reminder that any driver who does not file an accident report as required by law is subject to suspension of his driver's licence.

Dyruds Returning to Madagascar; Will be Honored Sunday

Morning and Afternoon Services at Bethlehem Church in Newfolden

Rev. and Mrs. Amos Dyrud and family will be honored at a farewell service at Bethlehem Lutheran church in Newfolden Sunday. The Dyruds have served one term on the mission field in Madagascar under the Lutheran Board of Missions of the Lutheran Free Church. They are now returning to the field for their second term.

Rev. Dyrud will preach the sermon at the worship service at 11:00 a.m. The afternoon service at 2:00 p.m. will be an informal service with greetings from several people, including Mrs. Amos Dyrud. Peter, Naomi and Rebecca will sing in the Malagasy language.

Rev. Peter Konsterlie, executive secretary of the Lutheran Board of Missions, will speak in the afternoon. Rev. Konsterlie served for many years as a missionary to China.

At noon the Bethlehem Ladies aid will serve dinner on a free-will offering basis. The proceeds go to the building fund.

The offering in the afternoon will go to Rev. and Mrs. Dyrud as a personal gift from the many friends they have in the Thief River Falls District.

Rev. Amos Dyrud grew up in the Newfolden Community. He is a graduate of Augsburg College and Augsburg Theological Seminary in Minneapolis. Mrs. Dyrud's home is at Sand Creek, Wisconsin. She is an R. N. from the Deaconess Hospital school of nursing in Minneapolis and a graduate of the Lutheran Bible Institute. The four Dyrud children; Peter, Naomi, Rebecca and Samuel, will also return to their playmates in Madagascar.

Ole Ness Attends Sanitation Meet

Ole Ness, superintendent of the Thief River Falls disposal plant, was one of 63 sewage works operators who were given written examinations for class B C and D operator certificates at the annual Sewage Works Operators' School held March 10-12 at the University of Minnesota's center for continuation study.

The examinations are in accordance with a plan that classifies all public sewage works in the state into grades based on population, amount of sewage treated, and the type of plant. The examinations are administered annually as part of the operators' school sponsored by the University of Minnesota, in cooperation with the Minnesota Department of Health and the League of Minnesota Municipalities.

More than 99% per cent of the 727,000 men and women in Girl Scouting are volunteers, who contribute their interest, time, and talents to teach girls to be good citizens.

Urges Doublecheck of Return Forms to Reduce Tax Errors

Although the percentage of errors detected each year in Federal income tax returns continues to decline, there are still enough to warrant the request from District Director Knox of the Internal Revenue Service that all taxpayers check and recheck both facts and figures after completing their tax returns.

"While we appreciate every effort which tends to get returns to us early in the filing season, we still want taxpayers to very carefully go over their mathematics, to make sure that they have put down all the names of authorized dependents, and that they have completed all of the other phases - supported by documents if need be—that the form and instruction booklet call for," Mr. Knox said.

"Along with these basic essentials, taxpayers should be careful to check over their returns before filing to make sure that all required W-2's are attached, that names and addresses have been legibly entered, that signatures (both husband and wife if a joint return) have been affixed, that any check attached for taxes still owed is made out properly to the Internal Revenue Service, and that all papers comprising the complete return are placed in an envelope addressed to the District Director, Internal Revenue Service, St. Paul 1, Minnesota.

Advise Week-day Tests for Driver Permits in State

"Too many applicants for Minnesota drivers licenses are wasting their time by insisting upon taking their tests on Saturdays." This statement was made by Ray Haseman, Minnesota chief driver license examiner, in noting the delays involved for those who make appointments for tests at the end of the week.

"We urge those who can to come in Wednesday through Friday," he said. "On those days it is possible to take the written test and, having passed, go right out to the parking lot and take the driving test. This is not always possible on Saturdays because of the heavy load.

"By appearing during the week, the applicant will save his own time, reduce the time lag between written and operating tests, can be able to secure his license that much sooner. At the same time, the examining stations will be able to give better service to all applicants."

A chemical weed control demonstration last summer convinced Henrik Pederson, Alden, Minn., that Randox spraying can lick the giant foxtail problem. "Four pounds of Randox per acre did wonders," Pederson says. "It practically eliminated the giant foxtail in the corn and soybean rows. The corn and soybeans grew fine." He continued this demonstration in cooperation with Eldon Senske, Freeborn county agent.

FOUNDATIONS

You have to go down if you want to go up! That sounds like foolishness, but it isn't.

If you plan to build a garage, you don't need to dig very much before you lay the foundation. But if you plan to rival a modern skyscraper, you must start deep below the earth's surface.

Foundations of great buildings must go down until they rest on bed rock. Not until then is it safe to start going up.

So the next time you look up at a building which rises far above you, don't forget the foundation that makes it possible.

Our lives need such foundations, too. In the building of our lives, and those of our children, we're too often governed by what other people think or by our temporary wants and desires.

But when life's storms come and its testing moments are upon us, it is the foundation that keeps us secure, or the lack of it that permits collapse. Only a life foundation that rests solidly upon faith in the eternal God is really adequate for the kind of character building we must do if we want our lives to be happy and successful.

You've got to go as deep as that, if you want to go up.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

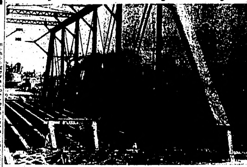
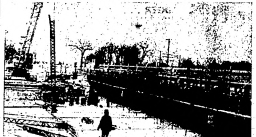
Begin Demolition of Old Eighth St. Bridge



With the new Eighth st. bridge put into use Monday, March 10, the end of another local landmark was hastened by crews at the bridge site when they immediately started cutting the old steel structure apart with acetylene torches. Here is a view of the old bridge after the roadway had been torn off the floor beams and the hand railings cut off.

The Old Steel Bridge Is Just a Memory Now!



All that remains of the old Eighth st. bridge in this photo is a disjointed pile of steel beams as the wrecking crew nears the end of the demolition job. Part of the steel from the structure will go to the T. M. Swingen Construction Co. which built the new bridge, the rest will be disposed of elsewhere. The old bridge was built over 40 years ago and was the second bridge at the site, being preceded by a wooden structure, which became quite rickety before its replacement, according to several old-timers here.

The bridge was built by the Minneapolis Bridge Co., contractors, and Stanley Michalsky of this city was the foreman on the job.

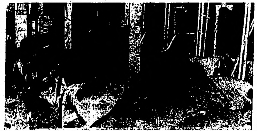
Fire Destroys Many Cows of Outstanding Herd



Holstein cows and calves valued at more than $10,000 were destroyed Sunday night when fire broke out in the barn of the Andy Erickson farm at Badger. Of a total herd of 60 head of one of the finest herds in northwestern Minnesota, 29 had been destroyed by last night, Mr. Erickson told a Times reporter, and there are several others that may not survive, he said.

The above picture was taken by editor Stanley Evans of the Greenbush Tribune when the fire was still burning. Most of the dead animals died of suffocation, the fire having been checked before the barn was completely destroyed. The heat was very great however as indicated by the fact that the hair was singed from the normally black and white cows and the dead in the picture appear to be white. Mr. Evans reports that while the Greenbush fire department responded to a call for help, much credit is due the Badger fire department for its good work in checking the flames and reducing the loss.

Mr. Erickson, well known thruout northwestern Minnesota because of his various dairy activities, was hospitalized following the fire due to burns, exposure and shock. But for his personal efforts the stock loss would have been much greater.

Vive la Difference

Taking inspiration from the writings of sociologist Sorokin, a provocative idea for parents emerges. Sorokin first calls attention to the vast individual differences among us, many of which cannot be changed. Then the point is made that it is not these likenesses or differences which influence how well we get along together as much as it is the values which we place upon these likenesses and differences—many of which can be changed. Sorokin believes that when values of universal nature are mutually understood, two or more people can work together harmoniously, or are divided by this same principle.

Nowhere is the attitude toward individual likenesses and differences more important than in the family, our smallest social group. The familiarity within families breeds either contempt for differences or respect for them. If Bob and Dick are attracted to different types of girls, they may either thrive on this variety and double-date; or they may scorn and deride each other and avoid foursomes. Which plan omens well for the day when they marge and try to blend their respective wives into the family group?

If twelve year old Mary sews and cooks, while her thirteen year old sister Jean plays piano and paints, here are very real differences calling for careful handling. Both Mary and Jean can be hindered by attempts to make them alike; can be imposed upon by demanding undue amounts of what they do well; can be hurt by unfair comparisons; can be made secure and ambitious by encouragement to do better the things they aspire to do.

If father has a knack for sales and public speaking, while he succeeds only in causing an ailing vacuum sweeper to cough and give up entirely, the less broken appliances handed to him the better. No good can come from making him feel still more inept and that he is becoming the butt of family jokes. Far better than to ignore or to try to measure differences on a single yardstick, is to seek mutual understanding of differences which accepts, appreciates, even glories in the different contributions of Bob's and Dick's girl friends, Mary, Jean, and Pop!

Our LAND

Appearing in newspapers of the Minnesota Editorial Association through the cooperation of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture.

Pasturing Dairy Cattle on contour strips is no trick at all, says Burton Larson, Bigelow farmer and cooperator with the Nobles county soil conservation district. Several strips end near his buildings. He fences off a portion of each strip with an electric fence. Then he moves the fence each day, on a ration-a-day grazing plan. He says it takes only 10 minutes each noon to change the wire.

A Corn Yield of 165.9 bushels per acre is what Donald Hassing, Easton, Minn., harvested in 1957 to take high yield honors in the Minnesota X-Tra Corn Yield contest. Where he used no fertilizer, his yield was 99 bushels. But applying 400 pounds of 6-24-12 fertilizer resulted in a 66-bushel increase. And this is on soil that three years ago was quite low in fertility. Soil testing and wise fertilizer use have made the difference. Corn follows legumes in his rotation, reports Francis Januschka, Faribault county Extension soils agent.

Effective Contour strip cropping calls for some careful planning ahead, says Willis DeValois, U. S. Conservation Service worker at Wanamingo. In helping Allwin Ardut, Pine Island, launch a soil conservation program, DeValois first recommendation for an eroded 80 acres was to seed it down in spring, 1956. Now the alternate strips are marked for corn. Ardut likes the green manure ahead of the corn and the fine seeding on the rest. The preparation has saved time, soil and inconvenience, he says.

Average Ear Corn moisture in late September is no greater in corn receiving heavy nitrogen doses than it is in corn receiving either no fertilizer at all or a nonitrogen fertilizer, J. M. MacGregor, University of Minnesota soils scientist, says 1955 experiments showed that rates of 60, 120, 180 and 300 pounds per acre in no case changed corn moisture percentage in September by more than 1 percent.

C. Mathson Is Honored as Top Young Farmer

Clayton Mathson, 31, who farms three quarter-sections east of St. Hilaire was honored as the Thief River Falls JayCees' Outstanding Young Farmer at the annual Future Farmers of America banquet held Thursday evening in the vocational school cafeteria. The award was presented to Mathson by N. H. Kortuem, JayCee chapter president.

Mathson's award was one of 19 given during the affair, which is sponsored by the local JayCees honoring Lincoln high school chapter members of the FFA for their outstanding work during the year.

Gary Rolandson was master of ceremonies at the banquet, and also gave the welcome. A bean feed followed the welcome, and was served by members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, after which guests were introduced and acknowledgements made. Walt Jung Struck by Car Saturday

Driver Tagged for Not Yielding Right-of-way

A Middle River man was tagged for failure to yield the right-of-way to a pedestrian Saturday after the car he was driving struck Walter Jung at the intersection of Main av. and Third St.

Jung was struck down by Paul Stanina as he was walking across Main av. around noon Saturday. Stanina was turning south onto Main from E. Third st. when he hit the pedestrian.

An eyewitness to the mishap, Sheriff Charles Richards, followed Stanina and issued the ticket for failure to yield the right-of-way. Jung, it was reported, got up and walked away after being struck, after which the driver also left the scene.

Jung suffered abrasions from the mishap but more serious injuries, if any, were not reported.

Only one other traffic mishap was reported by city police over the weekend. This one, involving George Gustafson, city, occurred Friday as Gustafson was attempting to park on E. Third st. and in doing so collided with a parked car belonging to Art Dicken, city. Only $15 damage was caused to the Gustafson car, less to Dicken's.

Also reported by police over the weekend were petty thefts in rural Thief River Falls. Oliver Gullingsrud reported theft of 20 gallons of gas and a 5-gallon gas can, while Russell Hilligoss reported loss of a tire, wheel and tow bar.

The Little Chorale, Final Concert Number, Offered on Thursday

One of the outstanding attractions of the Northwest Concert association's current season will be a performance by the brilliant concert octet, The Little Chorale, in Lincoln high school auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 27, it was announced today.

The Little Chorale, hailed as a minor musical miracle, has parted from tradition and is a far cry from the standard vocal ensemble.

Having established themselves as keen interpreters of the classics in superlative singing arrangements of Schubert, Brahms and Romberg, to name but a small portion of the magnificent repertoire of special Little Chorale offerings, these choristers are staged and directed by three of the most gifted young men in New York.

Donald Smith comes from Oberlin. Musical director at New England's famed Cohasset Music Circus, Mr. Smith has been an assistant conductor at the New York City Center Opera and pianist for the popular Max Liebman TV "Show of Shows." He also had a musical hand in the Romberg tour and is presently on the staff of "The Voice of Firestone."

One of the most talented of young American choral and orchestral conductors, William Jonson was assistant conductor of the "Porgy and Bess" production which toured the world. A former director of the Collegiate Choral, Mr. Jonson is known for his work in the Broadway presentation of "Wonderful Town." A recent Book of the Month Club record selection, the Little Orchestra and Choral Art Societies' L'Enfance du Christ has Mr. Jonson as its choral director.

Gene Bayliss, choregrapher for "The Voice of Firestone" and stage director of The Master Singers, has additional credits at the Birmingham Opera Under the Stars, Cohasset Music Circus, Oakdale Theatre at Wallingford, Connecticut, on Broadway and on numerous TV shows.

Consistently praised for the superb showmanship, charm and warmth which is readily communicated to all of their audiences, the members of the Little Chorale are Francine Falkon, Laurie Franks, Joyce Harrod, Rita Schorn, Lynn Detweiler, Richard Park, Howard Shaw and Arthur Swan. Their accompanist is Dobbs Franks.

Ancher Nelsen Is New Chairman of State Republicans

Hutchinson Man, Former REA Chief, Defeats Earl Williams of Fergus Falls

Ancher Nelsen, leading GOP figure on state and national levels for 20 years, Saturday in Minneapolis was elected chairman of the Minnesota Republican party.

The state central committee elected the Hutchinson, Minn., farmer by a 108-76 vote over J. Earl Williams, Fergus Falls.

The action by the party governing body reversed the recommendation of the district chairmen and chairwomen who, as a nominating committee, had picked Williams.

Mrs. Erna Johnson, St. Paul, the party's first vice chairwoman, was elected over Mrs. Jeanne Fischer, also of St. Paul, as chairwoman by a vote of 118-68.

Nelsen was McLeod county senator for 16 years before retiring from the post to run unsuccessfully for the Republican nomination as lieutenant governor two years later and served until April 1954, when he was appointed by President Eisenhower as rural electrification administrator. He was the party's 1956 candidate for governor, defeated by Orville Freeman.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Patrick and sons of Kansas City, Mo. spent last week visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lucus Knight. They left last Tuesday for Palmer, Alaska where they will make their home.

Big Audience Hears Concordia Choir

Group Appears Sunday in Lincoln Auditorium

The Concordia College choir of Moorhead appeared in concert before a capacity crowd Sunday afternoon in the Lincoln high school auditorium under the local sponsorship of Trinity Lutheran church. Paul Christiansen ably directed the singers.

With their excellent renditions, the 60-voice group plainly demonstrated why it has come to be regarded as one of the nation's outstanding choral groups. A half-dozen accomplished soloists also contributed greatly to the program, which closed with the rendition of "Beautiful Savior", composed by the director's father, the late F. Melius Christiansen.

The choir recently returned from a tour to the West Coast, and will leave in June for a concert tour of Norway and other European countries.

United Fund Is Discussed at C. C. Thursday

G. Forks Man Tells of Efforts to Merge All Drives into One

The functioning of the United Fund approach to community giving, as compared to the Community Chest, was discussed at a dinner meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Thursday evening by O. Lewis Ugland, for the past five years a leader in those organizations at Grand Forks.

Introduced by Amos Martin, manager of the Grand Forks Chamber of Commerce, Ugland stated that the United Fund is designed to supply funds for all organizations that have been conducting separate drives.

He added that the Red Cross chapter had cooperated in the plan, but that the polio, heart and cancer fund leaders had rejected the funds allotted to them, and had later conducted separate drives with indifferent results. A solution of this problem has not yet been reached, he said.

Ugland stated that thru the use of a voluntary payroll deduction plan, based on the contribution of an average of one hour's pay for each month, the campaign has raised $132,000 in Grand Forks in 1957, more than twice as much as was realized from the former Community Chest plan.

Harley Kelly, C. of C. president in charge of the program, also called in Wm. Foster, chairman of the membership drive, who congratulated the members on paying their dues promptly, and thanked Art Christianson and Sig Quam for their assistance.

Don M. Olson outlined plans for the spring promotion March 27, 28 and 29, including drawings for free prizes [illegible], a program for farmers Thursday afternoon, and a style show and other entertainment in the Lincoln high school gymnasium Friday evening.

Champ Prowler Quint of 1938 Holds Reunion with Coach Geo. Lee

By Huck Olson

Coach George Lee and his 1938 Prowler state high school basketball champions—Roy Lee, Mel Haughom, Clark and Rube Mickelson, Loren Stadum, Earl Nicholson, Gordy Caldis, and Orville (Red) Eide—climaxed three happy days of reunion and reminiscence by being guests at a 20th anniversary banquet held in the Dubonnet room at the Leamington hotel in Minneapolis on Saturday evening. Of that 1938 squad, only Rev Perry Pederson, now residing in Wyoming, was unable to be present. Co-captain Don Lorentson, the other missing tournament squad member, was a World War II casualty.

The program was under the able direction of Glenn Carlson, student manager of the 1938 squad and now the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of St. Cloud. Mr. Carlson introduced the squad members to the gathering, giving a brief sketch of the boys' activities since their graduation in 1938.

On of the features of the evening's program was the playing of tape recording recreating the final minutes of the regular game and the "sudden death" overtime of the Prowlers semi finals tilt against Crosby-Iron

Local Telephone Rates to Be Raised Effective April 1

To allow for increased operating costs of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company, the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission last Wednesday authorized an increased scale of charges for the company's exchanges in Minnesota, altho not as much as had been requested.

Al Bacon, manager of the Thief River Falls exchange, said that rates here will go up from 30 cents a month to $1.20, depending on the type of service. He added that the new schedule will take effect April 1, and will be reflected in part in bills going out later in the month.

Residential rates here will be raised as follows: One-party, from the present $4.10 to $4.60; two-party, from $3.35 to $3.70; and four-party, from $2.95 to $3.25.

Rate for one-party business phones will rise from the present $8.20 to $9.40, while two-party rates will go up from $7 to $8.

Rural residential rates will rise from $3.40 to $3.85. All of these rates are exclusive of the federal tax.

Jaycees Plan for Teen-age Road-E-O

Annual Event Scheduled Tentatively for May 24

At a meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce Thursday evening in the Legion club rooms, Roger Tunberg, chairman of the Teen-age Road-E-O committee, reported that Saturday, May 24, had been set tentatively as the date for the annual event, designed to test the driving skill of high school students.

N. H. Kortuem, president, announced that nominations for Jaycee officers would be received at the next meeting of the chapter Thursday evening, April 3, and that the election will be conducted at the April 17 meeting.

Action was deferred until the next session on a proposal that a Whisker club be organized in connection with the observance of the Minnesota statehood centennial.

Following the meeting the group went to the area vocational school cafeteria to attend the annual awards banquet of the Lincoln high school chapter of the Future Farmers of America.

State Agents Raid 2 Beer Taverns in RLF

Red Lake county law enforcement officers aided by state officials, cracked down on two North Side taverns in Red Lake Falls March 14, says the Gazette of that city.

State agents under the direction of Jack Puterbaugh, state liquor commissioner and Sheriff Carl Kankel and Henry Thode, staged raids on The Spot owned by Ralph Short and Bruce Kramer and on Murphy's Tavern, owned by John Murphy.

Fourteen teen-agers, 12 of them girls, were taken into custody as were the proprietors of the 3.2 beer places. The operators of the North Side taverns were charged with permitting juveniles to loiter and went before Justice Glen N. Fellman Wednesday where they were fined $100 and costs.

The North Side operators had been warned repeatedly against the presence of teen-agers in their establishments, Kankel said.

Dancing has been permitted in the places raided and it's no secret that Red Lake Falls has become a Mecca for many teen-agers from Polk and Pennington counties. Most of the girls taken into custody Friday night were from Crookston and Thief River Falls and their parents were notified to come and take them home.

The county jail had a good workout Friday night and it was nearly 4 o'clock in the morning before the cases had been disposed of. Most of the teen-agers were lectured and released by Justice Fellman although three girls, 18 and 19, were fined $25 and costs with $15 of the fine suspended.

About six other teen-agers escaped during the raid. The 14 youngsters were taken to the sheriff's office and questioned. Partly filled bottles and glasses of beer had been found on the tables of booths which the youngsters occupied.

One 18-year-old boy from that area was charged with altering a draft card and appeared before Fellman in court Wednesday.

None of the teen-agers admitted to having bought beer, Kankel said. "Each of the kids claimed the beer belonged to somebody else," Kankel stated.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Larson and Arlin spent Sunday in Plummer and visited at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Schjelderup.

Ulseth Praises Concordia Choir in Concert Here

By Bryant Ulseth

Noted critics from Washington D. C. to Portland, Oregon have unanimously expounded the plaudits of the Concordia choir, Moorhead, Minnesota. The few inadequate and admittedly biased comments that I could pen here would hardly matter in the analysis of this choir. Therefore, this article will no sense be treated as a critique.

Rewarding in itself was the large audience that nearly filled the Lincoln auditorium. The great sense of expectancy that pervaded the audience was fulfilled, the music and text was transformed into spirit which reached the hearts and souls of those that heard.

I, for one, am grateful to the Concordia choir for coming to our city because it makes my job of teaching youngsters to enjoy great music a lot easier. I'm confident that everyone in the auditorium is grateful to the Concordia Choir for a musical experience unsurpassed.

Shootin' the Breeze

BY Mack Draper

Although no robins have been reported to this column so far, we understand at least one was sighted in the city some weeks ago. As a further indication spring must really be here I have seen a number of meadowlarks in the fields, and yesterday the missus and I saw several crows in the Mud Lake refuge.

The year 1958 probably will be long remembered as the year spring really came on the official date in these parts.

It probably would be a real smart thing to keep our collective fingers crossed until May 1, however Mother Nature is a capricious dame at times!

We'll probably remember 1958 as the year prices and unemployment rose together, too. How such a situation could come about we don't know but there's a suspicion that somebody along the food distribution line is gouging. There's an excellent opening for a congressional investigation, which will also give some aspiring young legislator a chance to make himself better known to the pee-pul.

Howcome there's such a hullaballoo over simplifying our federal income tax returns? Most folks we know of would prefer that they simplify the payments instead!

A fellow we know of says there oughta be a law — against all these people who think we can cure all evils by passing some kind of law.

There has been considerable comment, locally, about the way some pedestrians move so slowly when crossing a busy street. It's true that such traffic has the right-of-way but at least the person walking across could be courteous enough to clear the street as soon as possible. A little more live and let live by pedestrians and motorists alike would help the situation at some of our busier intersections.

According to statistics, pedestrians account for a much-too-large a share of the 1958 Minnesota traffic death toll to date. The pedestrian, as well as the driver, has an obligation to play it safe when moving in traffic. An intersection is no place to stroll leisurely. It's dangerous— and discourteous.

Signs advising pedestrians to look four ways before crossing, and to walk briskly, might be one way of improving the situation. Charging overly careless pedestrians with careless walking in police court would not only make a good news story but might also cure some of our less thoughtful citizens of some bad habits.

Of course we must make some allowances for our elderly citizens in this matter — they can't move so fast. The same is true of handicapped folks. But there's no excuse for healthy people dragging their feet at our busy crossings!

What's your opinion — based on reason and logic, not sentiment?

Get your garden planned yet? We've seen a few folks raking their lawns and our neighbor tells us the tulips are up on the south side of his house...There has been some agitation at our place for a certain newspaper joker to get out and clean up the yard, too.

Looks like a busy season ahead for yours truly. I'm tired already — SO LONG!

Red Lake Indians to Hold Election

To Vote on Setting up New Government for Band

The Red Lake band of Chippewa Indians in Minnesota, whose tribal government has become imparied by factional claims to tribal leadership, will be given the opportunity to hold elections to form a new government, Under-secretary of the Interior Hatfield Chilson announced last week.

He said the Bureau of Indian Affairs will supervise the two secret ballot elections.

First the band will have the right to elect a constitutional committee which will draw up a form of government it deems best suited to the band's needs.

Then the Indian voters can vote again in a referendum on the form of government proposed by the committee. Under-secretary Chilson said that whatever form of government is adopted will be decided by a majority vote.

At a meeting on Wednesday night of the Band at Redlake High school, Area Director of Indian Affairs R. D. Holtz of St. Paul read to the tribe a copy of the findings and recommendations of the Interior department committee which investigated the factional dispute in the early part of February.

Minnesota-Dakota Sugar Beet Assn. Meets at Hallock

Agricultural Agent of Northern Pacific R.R., Is Principal Speaker

The annual meeting of the Minnesota-Dakota Suger Beet Development Association was held last week at Hallock. Highlights of the meeting were an address by Mr. John W. Haw, director of agricultural development, Northern Pacific Railway, and Mr. Marvin Campbell of the First National Bank of Crookston.

Mr. Haw pointed out the growing demand for sugar with our increasing population. Main sugar producing areas of the U.S. which could step up production were California, the Columbia basin of central Washington and the Red River Valley. Haw said that of these three areas the Red River Valley was the best suited for this increase in production.

Mr. Campbell spoke of the economic effect on an area given to the production of sugar beets. He pointed out the increase in land value due to the fact that this region was suited by land, rainfall, and temperature conditions to the production of beets.

C. Einer Johnson, president of the Western Beet Growers Association summed up the meeting and pointed out the need for continuous effort on the part of the association to improve the lot of the beet growers of the Red River Valley.

Mercury Hits 46 Saturday, Sunday

Severe Weather Hits Atlantic Coast States

Lovely weather we're having, isn't it? Area residents should take special pleasure, too, in noting that, again, northwest Minnesota is one of the areas of the U. S. where nice weather prevails, as contrasted with Atlantic seaboard and New England states which normally have the kind of weather we're now enjoying while we shiver in snow and cold.

Oh well—it's quite nice to have the shoe on the other foot for a change. Enjoy it while you can—it probably happens only once in a life-time!

Officially we're getting the benefits of a warming trend that started Friday. Temperatures since Thursday ranged from a low of 10 Friday to highs of 46 Saturday and Sunday. The coolest day we've had recently was last Thursday with 27 for high and 11 for low recorded. No precipitation was reported during the period.

The KTRF forecast: partly cloudy skies, little temperature change through Tuesday. East-southeast winds will prevail, 10-15 m. p. h. diminishing tonight. High today, 45-50, low 22-28.

Mental Health Group Picks Staff Members

The Northwestern Mental Health Center board met in Crookston on March 18th.

Rental of the north wing of the Sunnyrest sanatorium was approved by the board. Repainting and minor alterations are currently being made at the sanatorium to prepare the rooms for office use.

Mrs. Lyle Brown, widow of the late Dr. Lyle Brown of Crookston, will be the receptionist for the mental health center.

The Board approved the appointment of Charles Larson as the psychiatric social worker. Charles Larson was born and raised in East Grand Forks, Minnesota, and attended the University of North Dakota. He was employed as a social worker for the Polk county welfare board during 1951 and 1952. He then attended the University of Denver and received his master's degree in psychiatric social work in 1954.

He was employed at the Winnebago State Hospital in Wisconsin for two years. He then went to Yankton, South Dakota and is currently employed at the Yankton State Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Larson have five children. They will plan to move to Crookston some time before July 1st, the opening date for the Mental Health Center.

Negotiations are in process for the appointment of the psychiatrist for the center. A psychiatrist educated in Minnesota, but currently working in a western state, is considering the offer of employment made to him by the board.

Dr. Mitchell Wetherhorn, currently working at the St. Peter state hospital, has been employed as the clinical psychologist and will move his family to Crookston shortly before he begins work on July 1st.

After completion of the hiring of personal for the Northwestern Mental Health Center, the board's next task will be to initiate a thorough study of the fees for services to be charged by the center. It is expected that a sliding scale of fees, based on the patient's income, will be adopted.

'38 Prowler Quint Has Reunion with Coach George Lee

ton. Doug Tegtmeier of KTRF "taped" the recording and he brought to life the exciting moments that carried the game into overtime, and which found the Prowlers winning by a 30 to 27 score on Earl Nicholson's field goal.

The Prowlers, in the championship finals, defeated Minneapolis North, 31 to 29, with Roy Lee tossing in a mid-court shot with seconds of play remaining to give the locals their well-earned victory.

An entertaining highlight was the showing of several clips of movies taken by Robert Lund depicting the welcome-home celebration and parade for the 1938 state champions.

Present at the banquet was Superintendent Harry R. Gough of St. Cloud. At the time that the Prowlers won the cage title in 1938, Mr. Gough was president of the state board of control and it was his privilege to present the championship trophy to the squad. On Saturday night, in a nostalgic ceremony, Mr. Gough reenacted that event by re-presenting the trophy to co captain Roy Lee.

Roy Lee, as spokesman for the 1938 squad, expressed the warm sentiments of the Prowler champions toward George Lee, their coach, and the benefits that they derived through his leadership and inspiration.

Coach Lee, who, since his residence in Dallas, Texas, has become a dyed-in-the-wool Texan regaled the crowd with anecdotes of his three years of coaching at Thief River Falls. Lee acknowledged the debt that he owed to his Concordia college coach, Frank Cleve, who was also present at the banquet. In conclusion, Lee presented the squad members, and Supt. Morris Bye, with suitably inscribed plaques as a memento of the reunion.

The ever-popular Mr. Bye, now superintendent of schools at Anoka, and who was in charge of the schools here in 1938 and instrumental in obtaining George Lee's coaching services in 1935, stressed the contribution that Mr. Lee and the 1938 Prowlers made in state high school athletics. The sportsmanship and character of this squad was of such a high caliber, stated Mr. Bye, that the school and community can rightly be proud of their accomplishments.

The reunion was concluded on Sunday morning, with the "boys" and coach Lee meeting for a late breakfast prior to departure to their various and wide-spread home.

Clayton Mathson Given FFA Young Farmer Award

sponsored by the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce.

In addition to the FFA and JayCee awards, five local businessmen, farmers, teachers, soil conservation men, etc., who have cooperated with the Lincoln FFA chapter were given honorary awards. These were Olaf Dahlen, James Parkins, Arnt Aune, Don Lawrence and Paul Stelmaschuk.

Paul Anderson, Lincoln high school director, was main speaker at the affair. In his short address, Anderson emphasized that in order to live a good life one must sow the best "seed" and make good preparations for living his life. Among the necessities of success he listed a noble purpose and a high aim in life, along with knowledge and a good education.

The main object of life, he stated, is to achieve something without being dependent on others. With adequate preparation, good seed and a lofty aim one can succeed in life, he said.

The program was closed with the salute to the flag, after which the group divided, part of which went on a short tour of the area vocational school and those remaining in the cafeteria viewing a movie concerning the nation's capital, Washington, D. C. which was filmed by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

Area Republicans Held Conference Here Wednesday

Interstate Road Project Advances

Minnesota Near Top in Utilization of Funds

Minnesota ranks 10th among the 48 states in utilization of federal funds for the national system of interstate and defense highways, E. Ray Cory, Austin, Minnesota AAA president said today.

Cory's statement was based on testimony recently presented to Congress by Bertram D. Tallamy, federal highway administrator. Minnesota has used 93 percent of its fiscal 1958 funds for the new federal highway system. Ohio leads all states having used 97 percent of its funds for fiscal 1959 at the end of last year.

The Minnesota highway department reports that 71.6 miles of the interstate system has been completed in Minnesota. "This doesn't mean that motorists can drive on the completed section, but it does mean certain construction goals have been met for that much of the state's new federal highway," Vince Bovitz, public information director for the highway department, said.

Minnesota will have 888 miles of federal interstate system highway when the entire project is completed.

"A balance between metropolitan and rural area work on the new highway system is trying to be met in Minnesota," said Bovitz. "Naturally, the metropolitan areas pose the toughest problems for construction of the interstate system."

The average utilization of 1958 federal funds for the new highway system is 72 per cent so Minnesota's 93% is evidence that the state is making better progess than most.

Report From Puerto Rico

The Rust Prevention Association has released a report which indicates new races of rust are being traced down early. 6,000 breeding lines of wheat, oats and barley are being exposed to rust races on the island of Puerto Rico.

The blood lines are infected with rust and only resistent varieties survive. It was found in the tests on that island, that one of the crown rust races attacks Ajax, Andrew, Rodney and Garry. Another race attacks Minland and Minhafer. Some races attack Selkirk and the new durum wheats.

No one can predict how soon such races will become dangerous in or area. The important thing to farmers of Pennington County is that research work is going on daily. In the never-ending struggle with other forms of life, such as disease organism, insects, and weeds it is imperative man is in complete command. A serious rust epidemic can wipe out over a wide area and inflict severe losses. Since the development of new and different diseases, insects and weeds goes on regardless of what man does, it is well to anticipate developments and to be prepared.

Forage Stands

Green, lush, field of alfalfa, brome or other forage crops don't come by accident.

They're a result of careful planning and seeding practices.

First, plan a mixture of legumes and grasses, mixtures such as alfalfa-brome-timothy outyield alfalfa alone or most other combinations in Minnesota. If the field is for hay, silage, or pasture, it should contain alfalfa and bromegrass—both tall-growing crops. There should be enough grass to prevent bloat if pastured.

If the field is for hay only, use more legume and less grass.

Seed the field in spring, if possible. Legumes need to be seeded shallow, on a firm seedbed. Don't cultipack when the soil is too wet. Seed the companion crop, such as oats, at half or two thirds the normal seeding rate.

Legumes will get a better start if the field is first fertilized. Apply this fertilizer according to soil test.

If there is any danger of the companion crop lodging, shading or using up too much moisture, cut it for silage or hay. This can often mean the difference between a good forage stand and no stand. You can also graze off the companion crop with cattle or sheep, if you're careful. But don't graze continuously or when the ground is soft.

Trip To West Coast

by Mr. & Mrs. A. Grandstrand

On December 2, we left Thief River Falls for our trip to San Francisco. Our excursion trip really started after we boarded the California Zepher out of Omaha, Neb. This train is a Vista Dome Streamliner. We rode all night through Nebraska and by day we had left Denver, Col. the Mile High City.

Westward from Denver our route took us through some of the wildest and most rugged section of the Rockie. We passed through 45 tunnels in all, the longest of these is 6.2 miles long. It is called the Moffat Tunnel and somewhere in this tunnel is the Continental Divide, by now we elevated to 9239 ft. above sea level. At Crescent City, Colo. we got our first glimpse of the main range of the Rockies, with South Boulder Canyon and the Gross Reservoir, which is part of the Denver water system. At the west portals of the Moffat Tunnel is the Winter park area, which offers ideal sports for skiers and tobogganers.

At Frazer, Colo., a region of meadows and canyons are fishing streams, which are made famous by the nations leading men, including president Eisenhower. At Granby we joined the Colorado River which the Zephwest of this town we saw the Hot Sulphur Springs and enter the Byers Canyon. Soon our train entered one of the deepest and most rugged of all gorges, the Gore Canyon of jagged rock and its walls tower 1500 ft. above the river. At Glenwood Springs the area became more level and is famous for it Yampah Hot Spring. From here we entered the more agricultural and livestock region. Uranium plants are along the route. The next morning we had passed Salt Lake City, Utah and the great Salt Lake which is the largest inland body of salt water in the western world.

As our train rolled westward we entered the Sierra Mountain range with headquarters of the Feather River and the Feather River Canyon.

At Oakland we ended our train ride and went aboard the Ferry boat which took us on a 20 minute ride to the San Francisco Ferry building where we met our relatives. During our three months stay in San Francisco we visited many important places, such as the International, United and American airports. The largest and most beautiful is the International. We visited the old Spanish Mission, San Juan Batista. We were allowed to inspect the place. The furniture had been made of lumber and the walls were bare except for the Crucifix.

One Saturday we drove along the shores of the Pacific Ocean and we viewed the Cliff House which is built on a cliff. It is the seal rock with its sea lions. Then we drove to the Golden Gate Park with trees, shrubs and flowers imported from all over the world. From there we entered the Oriental Tea garden. Tea and fortune cookies were served at small tables in the tea house. The cherry trees were in full bloom and were very beautiful. In this garden were many brooks and pools and lots of gold fish were in the pools.

I think the most interesting sight to us was the Aquarium, as it has 8,300 species of fish. Of these was an electric eel which has a charge of 600 volts. Snakes and turtles were also housed in this building. Outside the main entrance was a large pool surrounded by palm trees and sandy beach. Here a large number of alligators were kept. At the Planetarium, hour long sky shows were presented of breath-taking beauty. The large projector beamed sparkling images of the stars unto a 65 ft. aluminum dome which revolves like the sky moves.

The Science Museum displayed mounted specimens of North-Americas most beautiful birds and animals set against backgrounds showing their natural surroundings. One day we rode over the San Francisco Bay Bridge, the world's largest, 8½ miles, including approaches. We visited China town on the day of the Chinese New Year. There was a Chinese New Years band, dragon dance, and parade and choosing of a queen. We also made a trip up to the Coit tower. The glass enclosed observation tower is 510 ft. above the Bay. Then of course we had to visit the little Swedish Restaurant famous for its Smorgasbord. Wall hangings had swedish embroidery and swedish pottery and copper pots and pans trimmed the shelves.

A gracious hostess, dressed in a swedish costume with embroidered white apron and cap greeted us. A waiter dressed in black trousers and short red coat trimmed in gold and black showed us to our table. We had a bountiful smorgasbord of many kinds of meat, vegetables, fish, salads, rice pudding, fruit soup, and many kinds of bread. Our table was beautifully set with crystal and silver on red and white and blue checked gingham mats.

The last Sunday in California we took a trip to Santa Cruz. This place is famous for its boardwalk and the choosing of contestants for Miss America.

At Santa Cruz was a lovely, sandy beach and many movie stars have homes in this area. Bing Crosby has a racing stable in this vicinity. Our trip home that day took us through the mountains with its large eucalyptus trees giving off a lovely fragrance. We spent a most enjoyable time on the West Coast.

Austin Wins State Basketball Crown

Coach Ove Berven's towering Austin Packers, showing improvement with each tournament game, won the 1958 Minnesota state high school basketball championship when, on Saturday night in the finals of the tournament played on the Williams fieldhouse court in Minneapolis, they defeated the Brainerd Warriors, 68 to 63.

In preliminary games played on Saturday night, the Bemidji Lumberjacks of Region Eight, the pre-tourney favorite, won the consolation title by edging out Cloquet, 59 to 57. In a game to decide third place, the powerful Willmar Cardinals, with well-balanced scoring, defeated Mankato, 70 to 41.

In the championship tilt, Austin's superior height and rebounding strength proved too much for the ever-trying Brainerd team. The Packers, after leading by a 34 to 23 margin at the intermission, increased their advantage to 53 to 49 entering the final quarter. Roger Voss, the tall Austin center, played a strong game for the Packers in the second half and the game developed into a duel between him and John Emerson, the sturdy Brainerd center.

In the final stanza, a pair of Brainerd field goals, by Emerson and Wayne Anderson, evened the score at 53-all, but the Packers, refusing to yield to the tournament pressure, moved into a [illegible] to 57 lead with but three minutes to play. Brainerd lost several of their "key" players, Wayne Anderson, Jim Brown, and Roger Mollanen in the final minutes as the Warriors committed numerous fouls in their efforts to break up Austin's semi-stall score-protecting tactics.

In state tournament first round play on Thursday, Austin barely edged out Cloquet, winning by 53 to 51 score; Willmar rolled over a young Brownton team, 66 to 55; Brainerd upended the tournament-favored Bemidji Lumberjacks, winning by a 77 to 72 score; and Mankato bested Mora, 71 to 60.

In the semi-finals on Friday night, Austin, on a field goal by Manley Osborn with but 12 seconds of play remaining, eliminated Willmar, defeating the Cardinals, 61 to 60. Brainerd, although playing a sluggish game following their win over Bemidji, held off Mankato to win by a 59 to 56 score.

In consolation first round play on Friday afternoon, Cloquet defeated Brownton, 57 to 50; and Bemidji, with a fine display of scoring prowess, trounced Mora, 82 to 57.

The WORLD OUTDOORS

By [illegible]

SHORT shots concerning the furred, feathered, and finned:

The pocket gopher is aptly named. Fur-lined pockets may be found on each side of the head and neck. A busy gopher may sometimes be seen stuffing one pocket and then the other with food or nesting material.

A jackrabbit sometimes may weigh seven or eight pounds and can leap 15 or 20 feet in a single hop if he really gets excited.

Thousands of years ago, we're told, there lived in North America a giant beaver, longer than a black bear. It measured 7½ feet, counting its tail. Our present-day beaver never stops growing — but doesn't grow fast enough, or live long enough, to approach the size of his giant ancestor.

The fox family operates as a unit in the summer when the parents teach the young to hunt. Foxes, like skunks and badgers, are often abused. But each performs mankind a good service by keeping other animal life under control. It has been estimated that a single fox will kill more than a thousand rodents per year.

The skunk often lends a helping hand to waterfowl. How so? Well, waterfowl will refuse to nest in marshes where too many turtles live—for obvious reasons. Skunks keep turtle populations in check by destroying their eggs.

Boat, Sport and Travel Show Set for Minneapolis

The silver anniversary Northwest Boat, Sport and Travel show will be presented at the Minneapolis Auditorium April 4 to 13 inclusive.

The show will have more than 40 displays of tackle and equipment and an all-time mark of more than 30 travel displays. There will be travel presentations from eleven states and five Canadian provinces. Minnesota will have 13 booths and Wisconsin six.

DFL to Set Farm Platform March 29 at Alexandria

Delegations from DFL farm platform meetings in 30 counties, as well as interested farmers from all parts of Minnesota, will be in Alexandria Saturday, March 29, for the state-wide DFL farm platform building sessions, Ray Hemenway, Minnesota DFL chairman, announced. Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

According to Plan?

So the Bemidji Lumberjacks, with Ray Cronk sitting on the bench, lost their first round game to Brainerd, 77 to 72.

During the season, Bemidji lost but one game, and that loss was to the Moorhead Spuds of district 23 and region 6. And the big factor in giving the Spuds their two-point win over the Lumberjacks, in a game played on the Concordia college floor, was that all-state Ray Cronk was fouled out of the game.

Brainerd is the Region Six representative in the state high school tournament, and it could very well be that the Moorhead coaching staff had advised the Brainerd cage mentors that the "weak chink" in the Bemidji team was Cronk's tendency to commit "slapping and grabbing" fouls. With their superior team speed, the Brainerd club was able to maneuver their playmakers into positions where Cronk would be "lured" into committing fouls. That could very well have been the strategy, for of the twelve fouls that were called on Bemidji Thursday, five of the infractions were charged to Cronk.

Without Cronk in their lineup, the Lumberjacks are just an ordinary district championship team.

All Stars

Last Monday we accepted the gracious invitation to accompany Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Johnson on a trip to Moorhead and the Concordia college fieldhouse to see their son, Art, in his final basketball appearance of the season. Art was a member of that Fargo-Moorhead college all-star team that played the NDAC college senior all-stars in an exhibition game on Monday night.

The F-M college all-stars scored a resounding 94 to 56 triumph [illegible] stars. As teammates on that Fargo-Moorhead club, Art had such players as Warren Arman of [illegible] Bolger and Otto Dulski of MSTC; Dick Vinger of NDU; and Wendell Franke and Dave Ophelm of Concordia.

The game was featured by the outside shooting of southpaw Lowell Bolger, with the blond Dragon forward hitting with remarkable consistency from his position off to the right of the lane. Arman, the big Aggie center, who played at a forward in Monday night's tilt with Art filling the pivot, was the game's high point man with 33 points. Bolger garnered 26 points.

After watching Bolger's sharpshooting efforts, the Concordia fans commented on what a terrific club the Cobbers would have had this season if they had possessed such a player as the former Moorhead high star. Cobber opponents then would not have dared to "sag" two or three men back on Art, as they did this past season.

It was of interest, too, to watch the preliminary game on Monday night, for in the lineup of the Sweeney's (a Fargo city league team) were such well-known players as Jim Akason, the former Halstad Pirate, Sammy Long, the one-time Cass Lake center and later a coach at Erskine, and Ken Keltan, the Warroad Lakers baseball shortstop.

Calling All Elks

On Tuesday night, March 25th, the Elks club bowling team will roll against the Viking Tavern team, and the results of that match, if it is a three game sweep for one of the teams, will just about decide the Business league championship.

This match has generated nearly as much interest among the Business league bowlers as the state high school basketball tournament creates among the cage fans. Brother Elks have all been alerted to give whatever aid and comfort they can to John and Jim and Cordy and the other purple clad bowlers.

Of as much interest as the bowling that will be produced will be the "chatter" between the two teams. The Elks, with their "grandfatherly" manners and their words-to-the-wise, have been able to un-nerve the young Vikings. Jim Dryden and Freddy Jensen, in particular, have been exchanging "father-and-son" words; and John (City John) Jaranson claims to be able to "hex" Don Haugen.

Well, as we said, Tuesday night's match should be fun.

Bemidji Has 2 on All-tournament Basketball Squad

As expected, and customary, the championship finals contenders, Austin and Brainerd, monopolized honors in the selection of the 1958 Minnesota state high school basketball all-tournament squad, with each team placing three players on the squad.

Bemidji, the Region Eight representative, and the winner of the consolation title, place Ray Cronk and Marc Kolden on the honorary squad. Cronk is a "repeat" selection, for the six-foot five-inch center was named to the squad last year.

The all-tournament squad:

Roger Mollanen, Brainerd, forward.
Dick Millen, Cloquet, forward.
Herb Stangland, Mankato, forward.
Ray Cronk, Bemidji, center.
Roger Voss, Austin, center.
Mel Harvey, Willmar, center.
Jim Emerson, Brainerd, center.
Tom Kegas, Austin, guard.
Manley Osborn, Austin, guard.
Jim Brown, Brainerd, guard.
Dean Anderson, Willmar, guard.

Pick State Farmer-Sportsman Winner

New York Mills Man to Be Honored in Minneapolis

Providing protection and food for wildlife, practicing soil conservation and working closely with youth has won Jeff H. Tikkanen, New York Mills, the title of Minnesota's outstanding farmer-sportsman for 1958. He will be honored at the Northwest Sports show, April 13, in Minneapolis.

Regional winners in the competition include: John Morton, Glenwood, northwest; B. C. Wilkins, Brainerd, northeast; Oscar Tveit, Kiester, southwest; and Harry Lason, Hasty, southeast.

Tikkanen is chairman of his local credit union and farmers' elevator and of the Otter Tail Dairy Herd Improvement association. He is a member of several farm organizations including the Farmers' Union in which he once served as an officer.

Active in youth activities, he is an instructor and local director of the New York Mills gun safety program. He has made his own farm available to 4-H members to harvest waterfowl food, and he has appeared on several 4-H programs.

He helped organize the New York Mills conservation club, serving as an officer for six years. He has been a member of the Greater Otter Tail County Conservation committee and is a supervisor of the East Otter Tail Soil Conservation district.

Marilyn Halvorson of TRF Proves Skiing Ability at Sun Valley

Marilyn Halvorson, 20, first set foot on skis two months ago at Sun Valley, Idaho.

The actual date of her first skiing adventure was Dec. 10, 1957. On Feb. 23, Marilyn placed third in the women's championship ski competition.

Marilyn, a native of Thief River Falls, came to Sun Valley last fall. She was employed as a maid, but will soon be acting as life guard and pool attendant at the resort.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Halvorson of Thief River Falls, Marilyn is an all-around athlete—now that she's learned to ski.

A June 1956 graduate of Lincoln high school at Thief River Falls, Marilyn was active in volley ball, basketball, softball, tumbling and soccer. She also liked to skate, play tennis, swim and ride horses.

Experts at Sun Valley were flabbergasted on Jan. 31 when Marilyn—just 42 days on skis—recorded the third fastest time for a woman on the Dollar Mountain giant slalom course.

Marilyn speeded in and out of the barriers in 1:19.4—two seconds off the record. For her achievement, Marilyn received a Gold Ram pin from the resort.

Marilyn has had just four ski-class sessions with instructor, Vince Falco. But her working hours allow her plenty of practice time on the slopes.

Prowler Quint Piles up 1280 Pts. in Season

Coach Al Adams' Prowler basketball squad, in compiling a season's record of twelve wins and eleven losses, amassed a total of 1280 points while allowing their opponents a total of 1207 points. This 1280-point total compares favorably with last season's mark of 1292 points, which figure set a school record. This 1292 record was established in a 24-game schedule.

In the season's individual scoring column, junior forward Phil Hanson, with 188 field goals and 63 free throws, was the Prowlers' high-point man with 299 points. Dave Rasmussen, also a forward, rapped in 100 field goals and fifty-five free throws for an aggregate of 255 points. Mickey Hanson, at a guard, also hit the 200-point figure, having 88 field goals and 25 free throws for a 201-point total.

Center Dave Hanson, who played in four early-season games before being lost to the squad because of an infraction of State League rules, scored 87 points. Hanson's 87 points, together with the 424 points he tallied as a sophomore and the 577 points he scored as a junior, had a three-year aggregate of 1088 points, setting a school individual career record.

Bar Group Tells How to Figure Income Tax

(This is the thirteenth in a series of articles on income tax. These articles are made available as a public service by the Minnesota State Bar Association, public relations committee.)

On both your federal and Minnesota returns you may subtract a certain percentage of your gross income (the standard deduction) instead of your actual deductible expenses. While using the standard deduction is faster and simpler its use may not always save you taxes. This is particularly true for home owners. It is always advisable to determine the total amount of your deductible personal expenses. Your allowable travel, transportation, and business expenses should be excluded from this computation since they may be deducted even though you take the standard deduction. If your deductible personal expenses exceed $1,000 or 10% of your adjusted gross income (the figure on line 11 of your federal return and line 8 of your state return), you should not elect to use the standard deduction.

You may find it advisable to take the standard deduction on your state return and not on your federal return, or visa versa. If you and your spouse file separate returns, and you itemize your deductions, your spouse cannot take the standard deduction. If you take the standard deduction, you may still deduct your travel and transportation expenses. If you are an outside salesman you may deduct all of your business expenses in addition to the standard deduction.

Many individuals fail to take the credits against tax which they are allowed on their federal returns for retirement and dividend income. The dividend credit is restricted to dividends from domestic corporations, but is not difficult to compute. Only the following groups of taxpayers will be concerned with Schedule E in which the Retirement Income Credit is computed: (1) Persons under 65 years of age who received pensions and annuities under public retirement systems, such as Armed Forces retirement pay, and (2) persons over 65 years of age who received income such as pensions and annuities, interest, gross rents, and dividends. If you are in either of these two groups you should carefully examine page 15 of your federal instructions to determine whether you are entitled to a credit against your tax. Your credit will be reduced by amounts you received in 1957 as social security, and, if you are under 72 years of age, by amounts you received as compensation for your services, such as wages, salaries, or professional fees in excess of certain specified maximum amounts.

The next step in computing your federal income tax liability is to subtract payments you have already made, both by way of estimate and withholding, to determine whether you must pay an additional sum with your return when it is filed or whether you are entitled to a refund. If you were employed by two employers during 1957, your should carefully examine your W-2 statements to determine the amount of F. I. C. A. tax withheld during 1957. If more than $94.50 was withheld, the excess may be treated as withheld income tax. See page 5 of the federal instructions. Such excess amount is deductible as taxes from your gross income on your Minnesota return and should be included in line 7.

If you are entitled to a refund of taxes and want it paid to you rather than credited on your 1958 estimated tax, you must so indicate on line 20 of your federal return. Many taxpayers neglect to do this and thereby necessarily delay payment of their refund.

HEADS RED CROSS DRIVE FOR LIFE SAVED

Stock Offered in Development Corp.

Group Designed to Give Aid to New Businesses

A group of Mankato businessmen purchased the first block of stock in the newly-formed Minnesota Development Corporation. The offical sale took place March 19 in the directors' room of Northern States Power Company and involved 150 shares purchased at $50 per share for a total of $7,500.

C. T. Bremicker, executive vice president of the corporation, and also an NSP vice president, stated that "the Minnesota Development Corporation is designed to provide a workable vehicle in the extension of credit to new and exiting business in Minnesota through the pooling of funds of existing financial institutions to make loans which these institutions cannot meet alone."

The corporation is a result of a law passed at the 1957 session of the state legislature and has the backing of the Minnesota Bankers Association. The MBA has had a committee of bankers working on the organizational stages since the law was passed.

Bremicker added that the corporation is a co-operative venture tying business and industry and financial institutions into a joint effort to help small and growing business and to bring new business into the state.

The law authorizes the sale of $1,000,000 in stock at $50 per share. The stock is to be sold to business and industry and $250,000 worth of stock must be sold before the corporation can begin doing business.

Bremicker said his goal is to sell $500,000 in stock as the law states that a credit pool 10 times the amount of stock sale can be made available from financial institutions and the banks in the state can provide a credit pool of more than $5,000,000.

"BEAUTY SPECIALISTS" WOULD BAN BILLBOARDS

Resolutions, unless resolutely supported, may turn out pretty futile. Minnesota State Horticultural Society—dedicated to "horticulture, home gardening, the state"—is resolutely opposed to billboards along Minnesota's new federal highways. A venerable 92 years old, with 450 affiliated local groups running the membership total to more than 10,00, the Society believes, and urges upon the rest of Minnesota that the state should be "conscious of and concerned with the natural beauty of Minnesota as seen from our highways; that this natural beauty is already impaired by advertising signs not adequately controlled by present laws; that construction of 900 miles of federal highways through scenic parts of Minnesota will open the way to greater impairment", and that therefore adequate state and national laws should ban advertising along the entire federal system within this state.

Christmas Seals Get New Director

J. G. Neal to Take over Position Next Monday

A new managing director and new officers will take over their duties at the Minnesota Tuberculosis and Health association on April 1 when the association marks the beginning of a new fiscal year.

J. G. Neal, who has been supervisor of health, physical, safety and recreation education for the state department of education since 1950, will become managing director of the state Christmas Seal association. He succeeds Dr. E. A. Meyerding of St. Paul.

Also taking office will be the new president, Dr. C. A. McKinlay, Minneapolis, specialist of internal medicine at the University of Minnesota medical school, and vice presidents, Dr. W. C. Chambers, Blue Earth, and Dr. Kathleen Jordan, Riverside Sanatorium, Granite Falls.

Other officers are: Mrs. C. L. Oppegaard, Crookston, secretary, and T. C. Maccubrey, St. Paul, treasurer. Governor Orville Freeman and James Lewis Morrill, president of the University of Minnesota, are honorary vice presidents.

PLANNED AND UNPLANNED

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

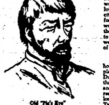
Cities and Town Lots

★ For some years Stillwater was the principal community in the area that was to become the territory and the state of Minnesota. The town was named for the city in Maine from which so many of its founding fathers came.

When the territory was created, St. Paul, on the big river, was designated as its capital. The census of this city in 1850 showed 1112 residents and St. Paul held the lead in population among Minnesota cities for a quarter century.

Beginnings of a Capital

The founder of St. Paul was a bootlegger, one Pierre Parrant. He was described as coarse, ill looking, with one eye and that a sinister one. He was known as Pig's Eye and since his business was popular his name was attached to the early settlement. In 1841, Father Lucian Galtier built a chapel in this rough community. He called his log church St. Paul's and as the community thrived it changed its name from that of a bootlegger to that of a saint.



Old "Pig's Eye"

Minneapolis Gets a Name

The first settlement in what is now Minneapolis was at the falls on the east side of the Mississippi and was known as St. Anthony. Franklin Steele, a very enterprising citizen, took up a claim on the east side of the river in 1838. Calvin Tuttle and R. P. Russell started a store the next year. Pierre Bottineau bought a good part of the future community for $150. John H. Stevens took up a claim west of the river and settlement began on his property. The two communities were united by a bridge built in the early 1850's. This was the first bridge across the Mississippi anywhere.

The evening of November 4, 1852, Charles Hoag, a teacher, did not sleep easily. As he tossed on his bed he thought of a name, "Minnehapolis", a combination of the Sioux word meaning water and the Greek term for city.

The first thing in the morning Hoag wrote a letter to the St. Anthony Express suggesting this name. The communication appeared and for the first time the name Minneapolis was seen in print. Since the "h" in the Hoag suggestion was silent, this letter was dropped. The reaction to the proposal was immediate; thus a city was named.

The Head of the Lakes

The early days of Duluth were very, very hard. The city was faced with a shortage of food. Not enough land was cultivated to produce potatoes. Flour was fifty cents a pound, for it came in on human backs from the St. Croix. Land was without value. The owner of two lots in what is now the center of the city offered them to a trader at Superior for two pair of boots. The merchant would take no such chances. People left the community, many on foot with rifles to take game on the way out, and others were taken out by sympathetic captains of itinerant ships.

Hungry but Hopeful

Duluth was short on food but long on hope and city lots. April 11, 1856, the plat of Oneota, later to become part of Duluth, was placed on record. Within three years five other plats were surveyed and recorded. By 1860 Duluth had eighty residents living in a community 17 miles long containing 40,000 surveyed lots. Twenty years were required to bring the population to 3500 but the discovery of high grade iron ore on the Mesabi increased the number of lots by another 40,000. Today the city of Duluth extends for 26 miles along the shore of the great blue lake. It is two and a half miles wide in some places. Three hundred ninety plats containing 116,000 lots have been recorded.

More Ambitious Towns

As the population of the Minnesota frontier expanded hundreds of new communities came into existence. The basis of virtually all of them was speculation.

Early Brainerd

There were two eras of town expansion and speculation in Minnesota. The first was in the territorial days which collapsed with the nationwide panic of 1857. In this period of wild dreams and a population of 150,000 enough town and city lots were laid out to serve a state with a million citizens.

Following the Civil War came a period of railroad construction that again stimulated imagination. At every few miles a townsite would be set aside, named, surveyed into lots and the whole countryside of forest and prairie would bloom again into dreams of population and profit.

In truth, the biggest business in Minnesota was founded in the future. Surveyors were in high demand. New communities attracted lawyers to keep titles straight. Newspapers were founded to add dignity and a sense of permanence to a town. Oftentimes, wild lands were mapped to show homes, buildings, schools and churches not yet built.

A Change in Population

The first people of Minnesota were bound for the land. With increased population, and trade and the development of industry, came thrifty and enterprising communities. From a territory, virtually one hundred per cent rural in population, came a state now more than half urbanized.

Minnesota has three great central cities, 97 communities of more than 2500 population, 127 towns with from 1000 to 2500 people, and 559 communities with fewer than a thousand good souls.

CONSUMERS' COOPERATIVE ASSOCIATION

On next Saturday afternoon, March 29, the Consumers' Cooperative Association will hold its 20th annual meeting in the city Auditorium. The company was organized in 1936 and started operating on March 22, 1937, so it now has actually completed 21 years of operation. And these 21 years of operation have been years of steady growth.

It started business with 170 members who had each invested $10, or a total capital of $1,700. That first year its sales added up to $96,653.15. The company books now show a total of 2,471 members and last year's volume of sales was $642,564.05.

The company is in excellent financial condition, with assets totalling $361,059.12, offset by liabilities of only $23,147.72.

In 1950 the company expanded and modernized its retail plant on Atlantic Ave. at Second St., borrowing $45,000 for an improvement program that cost $80,000. By 1960 the last of ten annual installments on this loan will have been paid.

That is an interesting success story for 21 years of operation.

The new association did have the advantage of starting with a business that already was established. Consumers' bought an operation that Land O' Lakes had started several years earlier. Buying the business on the installment plan simplified the problem of capitalization. And the new company continued an affiliation with Midland Cooperatives, Inc., a processing and distributing organization owned by 600 cooperative oil companies in four states. It was formed in 1927 when a few cooperative oil companies hired an agent to act as a broker and this became the Midland Cooperative Wholesale. The present name was adopted three years ago.

Through Midland Cooperatives, Consumers' has an ownership in a 12,000 barrel oil refinery in Oklahoma and a 20,000 barrel refinery in Kansas. Midland also is part owner, with several other large cooperative distributing organizations, of National Cooperatives, Inc., which operates manufacturing and fertilizer plants.

When the original stockholders of Consumers' Cooperative Association held their organization meeting on March 15, 1936, the following officers and directors were elected: Nels Fore, Oklee, president; John Funnesdahl, Thief River Falls, vice president; Owen Weckworth, Hazel, secretary-treasurer; and August N. K. Anderson and J. M. Theige of Thief River Falls and Robert Rambeck and Ole A. Olson of Goodridge, directors. Oscar A. Nelson, present register of deeds, was named manager.

Of this group August Anderson and Robert Rambeck have served continuously and are members of the present board. To another member of the present board, Ole Skaar, goes the credit of having laid the first $10 on the line for the purchase of a membership share.

Besides these is E. L. Swanson, director, and present officers, H. I. Finstad, president; Gunsten Skomedal, vice president; and Harry Solberg of Goodridge, secretary-treasurer.

Oscar Nelson served as manager through the first ten years of the organization's operations. Cliff Jorde, who started on a gas truck in 1943, succeeded Nelson and served as manager through 1949 when the present manager, Len Furuseth, stepped up from office manager to the position of general manager. Furuseth, a graduate of Lincoln high school and with business college training, started with Consumers' in 1947. Cliff Jorde is assistant manager and Ed Leiran, who has been with the organization since 1944, is office manager.

Four years ago Consumers' opened a Goodridge branch under the management of Alvin Halvorson of that community, and this has been a successful operation.

In terms of local industry Consumers' is an important business, providing work for 17 full time employees and a few more in the rush seasons. Besides petroleum products the company sells coal and has a big farm machinery business. It operates four delivery trucks, three for gasoline and one for coal, along with two pick-ups. It also has one heavy truck tractor with two trailer transport tanks, one for gas and one for heavy fuel.

Since it started operations in March of 1937 the company's sales have totalled $7,141,915.25. Cash refunds to patrons during that period total $128,384.89, and patrons earned equities not distributed now total $292,611.32.

Lots of statistics here, and statistics make dull reading. But the figures are important in measuring the growth of an organization. And the figures prove that the Consumers' Cooperative Association of Thief River Falls does have an exceptionally good record of healthy growth.

Editorials . . .

"There are four things in the moral life of a man, not one of which I have been able to carry out in my life. To serve my father as I would expect my son to serve me: that I have not been able to do. To serve my sovereign as I would expect a minister under me to serve me: that I have not been able to do. To act towards my elder brothers as I would expect my younger brother to act towards me: that I have not been able to do. To behave towards friends as I would expect them to behave towards me: that I have not been able to do."

Proud of Their Braves

All other signs may fail, but baseball is back and that is a sure sign that spring is just around the corner. Over in the neighboring state of Wisconsin tickets for the first home game of the Milwaukee Braves were offered for sale a week ago. The ticket windows were to open Sunday afternoon. On Saturday afternoon the lines began to form and the first ticket was sold to a 78 year old fan who had held his position for a period of more than 24 hours.

Wisconsin folks are proud of their Braves, and properly so.

Oil in Abundance

Out of Dallas, Texas, comes a Wall Street Journal report that "oil well drilling activity dropped to an 11-year low as the oil industry, faced with a glut of crude oil and refined products inventories, continued to lag in searching for new domestic oil reserves."

Well, speaking of wells, that seems to be the sensible thing to do. There's no percentage in drilling more producers if you can't sell the products that present wells are already producing.

But even with that curtailed program there were 1,604 well drilling machines in operation in the country and we can get some comfort out of knowing that the exploratory work is continuing at a fairly steady pace. It appears that the present generation will not have to worry about any shortage of petroleum products, and we can get considerable comfort out of that thought. In the meantime fuel oil, high priced as it is, is being sold here for not much more than it would cost to deliver fox water into the area from the Gulf of Mexico.

Our Thumb Twiddlers

Connecticut dairy farmers have asked for a federal marketing order to protect them from the competition of imported New York milk. They now are organized under a state law, which does not give them the protection they seek.

The item is of interest mainly as an example of the many absurdities in the system of milk sales control thruout the country. No other food product is being subjected to such ridiculous regulations. The one hope is that the extremes will point up the need for reform and much needed relief from unreasonable restraints.

Minnesota and Wisconsin are the states most adversely effected by the barriers against the transportation and sale of milk. In these states the industry lacks courageous leadership. Our cause is weakened by the fact that here in Minnesota our leading politicians are hopeful of becoming President and they do not wish to become involved in arguments with states that have many voters.

The University of Wisconsin has perfected a process for packaging a condensed sterile whole milk that will not require refrigeration, and eventually such a product may enable us to penetrate the barriers and share in a national market for this product, as all other products compete freely for consumer dollars. It is unfortunate that here in Minnesota and Wisconsin, the two high producing dairy states in the nation, the industry is twiddling its thumbs waiting for a future merchandising miracle to give it the rights to which it is entitled.

Credits Versus Intelligence

A Washington Post "favorite teacher" contest brought a scrawled note from a first-grader expressing the wish that his teacher "was smart enough to teach the second grade".

The youngster's wish raises an interesting question about how much smarter a second grade teacher must be, or a fourth grade teacher, or an eighth grade teacher, or a teacher at the secondary level. It opens the door to the whole controversial field of teacher qualifications and standards.

As organized bargaining groups the teachers generally hold that pay schedules should be geared to college credits, and the more college credits a teacher has the more should be the pay. Experienced school administrators recognize the fact that teaching ability is only partially related to college credits, and are more inclined to measure earnings by performance rather than by preparation.

Capable school administrators, whose opinions we respect, have assured us that some of their best teachers have been the products of the so-called normal training departments, offering a limited teaching certificate after one year of training following high school graduation. They have attributed this not to any superiority of training in these one-year courses but to the fact that generally a better type of teacher-candidate is attracted to these one-year schools. They get the cream of the crop of needy young people who look to a few years of rural school teaching only as a first step, and as a means of earning enough to help themselves to better educational opportunities.

These normal training departments have for years been the target of the organized educators. Under constant and unfair attack they have been fighting a losing battle.

We have one of the few remaining departments of this kind here at Thief River Falls, where, for many years it has served well the needs of rural schools in northwestern Minnesota. How long it will be able to continue to survive will depend on the understanding and courage of the board members who decide these questions for us.

Another Experiment

(Christian Science Monitor)

The launching of a second American satellite is gratifying. And most folk will be glad that the Navy after all its troubles with Vanguard has scored a success. But it will be well if the American people can begin to look at this whole rocket business less as a horse race and more as part of a wide effort to open new fields of thought and activity.

There is more significance in the fact that another kind of rocket has succeeded than in assertions that the Navy has matched the Army—or that the United States has matched the Soviet. Actually there is no "matching" in any exact sense.

Each of the satellites has been designed for different purposes. The latest, only 3¼ pound sphere, is chiefly intended to test the practicality of using the sun's rays to charge its solar batteries and keep its radio operating. The radio is set to record temperatures. The third stage of the Vanguard is also orbiting. It used a solid fuel propellent—which many experts believe is the best hope in missile development.

Descriptions of the Vanguard disclose its extremely complicated structure and explain the many chances for failure. Quite possibly some of the failures were more instructive than this success. The public would do well to place both in perspective as parts of the long process of experimentation where the big goal is more knowledge.

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

It's better to give than receive, because giving's deductible.

"No," said a club wit, speaking of his rival, "I never said he was conceited. All I said was that if I could buy him at my price and sell him at his own, I'd make a darned good profit."

We all admire the fellow who never gives up—almost as much as we like the chap who knows when to quit.

Sen. Humphrey's Newsletter

Anti-Recession Measures

Action is being speeded in Congress on a legislative program to combat the growing recession. As unemployment figures continue to mount beyond 5 million, a whole series of bills have been moving through the committees and on the floors of the House and the Senate for action, reminding some observers in Congress of the dark days of 1933. They are designed to put people back to work, to increase purchasing power by putting more money in people's pockets, and to encourage greater business expansion. A tax cut is being seriously discussed.

Farm Prices

As this newsletter goes to press the Senate has passed the joint resolution drafted in the Committee on Agriculture as S. J. Res. 150 (now bears the title of S. J. Res. 162) to prevent the Secretary of Agriculture from lowering price supports on any agricultural commodity beyond the 1957 price levels. When it becomes law this bill will block the Benson-announced price cuts on dairy products, wheat, and other commodities and will prevent another drop in farm income while a comprehensive new agricultural program is being written. Passage of this resolution by a narrow margin took representatives of all the commodity groups standing together—this fact demonstrates how important it is to have teamwork and cooperation in agriculture.

Public Works

Resolutions calling on the President to speed up spending on authorized civilian and military public works passed the Senate last week. This action can put many hundreds of thousands of people back to work if the President will now get his programs moving. Money is already appropriated for these projects, many of which have been receiving the "stretch-out" treatment for the past several years. I co-sponsored both the Johnson resolutions which passed by overwhelming majorities.

Housing and Roads

The Senate also passed last week a speed-up housing bill which should result in several hundred thousand more housing starts next year. But for the tie-breaking vote of Vice President Nixon, we would have been able to hold the line of the 4½% GI housing interest rate. As money is becoming easier to get, the 4¾% rate would have become more attractive to investors. As it is, veterans will have to pay several hundred dollars extra in increased interest payment on each home, unless the House of Representatives can knock the rate back down. In the meantime, Senator Gore's bill to expand the Federal highway building program, which I also co-sponsor, has passed the Public Works Committee and will be up shortly for full Senate action. This bill will increase the rate of highway construction next July 1 and make many more useful jobs available quickly.

Conservation

I have requested estimates of the backlogs of work on conservation in our forests, parks and other public and private lands, and with game and fish conservation from all Federal Agencies, and I am revising my Youth Conservation Corps Bill of last year.

THIS WEEK
—In Washington

With Clinton Davidson

There are many reasons why Washington officials are confident that the current business recession will not result in a collapse comparable to the 1929-33 crash that led to the closing of all banks for a time.

Two of the main reasons are the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. which, combined, insure more than $165 billion in bank deposits and savings & loan association accounts.

Officials of both insurance corporations with whom we have talked emphatically emphasize that your savings are safe up to the insured limit of $10,000 on deposit in any one bank or savings and loan association covered by either of the corporations.

This includes several thousand banks with insured deposits and savings totalling about $125 billion and some 3,800 Federal savings and loan associations insured with the FSLIC, covering accounts totalling about $42 billion.

There are, however, significant differences between the insurance provisions applying to banks and those applicable to savings & loan associations. These differences are not generally understood by many who have put their money in the associations.

Both advertise that accounts are insured up to $10,000, and that is true. The main difference, however, is in provisions covering withdrawal of your money. Many associations have neglected to make the difference clear in their literature.

The difference, however, would become significant only in the event of an extreme national emergency. As a matter of practice in normal times the two—banks and savings & loan associations—make immediate payments upon demand.

The FDIC requires that any bank failing to pay deposits or savings in full within 30 days may be declared in default, at which time the FDIC steps in to make good in full on insured deposits or savings accounts up to $10,000.

Since the FSALIC was created in 1934 only 38 insured savings & loan associations have required assistance. In 28 instances the FSALIC supplied cash to restore the association to a sound position and in three others it purchased assets. Seven were declared in default and investors were paid in full.

There is, however, no specified time limit in which a savings & loan association must be declared in default after failing to redeem all certificates in full. It may, if unable to pay all withdrawal requests, establish a numerical listing and apply a portion of receipts over an indefinite period of time until all requests are paid in full.

When unable to pay immediately and in full all demands the association is required to make a partial payment to the extent that receipts are available, but not to exceed $1,000, to applicants in the order in which they apply. After each partial payment the applicant goes to the foot of the list and awaits his next turn. This procedure is repeated over and over until the payment is received in full.

Congress should enact legislation to provide for more prompt repayment, or it should require that the savings & loan associations make this waiting period provision perfectly clear to those entrusting their money to them.

"You know a good doctor for this?"

It's a question we answer all the time. Sometimes it's someone new in the neighborhood. Sometimes it's an old friend who just doesn't happen to have a family physician. The boy sprains an ankle . . . the baby runs a temperature . . . Grandma has a bad cough. Troubled people often turn to us for help, and rightly so. We work closely with physicians, providing the medicines they prescribe and use in their offices. We know who they are, their specialties, their office hours. In an emergency we're good people to ask. And we're always happy to be of service to our friends and patrons.

REPORT from the GOVERNOR

by Orville L. Freeman

The question of daylight saving time arouses great popular interest and controversy. Surely the problems involved in this question are not as serious as many of those with which government is concerned, but they affect every person directly and individually. Many of you may recall that when the Minnesota legislature considered the question at its last session there was more public attention and active participation than on almost any other issue.

Setting the Dates

The controversy about daylight saving was so great that, when the Legislature passed its law providing that Minnesota should use daylight saving time, it left to the Governor the fixing of the dates on which it should begin and end. The legislators knew that, no matter what dates should be chosen, there would be objections.

April 27 to September 2

As most of you know, the dates I set for this year are from April 27th to September 2nd. In both cases, the time will change officially at 2 a.m. This early morning hour is the best time of the day at which to make the change, because so little is going on at that time that there is the least possible disruption and confusion. But setting the dates was not so easy.

Conflicting Opinions

The purpose of daylight saving time is, of course, to shift all regularly scheduled activities to an hour earlier during the long summer days, in order that there can be more time at the end of the working day in which people may enjoy sunshine and outdoor activities during the daylight hours. People employed in our towns and cities find that this change substantially increases their opportunities for outdoor activities.

On the other hand, farmers generally oppose the change. Their hours of work are determined less by the clock than by the weather in combination with sunrise and sunset hours. The only very substantial objection that was registered last year was from those parents who found that, during September, the daylight saving time required that children in some instances had to get ready for the school bus before daylight.

Because of the objections of these groups, I decided to set the closing date as early as September 2nd, the day after Labor Day.

Compromise

The dates set clearly reflect a compromise between who want more daylight saving and those who want less or none at all. I have sincerely tried to arrive at that compromise that would be most acceptable to the great majority of the people. These dates include most of our tourist vacation season. We will be back on standard time when schools opens in the fall. Any by April 27th our days are long enough so that no child will need to wait for the school bus before daylight.

In a way the difficulties in arriving at a fair compromise on this question are typical of the problems that arise in all of government and in living together in civilized society. There must be rules and standards that regulate many of our activities. It is seldom possible to get unanimous agreement on any such rule or standard. Yet it is essential that we have such rules. And every individual is better off than if we had no rules at all. Democratic governments and democratic societies try to arrive at the kind of compromises among conflicting interests and opinions that will be in the best interest of the greatest number of people.

THE MINNESOTA STORY

Prepared by the

MANY TONGUES

Many phases of pioneer life in Minnesota are reflected in the documents issued by the territory. Because many settlers could not read English, Governor Alexander Ramsey's first message to the legislature in 1849 was published in three languages—English, French and German.

The French version was printed in the St. Paul plant of James M. Goodhue, editor of the "Minnesota Pioneer". But for the German edition, special type, not available in St. Paul was needed. In order to print the German text it was necessary to go as far afield as St. Louis, a center of German settlement and publishing. Ramsey's message was translated into German by Wilhelm Weber, and it was printed by Arhtur Olshausen.

BLOOMER GIRLS

The "bloomer costume," designed and worn by Mrs. Amelia Bloomer about 1850, became an immediate sensation throughout the country. Comments about the dress, which consisted of ankle-length, rather loose pants covered by a short skirt, appear frequently in issues of the "Minnesota Pioneer" and the "Minnesota Democrat" during 1851. Although bloomers were a radical change in women's attire, the two St. Paul editors, seem to have approved of them.

A young lady "dressed in the new-fashioned Turkish trowsers" was greeted by "quite an assemblage" at the St. Paul levee when she stepped off the steamboat "Nominee" one June day in 1851, according to the "Pioneer". James M. Goodhue, the editor, must have been among the curious spectators, for he remarked that "The girl looked remarkably well, as far as we could see."

On July 24 Goodhue announced that the costume had made its appearance at Galena and Dubuque. He pointed out that the bloomer dress resembled that worn by Indian women and was, therefore, undoubtedly very practical. He did not understand why bloomers excited such surprise, for, he said, "This costume may be seen daily in our streets worn by the natives. It is what Mrs. Bloomer claims for it, 'neither Turkish, nor Persian, nor Arbian, but pre-eminently American.'"

Daniel A. Robertson, editor of the "Democrat", devoted many columns to quotations from newspapers all over the country making favorable comments on bloomers as an improvement over the wide, sweeping hoop skirts.

BREAKING THE ICE

Before the coming of the railroad in 1867, the Mississippi river was the principal means of communication between Minnesota and the outside world, and the spring breakup of ice in Lake Pepin was a great event in pioneer Minnesota. Usually, the ice went out about the second week in April. After that the territory could once more receive supplies and mail from the East.

A traveler writing in the "Minnesota Chronicle and Register" for May 4, 1850, described his trip from Iowa to Minnesota on the "Highland Mary", the first boat through Lake Pepin that season. He embarked at Dubuque on April 6. By the night of April 8, he had reached the foot of lake Pepin, only to find is still blocked by ice.

Unlike other boats, which turned back, the "Highland Mary" waited for the breakup, making occasional trips to the ice barrier and visiting near-by landings to secure food for the passengers. As the days passed its passenger list was increased by contingents from other less determined boats.

The "Mary" had a barge in tow. On April 16, when her captain attempted to ram his way through the ice the barge was badly damaged. Only quick beaching saved it.

Finally, on April 18, after the barge had been repaired, the captain sent his cerw onto the ice with axes and saws. At considerable risk to the men, a way was made for the boat. "On the morning of the 19th," wrote the "Chronicle's" correspondent, "we arrived here at St. Paul having on board some five hundred passengers and as much freight as the boat, with the assistance of its barge, would bring."

Of all the boats that since mid-March had been advertising trips to St. Paul, only the "Highland Mary" had kept its pledge.

MINNESOTA DAY

October 13, 1893, was "Minnesota Day" at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago. Some twenty thousand Minnesotans treekked to Chicago to be present and to look at the exhibits in the building which the state had erected to show offits products.

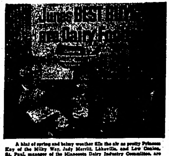
On display there were nine hundred varieties of flowers and grasses, sixty examples of native woods, a "good showing of iron ores," Alexis Fournier's oil painting of St. Paul, and a plaster cast of Jacob Fjelde's statue of Hiawatha and Minnehaha.

Minnesota exhibits were also arranged in other buildings at the fair. Not only grain, but flour, honey, and wood from the state were displayed in the agricultural building; fifty varieties of apples and a "revolving pyramidical display of grapes . . . worked by electric power" were featured among horticultural products. In the dairy building, Minnesota's only competing exhibitor of "high-grade butter" was Iowa.

A program of speeches and music marked the celebration of Minnesota day at the fair. The speakers included Governor Knute Nelson, President Cyrus Northrop of the University of Minnesota, and others. The band of the First Minnesota regiment furnished the music. Among those present were four ex-governors of the state—Ramsey, Marshall, Austin and McGill.

LAZY AFTERNOON . . . This is Perri, glamorous and tempermental new Hollywood leading lady, who takes star billing in Walt Disney's unique, new motion picture, "Perri." The feature, in color by Technicolor, is another Disney first — the first True-Life Fantasy. "Perri," based on the novel by Felix Salten, is released by Buena Vista. Starting Friday at the Avalon.

DAIRY MONTH CHIEF POURS—MILK, OF COURSE



A hint of spring and balmy weather fills the air as pretty Princess Kay of the Milky Way, Judy Merritt, Lakeville, and Lew Conlon, St. Paul, manager of the Minnesota Dairy Industry Committee, are treated to cool, refreshing glasses of milk by national June Dairy Month chairman, Pius Hostetler, Hillsboro, Kansas, president of the National Creameries Association. Hostetler was in Minneapolis to attend the Silver Anniversary convention of the Minnesota Dairy Products Association in the Radisson hotel. Minnesota's dairy princess, who will triple her activities during June Dairy Month, already has made 221 personal appearances since the opening day of the State Fair last August.

Growing Tuberous Begonias

Do you have a problem area on the north side of the house? Tuberous begonias may be the answer.

"Tuberous begonias can be grown successfully on the north side of the house or in partial shade from trees. A large variety of flower types is available: for example, blooms that closely resemble roses, carnations, camellias, single dahlias or daffodils. You can also get a wide selection of color from red or orange to salmon, pastel pink or snowy white.

The tuberous begonia should be started in early spring so plants are of good size at planting out time. Plant the bulbs in moistened peat or sphagnum moss and water them carefully. Be sure the water does not stand in the center of the bulb. In placing the bulb in a rooting medium, tilt it so the water will run off the bulb. After the plants are about two inches tall transplant them into pots containing a soil high in organic matter. Tuberous begonias like a soil slightly on the acid side.

You can set the plants out of doors as soon as the danger of frost is past. Put them directly into the soil or leave them in the pots. Tuberous begonias like a soil high in humus. If the soil is heavy and does not drain well, add sand and organic matter until it is easy to work. Space the tubers about 15 inches apart in the bed.

Ample moisture is requirement for growing high-quality tuberous begonias. But take care not to break them with heavy streams of water.

Staking can prevent breakage of the plants where they are exposed to high winds and rain storms. Insert stakes in the soil and support the stems by tying them to the stake.

In fall, reduce watering and dry the plants off. Store them for several weeks and then remove the stems from the tuber. Store in slightly damp peat or vermiculite at a temperature of 45 to 60 degrees.

Shabby Roof Spoils Effect Of New Paint

Cast a critical eye at the appearance of your roof before you paint your house.

This is the advice of New York color stylist Beatrice West, who says: "Putting a new coat of paint on a house with a shabby, worn-out roof is like wearing a fur coat and diamonds with dungarees. They just don't go together."

Miss West, who color-styles thousands of new and remodeled homes every year, says she always examines the roof of a house first before deciding on a color scheme because:

"Nothing spoils the appearance of an attractive home more than a weather-beaten roof. This is especially true when a house has been freshly painted. The new paint actually accentuates the shabbiness of the roof."

If the roof of a house shows signs of wearing out, Miss West says, she usually recommends a new roof of asphalt shingles in a color which will provide a basic shade for other colors on siding, trim, and accent spots.

"As for the added cost," Miss West says, "I explain that when a roof begins to look worn, chances are it will no longer be serviceable in a year or two. The family will have to reroof then, anyway, and they might as well do it now and enjoy a completely color-styled house instead of doing the job only halfway."

The many colors available in asphalt shingles are a big help to color stylists, Miss West says. "For example, by choosing a roof of blended green with a fleck of yellow in it, I can pick up the yellow for an accent color on doors, window boxes and shutters, while the trim and windows can be painted in a harmonizing green."

Another trick with roof color, Miss West adds, "makes houses look taller or longer and lower. You simply reroof a tall, awkward-looking house with a deep, dark color and it appears lower. The opposite is true of a small house that seems to be built too close to the ground. Light-color roofing gives it a lift, making it seem taller and larger."

GROWING WITH YOUR CHILD

Institute of Child Welfare
University of Minnesota

Parents and the 3 A's

"Why is it that, among children, given the right kind and amount of food, diapered and bathed regularly, some are happier, more relaxed and more readily conforming than others? Why is it that, starting out with similar potentialities, some attain wholesome characteristics as they mature and others do not?"

Psychiatrist Kanner of Johns Hopkins Hospital recently posed these questions, and then pointed out that research into human motivations has made it increasingly clear that physical care, no mater how conscientiously given, does not constitute the sum total of the young child's needs.

From the start there is a steady flow of feelings from the adult to the child, an offering of more than food or toys or clothes — a continuous stream of enjoyment or a succession of deeds performed as chores — an overtone of gentleness or harshness.

Dr. Kanner suggests for parents a cluster of attitudes made up of the three A's of affection, acceptance, and approval. He attributes greater comfort to a child who has cause to sense "they (my parents) like me, they want me, they think I am all right."

There are difficulties in day-to-day use of such a positive approach to child-raising. For example, how does Mrs. Dodds stop jealous Tommy from pinching the baby and simultaneously re-assure Tommy he is loved, wanted, and all right? Or how do the Evans spread the 3 A's evenly among their six children when they differ so widely in personality and behavior? Or when should a parent call an abrupt halt to free expression in one child when it encroaches upon the rights of the rest of the family?

The answer boils down to the difference between over-all strategy and momentary tactics. Deserved applications of harshness do not harm when the over-all atmosphere has the 3 A's. Possessed of a genuine fondness for their children and the courage to do the thing which is most "natural" for the occasion, parents have at hand a constructive discipline which is surprisingly independent of the exact method, and the "how" becomes subordinated to the "what" and "why."

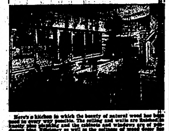
Wood Brightens Cook's Lot



Here's a kitchen in which the beauty of natural wood has been used in every way possible. The ceiling and walls are finished in knotty pine planking and the cabinets and windows are of ponderosa pine. Efficiency as well as the softness of wood decor has been built into the kitchen. Sink and stove are near each other, handy to the automatic dishwasher. Long counter tops give plenty of working space. The long row of sliding windows of ponderosa pine admits cheerful daylight, and allows a panoramic view of the children's play area outside. Window frames and sash are stained in natural tones to harmonize with the rest of the wood surfaces. Other features are a telephone and pencil sharpener, ceiling exhaust fan, hidden fluorescent lighting, and breakfast bar.

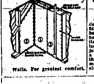
'Do-It-Yourself' Project Better Than 'Happy Pills'

Reach for a do-it-yourself project instead of a tranquilizing pill.

That's the advice more and more doctors are handing out today to ease the tensions of modern living. A simple home improvement project can be both relaxing and rewarding.

A popular do-it-yourself project is home insulation. Installing batts or blankets of mineral wool is light work which requires no special skills, uses ordinary tools, and the finished job will mean more year-around comfort plus heating and air conditioning economy.

The following diagrams show how mineral wool batts or blankets should be installed in areas accessible to the home handyman:



Walls. For greatest comfort, wall insulation should be thick enough to fill the space between studs to its full depth. Fit blankets of insulation neatly in stud spaces (1), and cut batts to fit odd shapes (2). Always leave flanges of vapor barrier at ends for stapling at top and bottom of wall. Keep the vapor barrier on the warm side of the wall and staple every six inches along stud. A staple gun makes this go faster. Work the batt or blanket behind small water pipes (3), leaving vapor barrier intact.

Ceilings. With vapor barrier down on warm side of ceiling, fit insulation tightly in place between joists. No stapling is necessary, but ends of insulation blankets should fit tightly together. For the most effective job, the mineral wool should be a minimum of three inches thick. Six-inch batts are recommended for air conditioned or electrically heated homes.

HOME OWNERS' QUESTION BOX

Q—I'm planning to varnish some cabinets. How can I avoid a lot of hard rubbing and polishing to remove the air bubbles that will form on the surfaces?

A—Try thinning the varnish with one part turpentine to five parts varnish. Then stir it—don't shake it—for 10 or 15 minutes. Let is stand for 24 hours to allow the varnish and turpentine to completely flow together. After this, the varnish should flow on without air bubbles.

Q—How can I keep screws from coming loose and popping out of soft wood from the weight of the fixtures I've attached to the wood?

A—Make small starter holes and fill them with thick glue. The screws will then force the glue into the surrounding wood fibres and voids, giving the wood increased hardness and resistance to screw pull-outs.

Q—The room we're planning to add to our home will have a roof that is almost flat. The house was recently reroofed with asphalt shingles. Can we use asphalt shingles on the addition?

A—Asphalt shingles can be applied to roofs that slope as little as two inches per horizontal foot. A new technique makes use of special precautions that protect the roof against leaks which might otherwise develop because of the relatively low pitch. Before starting on your guest room, check with your roofing contractor to make sure your plans call for a roof with at least the minimum two-inch slope.

Q—My wife and I often have admired the panel doors we've seen used in television plays. How can we obtain doors like these for our home?

A—Television set designers use many panel doors of ponderosa pine in their sets because of the three-dimensional effect of paneling. Usually, these doors are of a standard design that can be obtained from the local lumber dealer. Pine panel doors are popular with home owners because of their natural beauty, the ease with which they can be painted and their resistance to warping.

STORING CORDS

Avoid extension cords knotting up or kinking during storage. Wrap them around large empty tin cans before putting them away. A large empty juice can is ideal for this. Tuck the tail of the cord under the last turn to prevent unraveling.

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Jeanette Landrum, Dayton, Ohio: I remember when I was four years old I had the thrash in my mouth and my father took me about five miles to an old lady named Warren and she washed my mouth with oak leaves. She had kept the leaves in a cigar box. There was a big snow on the ground and I rode in front of my daddy in the saddle.

We children walked two miles to school. We had two dresses for "everyday" and one for Sunday, and we wore aprons with sleeves in them. Each had chores to do. I fed the geese and the calf, carried in wood and chips for the morning fire. Later, when I came home from school, I milked three cows.

On Saturdays, I did the washing and ironing and helped pick beans to string on a string to dry for winter use. We fattened and killed our own hogs and made lard for family use. We had our own sorghum molasses, and mother canned everything that she could for winter use.

We had no corn planter. For medicine, father gave us all a round of calomel and vermifuge every spring—to keep us able to hoe the corn.

We went to church and Sunday school every Sunday. We all sat on the front seat beside mother—who dared anyone to move or talk while the preacher was in the pulpit.

Forty-Five Bushels of soybeans per acre is a terrific yield more than double the state average. But that's what Clyde Rine, Winnebago, harvested last summer. Francis Januschka, Faribault county extension soils agent, says this was on low peat soil. Rine applied 200 pounds of 0-12-36 fertilizer, used Chippewa soybeans. The field had been in soybeans during each of the three previous years. Yet the plants in 1957 were strong and resisted lodging very well.

Evergreen Trees on the Henry Frerich farm in Benton county have made tenfold increases in land values. He planted the trees in a thin rye seeding and controlled the pocket gophers. Frerich, a cooperator with the Benton county soil conservation district and 1951 Star Farmer in the county, has had nearly 90 per cent tree survival. He planted one 40-acre field of sandy, hilly soil to trees about 5 years ago. Value of this land then was $5-10 per acre. Now, the same land is worth about $100 per acre.

Wildlife Area improvements pay off, according to Jack Anderson and Evard Berdan, cooperators in the Big Stone soil conservation district. They are making plans, with help from Charles Washburn, Soil Conservation Service worker, to improve a site for feeding ducks and other wildlife.

Contour Strips on a side hill mean that Alfred Woestehoff, Sibley county farmer, can use the road at the bottom of hills to get to other fields after heavy rains. Woestehoff established these strips with aid from Ed Drogemuller and Roy Quitney, U. S. Soil Conservation Service, Gaylord. The strips prevent erosion by keeping top soil on the hill side and by slowing the runoff. Before the road was unusable after heavy rains. Yields have gone up since the improvement, too.

TOE-NAILING TIP

An easy trick will keep 2x4's from slipping when being toe-nailed. Drive an extra nail just behind the loose board. Driving it in only an inch or so will keep the wood from slipping. It will pull out easily afterwards.

Split Level Best Bargain, Says Designer

The split level house gives you more for your money than any other style, says Rudolph A. Matern, a leading residential architect.

Among the advantages Matern sees in the "split" (see drawing) are:

1. Less waste space. "In a 1,400-square-foot ranch house with basement," says Matern, "1,400 square feet below ground are too dim and damp for really comfortable living space. In a 1,400-square-foot split, however, about 800 square feet of the below-ground area are 'lifted up' for full-time living."

2. Greater privacy, compared with the ranch style. Women especially have a feeling of greater security in bedrooms on an upper level.

3. Saving on garage construction. The money it costs to excavate the garage is less than it would cost to build a separate or attached garage.

4. Better room arrangement. A recreation room in a single level house usually has to be off the living room, greatly increasing the width and traffic length of the house.

5. Less land frontage needed. "How else than with a split," the architect asks, "can you get 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, 2-car garage, recreation room, and foyer in a 56-foot width or under 1,600 square feet of area?"

One drawback Matern admits is the tendency in split levels for floors over the garage to be cold, and a certain amount of unbalanced heating in the various levels.

"But the remedy is obvious," says the architect. "Thick insulation in the right places." Recommendations for conventional heating systems are at least 4 inches of mineral wool in the ceiling, 3 inches in walls, and 2 inches in floors over unheated areas such as the split level's garage. With central air conditioning or electric heating, the recommended formula is 6 inches of mineral wool in the ceiling a minimum of 3 inches in walls, and 2 inches in floors.

Truss Roof Lowers Cost Of Building

Families planning to build a new home may find they can get more house for the money by asking their architect or builder for a "truss roof" instead of conventional roof construction.

A truss roof is errected on a bridge-building principal in which angled supports put the entire weight of the roof on exterior walls. No load bearing partitions are needed.

Truss roof construction saves money in two important ways: with 2 x 4's instead of more costly 2 x 6 and 2 x 8 rafters.

2. With trusses, partition walls don't have to be put in until much of the interior work is completed. An overall floor, for example, can be laid without tedious cutting and fitting around partitions. Wallboard or other drywall finish can be installed all around the interior perimeter at a savings in labor costs. Wiring and plumbing also go faster.

A further advantage is that a truss roof always is a pitched roof. This means an attic space which can be ventilated for more summer comfort, plus an area usable for light storage. Asphalt shingles also can be applied on a pitched roof, giving the home-owner the advantage of a roof in his choice of colors, or in heat reflecting white.

Although truss roofs are most commonly used on one-story houses whose attics are not designed for living space, there is a special type of truss roof construction which allows for an expansion attic.

Beauty May Hide In Ugly Old House

Looking for a home to remodel? When you look at an old house, try to train your eye to see it not as it is, but as it should be.

Ornate-looking houses are basically simple in plan—a rectangle or a "T". If your strip off useless porches and remove gingerbread trim moldings, you have a simple structure that lends itself to modern styling and easy maintenance.

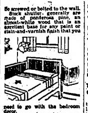
Take a tall, awkward two-or three-story house, put on a roof of dark asphalt shingles and paint the top story darker than the lower floor. This will make the house look several feet lower and more modern. A garage connected to the house by a breezeway will give the structure the horizontal look of today's newer homes.

Shutter Ideas Add Interest To Bedrooms

Interested in a novel, attractive, low-cost bed headboard? Here's an idea that has all those features and is in step with the current return of louver doors and shutters to smart modern interiors.

Use an ordinary stock shutter, slightly longer than the width of the bed (a double-bed mattress is 54 inches wide). Attach the shutter to the spring frame by metal braces, or by a wood framework. The shutter also can be screwed or bolted to the wall.

Stock shutters generally are made of ponderosa pine, an almost-white wood that is an excellent base for any paint or stain-and-varnish finish that you need to go with the bedroom decor.



A variation of this idea is to use a shutter as a headboard for a youth bed, and a pair of shutters for the sides, to keep the youngster from falling out. Saw the side shutters in half and hinge the sections together and to the headboard so they swing back as shown in the sketch. At night, each side is moored to the bed with a hook-and-eye.

LOUVER DOOR IDEAL FOR RAINWEAR CLOSET

Outdoor clothing, boots, and hats wet from rain or snow will dry out more quickly in a closet with a louver door.

Air circulating through the louvers does the drying job. It also prevents mustiness and discourages moths.

Ready-made louver doors of ponderosa pine are available from building material dealers in sizes to fit most door openings. The clear wood can be painted or stained to harmonize with any room decor.

TODAY'S HOME MATERIALS OFFER RUGGED BEAUTY

Functional design has made today's homes look better and last longer. A good example of this in a building material is the use of millions of rock granules embedded in the surface of asphalt shingles.

These granules provide color, plus a tough surface which protects the roof from sun and the wearing effect of rain, ice, and snow.

SECOND COATS

To prevent checking or wrinkling avoid applying final coats of paint until undercoats are thoroughly hardened.

Painting Hints from Paint Headquarters

How to Paint Concrete Floors

by Bud Kelly

Concrete floors you intend to paint have one mortal enemy: moisture. No matter how carefully you paint . . . no matter what you use, you'll never get good results if moisture is present.

Here's an easy way to find out. Take a piece of sheet metal (or an old piece of linoleum will do) and lay it on the surface for about 24 hours. Then check the underside. If condensation appears, you know moisture is present in the concrete — and no coating will stay for long until it is corrected.

If no condensation shows up, use two coats of SUPER-MIX Rubberized Floor Enamel. The first coat should be thinned 25% with turpentine or Tur-X to provide priming qualities. The second coat should be applied just as it comes from the can.

This dries to a fairly high gloss with a very elastic finish that takes a lot of punishment. Better allow at least twelve hours between coats.

We're talking here about common basement floors. But the same instructions apply to other concrete or wood surfaces — such as porches and steps — inside or out. Sometimes you'll run into an unusual concrete painting job — like a badly pitted surface or an oil-stained garage floor. In such cases, special handling is needed. Ask us about them. We've had a lot of experience in every type of painting — and chances are we can help. At least we'd sure like to try.

OCEAN TO OCEAN ACROSS SOUTH AMERICA—AND BACK—IN 41 HOURS!
CHEVY'S NEW V8 LEVELS THE HIGHEST, HARDEST HIGHWAY OVER THE ANDES!

To prove the durability of Chevrolet's radical new Turbo-Thrust V8,* the tremendous flexibility of the new Turboglide transmission,* the incredible smoothness of Full Coil suspension, we tackled the most challenging transcontinental road in the world — the 1,000-mile General San Martin Highway. To make it harder, the Automobile Club of Argentina sealed the hood shut at Buenos Aires — no chance to add oil or water or adjust carburetors for high altitude.

So the run began — across the blazing Argentine pampas, into the ramparts of the forbidding Andes. Up and up the road climbed, almost 2½ miles in the sky! Drivers gasped for oxygen at 12,572 feet — but the Turbo-Thrust V8 never slackened its torrent of power, the Full Coil springs smothered every bump, the Turboglide transmission made play of grades up to 30 percent. Then a plunge to the Pacific at Valparaiso, Chile, a quick turn-around and back again. Time for the round trip: 41 hours 14 minutes — and the engine was never turned off!

Welding Clinic Set for N.W. School April 10

Preparations are under way for an all-day welding show and clinic at the Northwest School and Experiment Station, Crookston, on Thursday, April 10. The show will be an all-day event, beginning at 10:00 a.m. and continuing until 9:30 p.m.

Representatives from ten or more manufacturers, dealers and handlers of welders, welding supplies and equipment are expected to be in attendance.

New equipment and the latest techniques in welding procedures will be demonstrated and discussed. Among these will be the new improved type of electrodes and welding rods, new materials and techniques in hard facing and procedures for cutting, bronze-welding, brazing, etc.

Of special interest will be several types of arc welders that are new in this area. One of these is a combination Alternating-Direct current welder which may be changed from A.C. to D.C. straight or reverse polarity welding by the mere flip of a switch. Another is an arc welder in which the welding is referred to as a Dual Shield Welding Process. It uses a bare continuous length of electrode for a spool or coil of wire. The electrode holder is connected to a cylinder of gas, carbon dioxide gas being used for mild steel welding and Argon gas for welding of none-ferrous metals.

In addition to these many makes of the latest models of farm-type arc welders, carbon arc torches, gas welding and cutting torches, regulators, goggles, helmets and other equipment will be shown and demonstrated.

The public is invited.

Good Movies Due, Meister Reports

Theatre Manager States Excellent Films Coming

There's happy days ahead for moviegoers in the upper midwest, according to Chuck Meister, manager of the Falls and Avalon Theatres.

Meister has just returned from Minneapolis where he attended a meeting of the theatre owners and managers March 13-14, at which Edward L. Hyman, vice president of American Broadcasting-Paramont Theatres, was the principal speaker

Hyman came to Minneapolis after a ten-week stay on the west coast during which he viewed advance prints of all major pictures which, for the first time in history, will be released at regular intervals during the next three months, thus the movie-goers will be assured a steady flow of top-quality features.

"Hyman told us," Meister said, "that he has never before been as enthusiastic over the number, variety and quality of pictures scheduled for this spring and early summer. His report covers 105 features, mostly in color and widescreen, which is a guarantee that there is something good ahead for every member of the family.

"There were more than 200 exhibitors present at the meeting", Meister continued. "They came from small towns as well as larger cities and every one of them was enthusiastic as I am about the future of motion picture theatre entertainment."

In addition to his gift of land and buildings, Olson has built a Camp Lodge and other facilities to house program for the children who attend. Y.M.C.A. communities in the state have contributed toward the building of camper cabins.

The new camp will accommodate boys from June 22 through July 20 and girls from July 27 through August 24, according to an announcement by Max W. Clowers, Director of the new YMCA Camp Olson. The North Central Area Council of Y.M.C.A.'s 30 South 9th Street, Minneapolis, will operate the new camp on behalf of its member associations and attendance will be open to all youth in the state.

Interim Group of State Legislature Holds TRF Hearing

A wide variety of interests were represented at the hearings held in the district courtrooms here Monday, by the Legislative Interim Commission on local government, but tax problems were the most prominent item discussed by the legislators and those appearing before the commission.

Rep. D. D. Wozniak, St. Paul, chairman, presided at the hearing. Other members, not all of whom were present here Monday, are Sen. Herbert Rogers, Duluth, vice-chairman; Rep. E. J. Windmiller, Fergus Falls, secretary, and Rep. Alf Larson, Hayfield, Rep. George Murk, Minneapolis, Sen. John A. Johnson, Preston, Sen. P. J. Holand, Austin, Sen. L. E. Westin, St. Paul, Rep. B. M. Wichterman, Plummer, and Sen. Donald O. Wright, Minneapolis.

Most of the morning session, which started at 9, was taken up with testimony given by Thief River Falls Mayor O. D. Belch and School Superintendent Irwin T. Mickelson.

Their testimony dealt with the various problems in taxes and finances related to the city and school district. Belch furnished the commission with financial charts pertaining to tax levies and disbursements in the city and county, while Mickelson was concerned with special problems facing the local school district particularly in the field of increased enrollment.

The hearing was adjourned at noon, when the commission members and other legislators present at the hearing attended a luncheon as guests of the Thief River Falls Rotary club.

The afternoon session was convened at 1:30, with Robert Berglund, Roseau resident testifying of the need for more research in processing products right in this area where they are produced and also stated the need for industry in the area.

He cited the great potential of the area in beet, flax and dairy production, adding that it would be highly advantageous to northwest Minnesota to be able to process raw materials produced here.

Robert Prickett, Middle River school superintendent, was the second to speak. He outlined school problems in that community as being the opposite of those in Thief River Falls in that school enrollment there is declining somewhat. He cited the long distances travelled by

Clock Records Exact Hour Ice Went Out

There was no guesswork as to when the ice on the river pool here broke up this spring — a clock had been rigged to stop the moment a weight sank, thus cutting off power to the clock and it showed that at 6:09 a.m. Wednesday the river ice gave way.

Shown here with the clock that recorded the event are Roger Tunberg, Stan Pladson, Wendell Olson and Raymond Johnson of the local Lions Club.

170 Children Attend Pre-school Roundup Held Saturday by PTA

The annual PTA sponsored pre-school roundup was held last Saturday at the Washington school gymnasium under the supervision of Mrs. Merle Lindberg, chairman, Mrs. Randall Noper, and Mrs. Margaret Race, school nurse. A total of 170 children attended as compared to 212 in 1957 and 242 in 1956.

Kermit Eastman, director of elementary education, spoke to the parents, following which the child's complete medical history was taken, and he was measured and weighed. His eyes were also checked and he met a kindergarten teacher. The parent and child were served lunch which was donated and served by PTA members.

Workers at the roundup included local nurses, student and practical nurses, kindergarten teachers, volunteers from the Knox, Washington, Northrop and St. Bernard's PTA groups, Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts.

$450 Turned in to Red Cross to Date

Solicitors Are Urged to Complete Assignments

With only a few solicitors having reported in to date, county Red Cross Treasurer Lester Gustafson reported today that approximately $450 has been contributed and accounted for in the current Red Cross drive in Pennington county.

Gustafson said only a few solicitors from the industrial and residential areas had turned in their packets so far, so that no indication of the 1958 drive's success can be noted at this time.

Because the drive is already behind schedule in the county, Gustafson urged that workers make their call-backs as quickly as possible and get their contributions in to him.

No report was available on the drive's progress in the rural areas of the county, Gustafson said.

New Cancer Film to Be Shown Monday in H. S. Auditorium

Presentation to Mark Start of Cancer Crusade Month in Pennington Co.

In an open letter to all Pennington county women's organizations, Mrs. Ormond Johnson, chairman of the Pennington county volunteer activities committee for the American Cancer society recently announced the showing of a new film concerning cancer. This film, entitled "Time and Two Women," is especially prepared to inform women about certain types of cancer prevalent among them.

Mrs. Johnson emphasized that this is a new picture. Last year, a film on breast cancer was shown and this was well received by those who viewed it. "Time and Two Women", which was released in January, is a carefully controlled presentation on cancer of the uterus, one which emphasizes the curability of this disease, which annually takes a needless toll of otherwise young and healthy women.

An invitation to view the film is extended to all adult women of this area. There will be no charge for admission, and it will be shown at the Lincoln high school auditorium at 8 p.m. Monday, March 31. A doctor affiliated with the local medical society will be on hand to answer specific questions which may be presented in a discussion period.

The cancer crusade month is designated as April this year. According to Mrs. Johnson, one of the best hopes to combat the disease lies in its early recognition and proper treatment.

Big Gathering Attends Road, Sewer Hearings

Many Objectors to North End Projects Appear at Sessions

A substantial percentage of affected local property owners voiced objections to four proposed storm sewer and street improvement projects at hearings conducted by the city council Monday and Tuesday evenings.

Aldermen James Winjum and A. J. Rau and City Attorney Robert A. Wurst were unable to attend the hearings, and Council President Bob Carlson stated that a decision will be reached later as to the next step to be taken. He pointed out that the council has the power to proceed with the projects if it decides that they are for the best interests of the city, regardless of the opposition.

More than 75 persons crowded into the council chamber Monday night when hearings were held on two storm sewer jobs and a comprehensive street improvement project, which had been recommended by the mayor's street advisory committee following a thorough study of local needs.

Hugh Carlson, committee chairman, called on City Engineer Douglas Stewart, who outlined the three projects and discussed the assessment procedure.

A total of 10 persons present indicated that they were opposed to the first project, involving the installation of a storm sewer to serve the area between Ninth and Eleventh sts. and from the alley east of Main av. as far as the Soo Line tracks.

On the second project, involving the completion of the storm sewer in District No. 2 extending north from Fourth st., which had been started by the WPA in the 1930s, 17 persons went on record in opposition, with some speakers citing its effect on taxes and others questioning its necessity.

The third project involved the surfacing with an eight-inch gravel base and road-mixed bituminous material, and installation of curb and gutter where needed, on LaBree and Horace avs. from Fourth st. to Eleventh st. and on the cross streets from Fifth to Tenth, except Eighth st. between Main and Atlantic avs. A total of

L. A. Nelson Recalls 52-year History of 8th Street Bridge

Questions about the history of the Eighth Street bridge were cleared up this week by Lewis Nelson of Smiley township, who probably does a better job of remembering "way back when" than any person in the community.

According to Mr. Nelson, the first bridge across the Thief River at the Eighth st. location was of wood construction and was built in 1906. But earlier than the Eighth St. bridge was the Long Bridge, up the river and still standing, built in 1903. Before the Long bridge the river was forded, the ford being a little north of the Eighth St. location, the marks of which are still visible. The iron bridge now being replaced was built in 1912.

Mr. Nelson was born in Mankato in 1871, 87 years ago. He came to this area with his parents who settled in New Solum township in Marshall county in 1885. He homesteaded for himself a few years later in Germantown community and before coming to Thief River Falls in 1903 he served as deputy sheriff in eastern Marshall county.

He was active in locating settlers when the reservation was opened in 1904 and in 1905 he was elected sheriff of Red Lake county, holding that office until the county divison in 1910, when he bought the farm that still is his home in Smiley township.

Prior to coming to Thief River Falls he had served with the 14th Minnesota regiment in the Spanish-American war.

And in checking back Mr. Nelson remembers that 1902 was a winter much like the one we have had this year — a winter without snow.

Bratsch to Take over Management Golden Valley Bank

Served Union State Bank Past Ten Years; to Take over New Duties April 12

Elmer Bratsch, vice president and cashier of the Union State bank, with which he has been associated the past ten years, announced today that he is leaving April 12 with his family for Golden Valley, Minneapolis suburb, where he will take over the position of executive vice president of the Golden Valley State bank, an institution with resources of just under $3,000,000.

During his years of residence here, Bratsch has been active in community affairs, serving for eight years as a member of the Thief River Falls board of education, and a like period on the board of directors of the Northwest Dairy Improvement association, sponsor of Dairy Day.

He also was a member of the county fair board for four years, and in 1956 was chairman of the [illegible] crusade in this community.

He currently is vice president of the Lions club, and is a member of the Elks and Eagles lodges.

Bratsch has sold his home at 301 Kendall av. N. to Louis Borchert, and last week-end purchased a new residence in Golden Valley.

E. O. Peterson, president of the Union State bank, stated that a successor to Bratsch will be named shortly.

Record Probably Set When Ice Went Out Here

The ice on the river pool probably set an all-time early record for breaking up this spring, according to what several long-time city residents say. The average date is somewhere around April 10, although last year the ice didn't actually break up but just seemed to fade away, according to the Times' weather data. In [illegible] the breakup didnt' come until May due to unusually severe weather in April — you probably remember!

Anyway, water had widened the channel here Wednesday to a point where some hardy individuals ventured out with an outboard-powered boat just to have the slightly dubious honor of having the first boat on the river this year. As yet no one has tried water skiing, but any day now. . .

Judge Chommie Hears Big Variety of Cases

Traffic violations, issuing fraudulent checks, and furnishing beer to minors were the cause of 11 persons paying fines or receiving jail sentences in municipal court Monday before Judge H. O. Chommie.

The highway patrol arrested Bruce Legg, rt. 5, city, for not displaying 1958 license plates, which resulted in Legg's being fined $5 plus $3.50 costs after pleading guilty.

Five persons were brought to court by Sheriff Charles Richards. Orville Urdahl, Goodridge pleaded guilty to driving after license suspension and was fined $25 plus $5 costs, and his plates and registration card were impounded.

Larry Norman, city, pleaded guilty to issuing a fraudulent check and was given a 30-day jail sentence, which was suspended on condition. Costs of $3.50 were paid by Norman.

Delmar R. Ness, city, pleaded guilty to driving under the influence of liquor and was fined $100 plus $5.50 costs, of which $50 was suspended. His license was also revoked.

Carl Gulterud, city, also drew a 30-day jail sentence after pleading guilty to issuing a fraudulent check. Sentence was suspended on condition of restitution and no repetition. He also paid $5 costs.

City police cases were most numerous but most offenses were of a more minor nature. Gordon W. Bredeson, city, and Christ K. Klefstad, Rt. 1, city, were each charged with furnishing beer to minors and each pleaded guilty. Bredeson was given a 30-day jail sentence, suspended, while Klefstad was fined $100, of which $50 was suspended.

Klefstad was also fined $5 after pleading guilty to his having an improper muffler on his car.

Joseph Hasby, city, pleaded guilty to driving without a license and was fined $25. Theodore G. Kimbrough, Strandquist, and Marvin O. Nelson, Newfolden, each pleaded guilty to going through a school patrol flag and were each fined $5. Nelson's fine was suspended, however.

Mark Skjel, Grand Forks, N. D., pleaded guilty to driving without license plates and paid a $5 fine. Another Grand Forks resident, Arne Askjem, forfeited $10 bond on a speeding charge.

1958 Acreage Reserve May Be Expanded

Congress Promises $250,000,000 Added Funds for Program

Chairman of the local county ASC committee Oscar J. Houske reports that most farmers who wanted to take part in the 1958 Acreage Reserve of the Soil Bank, but could not file signed agreements because of fund limitations, will apparently be able to sign up at the county office in the near future.

Both the Senate and the House of Representatives have approved a supplemental appropriation of 250 million dollars to provide for additional acreage reserve participation. This will bring the total to 750 million dollars for the 1958 program. Because agreement on some detailed program provisions must still be reached in House-Senate conference, Congressional action on the supplemental appropriation is not yet complete.

As soon as final action is taken, the county committee will get the "go ahead" for completing the signup. Preliminary steps have been taken by the state ASC committee to prepare the way for immediate action when the supplemental funds are authorized.

In addition to farmers who have already filed signed agreements, which were in general covered by the initial appropriation for the Acreage Reserve, other eligible farmers will be in position to take part in the enlarged program. These will include those whose names are on "waiting list" registers at the county office, and possibly others where there is evidence that they made an attempt to participate during the signup period.

While it is expected that in general funds will be available to take care of all other farmers who indicated that they would take part in the program if it was enlarged, there is a legislative annual limitation of 300 million dollars for the corn acreage reserve. Because the total of signed agreements and other applications on waiting lists would call for more than 300 million dollars, if all the corn applications were completed, some adjustment will be necessary for this crop.

Public notice will be given promptly when the county ASC office is ready to sign additional acreage reserve agreements. Houske says that in the meantime the county office will be prepared to furnish general information, but the farmers should not attempt to sign up agreements until official announcements are made.

Commission on Government Has Session in City

Middle River school buses in hauling small numbers of students and the cost of such an operation.

A Clearwater county representative at the hearing urged that a uniform mill levy be set for the various counties and questioned the equality of taxing in the counties on the basis of sales from the individual county.

Rep. Wozniak questioned the Clearwater resident if removal of the $100 household goods exemption, as he had recommended might not precipitate a revolution, a question which caused a ripple of laughter to run through the courtroom.

It was generally agreed that removal of the personal property tax is a desirable thing but agreement ended when ways and means of making up tax losses sustained thereby was discussed. Prevailing sentiment was in favor of a state withholding tax, although a "head tax" had been mentioned by some of the persons present at the hearing.

State Rep. Wilder, Crookston, spoke briefly, saying there is mounting opposition to the personal property tax and that a "head tax" has merits in that it would catch persons who pay no taxes otherwise. This statement was challenged by several members of the commission, however.

In further testimony, Wilder said the ratio between farm prices and prices paid for food by consumers is too great. The producer is not getting his fair share of the national income, he emphasized, adding that healthy farm prosperity is necessary for the well-being of northwest Minnesota.

State Sen. Roy Wiseth, Goodridge, testified that if a head tax is passed it should be called by its right name—poll tax. "A "A head tax is nothing else than a poll tax, such as some southern states have," he declared, in opposing such a tax.

Pennington county auditor Charles Rodekuhr was the last person to speak. He stated the household goods tax accounts for only .9 per cent of the total county tax base, which is no problem. However, costs of administration and publishing tax lists is prohibitive.

Before adjournment at 3 p. m. and at several times during the hearing, Chairman Wozniak stated that the problems as related by those appearing at the hearing here were quite small as compared to some suburban areas in the southern part of the state.

These are communities in Minnesota where there is little or no industrial or commercial district and as a result the burden of heavy taxation falls on the residents of such suburban areas, he stated.

Gunderson, Roy Langevin, and Joe Esquelle.

Girl Scouts participating were Karen Mittelstadt, Judy Magnuson, Judy Ranum, Carol Forsberg, Sandra Jenson, Sharon Breznay, Barbara Ellefson, and Pam Thorkelson. The Boy Scouts were Tom Lindberg and Bob Ihle.

Publicity chairman was Mrs. Albert Lafrenz.

A pre-school clinic will not be held this year. Each child was given an authorization slip which entitles him to receive a free check-up by appointment with his family doctor during the months of May, June and July.

Permits were given to the children which will entitle each child to a free examination at one of the local optometrists' in April and May.

Pink dental cards were issued to the children also. It is suggested that the child's teeth be examined by a dentist during the summer months. After examination, the dentist will sign the card and this should be brought to school when the child enters next fall.

If the child's birth certificate was not brought to the roundup, it must be presented at the time of his school entrance in the fall. This can be obtained from the clerk of court in the county where the child was born.

Hearings Held on TRF Street Jobs Monday, Tuesday

34 persons present indicated they were opposed, chiefly on the ground of heavy assessments.

Mayor O. W. Reich stated that the project had been recommended by the street committee following numerous complaints about the condition of the city streets, and he added that he felt the plan proposed was a sound one.

Concrete paving and sidewalk construction on Fourth st. from Main av. to Atlantic av. was the subject of Tuesday night's hearing.

Stewart explained that the committee had recommended that of the $61,500 cost of the project, about $35,000 should be provided by the current year's allotment of municipal state aid road funds.

Among those speaking in favor of delaying action on the project were Kendall Gustafson of C. Gustafson and Son, Mrs. Agnes Israelson, A. B. McLaughlin and T. Haney. Supporting an early start on the work were representatives of the N. W. Bell Telephone Co., Mrs. Cora Lein, Trinity church, RRV Old Peoples Home, First Baptist church, Lampert Lumber Co. and Hugh Carlson.

Engineer Stewart computed Wednesday that on the basis of total benefits to be assessed, exclusive of the city-owned block fronting on Fourth st., representatives at the hearing of approximately 50 per cent of the property favored the project, with 22.6 per cent opposed.

A. Geving Retires from Goodridge Creamery Board

Three Directors Elected at Annual Meeting Held Last Saturday Afternoon

With Adolph Geving, president, in charge, the annual meeting of the Farmers Cooperative Creamery association of Goodridge was held Saturday afternoon.

In the annual election of directors, Harry Solberg and Orris Olson were retained in office, and Dick Nelson was named to the board to fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Geving, who is leaving the community.

James Salveson, manager, read the annual report, showing that the plant in 1957 churned a total of 192,255 pounds of butter, and that sales and marketing returns aggregated $120,670.17.

Following a discussion by Salveson and John Lager, fieldman for Land O'Lakes District 17, the members present went on record in favor of buying whole milk.

Also included in the program was an interesting talk by E. C. Fredericks, dairy specialist from Northwest School at Crookston.

At the close of the meeting, lunch was served by the Zion ladies aid of Germantown.

Washington 4th Graders Hear of Living in Bolivia

Mr. and Mrs. Schowalter, Missionaries, Speak and Show Slides to Pupils

The fourth grade pupils of Washington school had the opportunity Friday of hearing Mr. and Mrs. John Scholwalter, missionaries to Bolivia. This proved to be very interesting experience as a study of the Inca Indians was recently completed by the fourth grades under the direction of their teachers, Mrs. Ida Netteberg and Judith Wold.

The boys and girls enjoyed seeing the colored slides that were shown by the missionaries of the activities and homes of the Inca Indians and the scenery in the Andes Mountains. Mr. Schowalter related many interesting experiences of their life among the Indians.

Of special interest to the pupils were the colorful Indian costumes that were on display. One of the boys, Wayne Jarshaw, had the unique experience of being costumed in a real Indian poncho and a beautifully designed woolen cap. Gloria Olson was the girl chosen to model a typical Inca Indian costume.

Besides the beautiful Indian costumes, Mr. and Mrs. Schowalter had along an interesting collection consisting of the skin of a boa constrictor, a miniature balsa boat, and Indian scandal made of woven cloth and rubber from a Goodyear tire, a hand carved model of a wooden plow, and a leopard pelt with the head of the animal showing its vicious fangs in its wide open mouth. This leopard was very exciting to the boys and girls. Mr. Schowalter then gave an account of how a leopard hunt is conducted. This was followed by a lively question and answer period.

Crippled children of Minnesota will benefit from an Easter Lily Sale to be held Saturday, March 29, by the Thief River Falls Job's Daughters.

The lilies have been made by the crippled themselves. Proceeds from the sale will help operate Camp Courage, the Easter Seal Camp for crippled children, located between the communities of Maple Lake and Annandale, Minnesota.

Funds raised will be turned over to the Pennington County Easter Seal Committee, headed by Mrs. Herbert Halverson.

Mayor O. D. Beich has proclaimed Saturday, March 29th, "Crippled Children's Day", and has urged "wholehearted cooperation with the Easter Seal Society."

LOL Truck Driver Has Narrow Escape

Howard Gulseth Bruised When Truck Leaves Road

A local driver for Land O' Lakes Creameries, returning to this city from Minneapolis with a 15-ton load of fertilizer miraculously escaped death early Tuesday morning when his semi-trailer rig went out of control, ran into a roadside ditch and came to rest against the ditch bank, without completely overturning.

Howard Gulseth, a long-time drive for the co-op, was rolling along between Mentor and Marcoux corner on U. S. 2 when his steering gear became ineffective and the big rig took to the ditch about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Gulseth escaped with bruises, according to Land O' Lakes authorities, who said the truck sustained only minor damages, also.

Investigation of the mishap revealed that a nut at the lower end of the steering sector had worked loose and dropped off, thus rendering the steering wheel completely ineffective.

The defective steering apparatus also hampered efforts of the crew which brought the tractor and trailer back here for repairs Stuart McLeod, Land O' Lakes manager here said today.

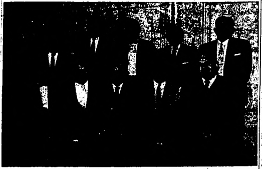
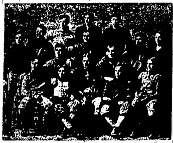
State Champion Prowlers of 1938 Hold Reunion



The 1938 Prowler state high school basketball championship squad and their coach George Lee are pictured just prior to their reunion banquet at the Leamington hotel in Minneapolis last Saturday evening. The squad, which posted a record of twenty-seven wins and no losses during the 1937-38 season, enjoyed a three-day reunion during the 1958 state high school basketball tournament. The Prowlers, front row, l. to r., Clark Mickelson, Earl Nicholson, co-captain Roy Lee, Mel Haughom, and Gordy Caldis; back row, student manager Glenn Carlson, Loren (Bones) Stadum, Rube Mickelson, Orville (Red) Eide, and coach George Lee. Squad member Rev. Perry Pederson was unable to attend the reunion, and co-captain Don Lorentson is deceased.

Pioneer Prowler Gridders of 1908



Reproduced above is a picture of the 1908 Thief River Falls high school football team, which was brought into the Times office by Jim Zavoral. James Walker, a schoolmate of players in this picture, made the proper identification of the squad. Mr. Walker added that the local school had a football team in 1907, but that this 1908 squad was the first to be under the direction of a high school coach.

Twenty Years After

Except for the cultivating of distinguished foreheads by a couple of the boys, and a certain portliness in carriage by several others, the intervening years have treated the members of the 1938 Prowler state high school basketball champions with kindness. This was evident as the boys arose to acknowledge their introductions at the reunion banquet held on Saturday night in Minneapolis. They appeared physically fit and able to take the floor and turn in a championship performance.

Of course those of us who can recall that 1938 squad back in their high school days will remember that they never were a muscle bound or robust group. They had a timber wolf appearance, with the lean and stringy muscles that provide great endurance and stamina. It wasn't an accident that these Prowlers, as they moved through their schedule and tournament play undefeated, came up with some tremendous fourth periods. That was one sign of their greatness.

Now that the reunion is a memory, the players, coach George Lee, and the fans who attended, must consider it to have been good fortune to have been able to get together and renew friendships.

The members of that 1938 squad, through their captain Roy Lee, paid a fine tribute to coach Lee. Roy said, "As our coach George Lee did an excellent job in keeping the players and the team inspired, and gave us confidence when the going became tough. Also when we overbalanced the scale on the other side, he was the first to humble us. His characteristics of fair play, poise under pressure, and working and playing hard to win, has I believe, made him a greatly admired man by his players and fellow citizens alike. We accepted his discipline without question and respected him for it.

"It was a privilege to have been able to play under the coaching of George Lee."

Incidental Information

Lloyd Brunsberg, whose only claim to athletic prowess is that he is the uncle of Fertile's Arlo Brunsberg, picked Austin to win the state high school basketball championship, and to win by 67 points. The Packers defeated Brainerd in the finals Saturday night by a 68 to 63 score.

That 67-Point "guess", and in spite of Lloyd's protestations to the contrary, that he used his vast skill and knowledge, it was just a "guess".

As for our choice? And the choice of the experts? Willmar of Bemidji, and we had Willmar defeating Bemidji by a 57 to 52 score.

It Brought Down the House

As the saying goes, coach George Lee "brought down the house" at Saturday evening's 20th reunion banquet for the 1938 Prowler cage champions when, in extolling the virtues of this championship squad, he stated that "a vital contribution to the success of the 1938 team was due to the fact that Lenny Hellquist had graduated in 1937."

If you know George Lee, and if you know Lenny Hellquist, you can readily understand the "howl" that quip drew from the audience.

Just Ordinary

That "crucial" bowling series between the Elks Club and the Viking Tavern on Tuesday night, and which was to have resolved the Business league title, didn't prove conclusive. The Elks won two of the three games, but they aren't bragging about their victories.

The drama of the series was crammed into the opening game, which the young Vikings won by three pins, 774 to 771. The Elks, coming into the 10th frame, and with anchor man Jim Disse bowling, trailed the Vikings by thirty-one pins. Jim had to strike out to give coach Dennis Langevin's club a one-pin win, and he made a fine try, for he doubled, and, on his roll, his hook failed to reach high enough on the head pin, and he picked but six pins.

During the series, the Vikings, and they appeared to be under stress, bowled games of 774-737-780; while the relaxed and chattering Elks had games of 771-776-866. In their final game, the Elks were benefited greatly by a pair of 200 games, with Jim Dryden posting a 210 and Irv Wilson a 202.

Highway Cleanup Campaign Starts

Workers Remove Winter's Accumulation of Debris

Minnesota's biggest single annual spring housecleaning operation is now under way — the clearing from the states' 11,000-mile trunk highway system of the debris accumulated during the winter, when snow impedes cleanup activity. Highway officials expect the task to be considerably lightened this spring by the fact that lack of snow for extended periods in many areas made winter cleanup operations possible.

More than 500 maintenance employees will work on the project, traveling on foot along the highway shoulders to collect such unsightly and dangerous items as tin cans, broken bottles, wire, nail studded boards, garbage, wastepaper and milk cartons. Sometimes some of these articles cause blowouts or punctures to tires with resulting traffic accidents. The cleanup activity will continue through the summer and fall to next winter's snow.

For all of 1957, the collection of debris totaled 8,375 truckloads and the cost in manpower and equipment totaled $221,465. The 1956 cleanup operations collected 8,725 loads at a cost of $225,808.

Reduction of the size and cost of the operation from 1956 to 1957 was credited by the highway department to an active campaign by the department and cooperating newspapers, radio and television stations, civic organizations and law enforcement agencies to educate and compel people not to dump their refuse on public highways and streets.

Animal Rabies Cases Increasing in State

Minnesota experienced a record year in 1957 in the number of animal rabies cases reported to the Minnesota Department of health, according to Dr. Robert N. Barr, secretary and executive officer.

The 363 cases reported last year occurred in 71 out of the 88 counties in the state. In comparison, only 127 cases were reported in 1955, and 168 cases in 1956. Sixty-four cases have been reported so far this year.

Skunks are definitely involved in the spread of rabies in the state according to Dr. Dean S. Fleming, director of the department's division of disease prevention and control. Of the total number of cases reported last year, 208 skunks were found to be infected. Although skunks are the chief carries of rabies, all animals can become carriers if bitten by another rabid animal. Besides the skunk, the greatest number of rabies cases occur in cattle, dogs, and cats.

In order to curb the rising incidence of rabies in animals, Dr. Fleming urges a number of preventive measures be taken. Farmers should destroy all skunks as a means of protecting their livestock. There is no closed season on these animals. Household pets should be vaccinated against rabies. If an animal is bitten, or shows signs of illness, call a veterinarian.

If it is impossible to contact a veterinarian immediately, the farm animal or household pet should be placed in an enclosure making it impossible for it to escape or come in contact with humans. A ten-day observation of an animal suspected of having rabies will usually determine if an animal is infected.

To prevent humans from becoming infected, children should be taught not to handle, tease, or play with strange dogs, cats, or other stray animals. If a human is bitten or comes in contact with an animal suspected of having rabies, consult a physician at once.

The symptoms of rabies are not always recognizable. Many infected animals do not foam at the mouth, and may not be particularly vicious or unmanageable. However, an animal showing an unexplained change of behavior, followed by excitability, paralysis, or difficulty in swallowing, should be examined by a veterinarian.

"Now that spring is here, and wild animals are on the move, energetic measures to control skunks will pay big dividends in rabies control," Dr. Fleming said. Rabies, however, can occur at any season. Animals that develop the disease never recover and usually die within a week.

In a recent year total expenditures in the United States for civilian health and medical services were estimated to be $14.4 billion, an average of $84 per person.

Game Wardens to Wear Centennial Patch on Shoulder

Sportsmen visitors to Minnesota during this Centennial year will find the state game wardens proudly wearing an official Centennial shoulder patch on their uniforms.

Conservation Commissioner George A. Selke announced today that the states' 150 uniformed conservation law officers "will be ready to help sportsmen visitors get the most out of their trip to Minnesota."

"The Centennial patch is to be worn on the left shoulder," explained Selke, "as a symbol of the warden's eagerness to actively participate in celebrating 100 years of outdoors recreation."

It is expected the wardens will be sporting the colorful patches by mid-April.

One out of 2,000 motor vehicles was involved in a Minnesota traffic fatality in 1957; whereas in 1910 with 23 deaths and 15,150 vehicles registered, one in every 658 vehicles was involved in a traffic fatality.

The first Girl Scout Troops for girls with handicaps were started in 1917, when two troops for the blind and one for the deaf were established. Today there are more than 10,000 girls with handicaps in Girl Scouting.

Adjustment to Normal

Agriculture is not the only segment of the American economy that is confronted with a disturbing surplus problem. The petroleum industry, for instance, is in serious difficulty too. Production has expanded much faster than demand. There is a similarity with agriculture in this pattern in that production thruout the world is in excess of demand. For the time being there are more food and more petroleum products than the markets of the world can absorb.

For the time being we have expanded our productive capacity in excess of needs in several other fields. Our steel mills have much more capacity than is needed at the present time. That is true of our paper mills, and we might name many other fields in which production is now being curtailed and plants are operating at less than capacity.

Increased capacity and production increases in all of these fields came because at one time or another, there was a need for increased production. The demands of the market encouraged it. Increased production was profitable.

Now, for the time being, there is a need to cut back. We are in a period of readjustment because, apparently, there is a need for adjustments. And that is not necessarily an alarming situation. If we permit the normal, necessary adjustments to take place then a new, healthy normal economy will be reestablished.

The adjustment to normal, healthy balance between supply and demand is made more difficult in all of these fields because of accumulated surpluses. These surpluses are also referred to as excessive inventories.

In the years when demand was crowding production and the products of our mills and factories were scarce and deliveries uncertain, there was a tendency among buyers, to order more than was needed, and reserve stockpiles were created, to be drawn on in a pinch. Hoarding was a common thing.

One of the factors that now is contributing heavily to the curtailed production of steel and paper, as examples, is the reversal of the hoarding process. The reserves, the stockpiles, the surpluses are now being drawn on. Mills and factories, partly idled, are able to make prompt deliveries. The stockpiles, the excessive inventories are no longer needed.

Steel industry reports indicate that the adjustment in this field is already well along. Increases in now small orders indicate that excessive inventories are being reduced to a healthy normal.

There is ample reason to believe that the present recession is actually a healthy and necessary adjustment in our economy. Certainly there is nothing alarming about what has happend up to now and there is every reason to believe that if we recognize it for what is is, it will come to be looked upon as a good rather than as an evil.

We are still of the opinion that our real danger is inflation.

A Battle of the Giants

Two of the nation's biggest and most powerful unions are slugging it out with each other in a battle the public in general can enjoy from the sidelines. John Lewis and his United Mine Workers are boycotting, and being boycotted by, the nation's union of doctors, the American Medical Association.

John Lewis, who has much to say about how the funds of the United Mine Workers shall be spent, has decreed that only certain doctors and hospitals shall be eligible for compensation for the treatment of members of his organization, under certain conditions. Doctors not on this select list are insisting that each patient should have the right to choose for himself who his physician or surgeon shall be. They are denying to the "chosen" the right to use the hospital facilities not on the "select" list.

No person, uninformed on the circumstances and the arguments leading up to the break, would be qualified to decide which side is right in a dispute of this kind. Our guess is that both sides are partly wrong and that it would be in the best interest of all concerned, including the public interest, if each side would give a little ground.

Our guess, furthermore, is that a public referendum on the question would reveal an overwhelming sentiment in favor of both sides losing.

There Are Two Sides

We will go along with those who maintain that much good has been accomplished by our expenditures for foreign aid. We will also agree with those who say that much too much of our foreign aid contribution has been spent unwisely and wastefully. Is this being inconsistent? We think not.

We believe most of the billions we put into European recovery can be justified. Without that help, western Europe today probably would have been a communist camp.

The communist advance in Asia and Africa has been slowed down by our aid to the governments, and to the peoples, of those areas. Last week, for instance, the government of Tunisia, bitterly involved with the French, nevertheless decided to cast its lot with the western powers, a blow to Nasser of Egypt and the Soviets. Confidence in our country was a factor in that important decision.

And let's keep in mind that most of our foreign aid, while measured in terms of dollars, has actually consisted of the products of our farms and factories. There is at least a shade of difference between giving a hard dollar which might become useful to the enemy or presenting a needy neighbor with a couple of pounds of butter and a bag of flour that we have no use for.

Advocates of foreign aid can build up a strong case for its continuation within reasonable limitations.

But we think, too, that the critics of foreign aid are on firm ground when they remind us that a dollar spent foolishly is bad, even if the spending is well intentioned.

When public dollars are being tossed around quite loosely by the hired help, we are justified in examining the records extra carefully for possible errors. Where the controls are lax, the temptations become great, and the most trusted employees sometimes develop sticky fingers. Those who oppose our foreign aid program and point out its many deficiencies also perform a useful public service.

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

"Ignorance is so hard to conceal because people always try to hide it in a public place." —Raymond Duncan.

The average man says no to temptation once weakly.

There is probably an excellent reason why the husbands of the world's ten best dressed women are seldom hated among the ten best dressed men.

"I wish I had enough money to buy an elephant."

"What do you want with an elephant?"

"I don't. I just want the money."

AMERICA'S FAVORITE FAMILY WAGON...PLYMOUTH

Plymouth carries more . . . does more . . . provides more family fun than any other wagon in the low-price 3 because it's BIGGEST IN THE LOW-PRICE 3. You can't buy bigger at any price!

Maybe you're a station wagon family right now. More Americans are each day! But do you know all the really astonishing facts about the Plymouth wagon . . . how much more it gives you than other wagons, at a low budget price?

Size alone is only part of it! The Plymouth wagon is big as wagons in the high-price field that cost $5500 and more . . . but, in addition to extra size, this glamorous beauty offers a wagonload of other features that are exclusively Plymouth in the low-price 3!

You simply can't get 'em anywhere else in the field. And once you try them . . . learn how little the years-ahead Plymouth wagon costs . . . you'll never settle for less! Why should you? Your Plymouth dealer has the money-saving story, and he's waiting for your visit.

5 big reasons why your wagon should be a Plymouth:

1. BIGGEST OF THE LOW-PRICE THREE: Big as wagons costing thousands of dollars more. You can't buy bigger at any price! 122" wheelbase.
2. HOLDS SO MUCH MORE THAN THE "OTHER TWO": Over 7 cu. ft. more passenger and cargo space. Extra "secret luggage" compartment in 6-passenger models.
3. REAR-FACING 3rd SEAT: Folds flush into the floor; you don't have to store it outside when it's not in use. Easy to enter.
4. DISAPPEARING REAR WINDOW: Rolls down into tailgate. Doesn't get in the way. Only Plymouth has it in the low-price field.
5. TORSION-AIRE RIDE—AT NO EXTRA COST: Only on Plymouth in the low-price 3. Big-car luxury. No sideway on turns or nose-dive on stops.

They don't come any bigger... Plymouth station wagons

Absolute Speed Set on 2,000 Miles Roads

Governor Orville L. Freeman announced at a special press conference Tuesday morning that absolute speed zones are being established on 2,000 miles of Minnesota's trunk highways.

"These zones are being established as a part of our continuing campaign against traffic accidents," the Governor said. "The terrific toll of traffic deaths, which reached 685 in Minnesota last year, compels us to use every means at our disposal to reduce the hazards of driving on our highways. This is one of the means."

The 2,000 miles of maximum speed zones were established on the recommendation of Minnesota's Highway Commissioner L. P. Zimmerman following extensive studies of accident frequency, traffic volume and physical condition of the highways.

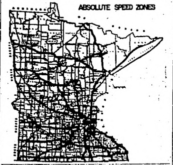
"Orders have gone out to highway maintenance district engineers to post these roads with absolute signs and the absolute limits will be in effect as soon as the roads are so posted" the Governor said.

Absolute speed zones are established under authority of the 1955 law (M.S. 169.14) which authorized the commissioner of highways to determine on the basis of engineering and traffic investigations the maximum speed which should be reasonable or safe under the conditions to be found on a particular stretch of highway.

Governor Freeman also explained that the basic rule of Minnesota law provides that no vehicle shall be driven on a highway at a speed greater than is reasonable and prudent under the conditions then existing.

"Marking these zones with absolute speed limits will enable motorists to know what is the maximum rate they may travel with reasonable safety under the best conditions. However, the basic rule of driving at a speed that is reasonable and prudent for existing conditions governs at all times and is not changed by the establishment of speed zones."

He pointed out that definition of maximum speed limits will enable enforcement officers to do a better job of controlling traffic and apprehending those careless drivers whose excessive and unreasonable speeds are a danger to other drivers. High speed has been established as a major cause of many accidents which result in serious injury or death.



The Governor also explained thate designating these highways as absolute will make the use of electronic speed timing devices and airplanes in the control of traffic more effective. He pointed out that the maximum limits were set at a speed at which traffic can more rapidly and efficently, yet safely, and in many areas may be above or below present limits.

"This should also eliminate a great deal of misunderstanding in the minds of drivers as to speed; for under Binnesota's stawhat is a lawful or unlawful tutes any speed in excess of that posted as absolute is unlawful," he said.

He added that the study of of accident frequencies and traffic movements on trunk highways is a continuing operation of the Traffic and Planning division of the Highway Department and that existing speed limits may be changed to higher or lower limits as highway conditions change.

The Governor anticipated that in many cases speed limits would be raised - as, roadway standards are improved under the accelerated construction program which has been implemented by federal funds in the interstate system.

Among the longer routes included in absolute zones are T. H.s 10, 14, 212, 55, and 2 which cross fro meast to west; T. H. 10 from the Twin Cities to Motley; T. H. 61 from LaCrescent to Grand Marais; and T. H. 53 from Duluth to International Falls.

Some sections of these routes had been previously designated as absolute zines and are included in the total mileage announced today. About 150 miles of trunk highways had been zoned absolute during the past two years for pilot studies in the program. In addition, absolute signs have been placed on speed limit signs in incorporated areas where all streets and highways are designated as absolute by statute.

SENATOR THYE Reports TO YOU

No Time For Ostriches

Our country today faces a difficult economic situation. We are in the middle of a recession which compares with that of 1949 and 1950. We are reminded—and harshly reminded—that our economy still moves through cycles of activity which produce prosperity on the one hand and recession on the other. This is perhaps somewhat obvious, but such cyclic patterns are a clue to the answers we must find if we are to regain stability and a healthy national economy. One thing I do want to emphasize is that this is not the time to play ostrich—to put our heads in the sands of political expediency and to hope the bad time will go away if we just do not face it. This is a time to act. It is a time to act constructively.

During these past two weeks here in Washington, it has become apparent that the Congress and the Administration are beginning to act together on a program which will reverse the downward trend. The program now developing includes:

1. A speeding up of the Federal highway program. This necessary program will create, over the years, many new jobs for the construction industry. Such a project will release an additional $2 billion into the national economy each year for the next three years.

2. The Administration has called for acceleration in the construction of other civil and public works which already have been authorized and for which funds have been appropriated. This includes much-needed flood control projects throughout the Nation as well as conservation and reclamation projects. President Eisenhower already has called on the Bureau of the Budget to release these funds.

3. The Post Office Department and the General Services Administration are moving to increase the number of Federal buildings and post offices which are needed. We have communities in Minnesota which have inadequate post office facilities. I have already called on the Postmaster General and the Administrator of GSA to review the needs in Minnesota and recommend those projects which are needed now.

4. The Defense Department is pushing ahead in a vast procurement program. Less than two weeks ago they announced their military buying program would increase to a total of $10 billion in the first six months of 1958, as compared with $7 billion in the last six months of 1957.

5. The Administration and the Congress will move to extend the period of unemployment compensation.

6. The Senate has passed a $1.8 billion housing bill which could provide for 200,000 new units this year.

A Tax Cut Now?

Perhaps the most dramatic move which is being considered is that of a tax cut. There are those who are demanding a tax cut immediately without considering all of the changes which huge tax cuts might have upon the economy. At this point, I should like to tell you that already there are tax adjustment measures resting in the Finance Committee of the Senate and before the House Ways and Means Committee. I have sponsored some of these measures. As a member of the Senate Small Business Committee, I have had an opportunity to see the need for tax relief measures for small business. Seven proposals are now being considered and bear my name as sponsor.

Chances For A Cut

The most difficult question right now is whether or not there will be an across-the-board tax cut. Right now the chances for a general tax cut are growing stronger. I would favor a general reduction if we do not see an upturn in our economy within the next thirty days.

Don't smoke too much while making long trips on the highway, safety experts warn. Smoke can irritate your eyes, causing them to become tired, increasing the danger of a collision due to inattention.

Make Believe Wholesale Watches Exposed!

Ben Heald, an attorney and executive secretary of the Wisconsin Retail Jewelers Association, is working with the Federal Trade Commission in tryng to put a stop to the discount watches sold at make-believe wholesale prices. The customer is led to believe the price is wholesale, actually he or she is paying approximately retail, and in many unfortunate cases—more than the retail. Many of our good customers have fallen prey to this type of advertising. Please do not be fooled by a make-believe wholesale price in the catalogue. We are sure we can match the price at our retail, REPEAT, our retail, with the so called wholesale price. All we ask is a chance to show you—this you will agree is fair. Do feel free to stop in. We will compare watches from the make-believe wholesale catalogue with the same movement sold at legitimate prices. The first 50 people who will stop in and listen to this amazing story, we will offer them a $1.00 gift certificate FREE.

P.S.—Be sure to bring your watch in and compare.

After spending four months in Texas and Virginia with my children and grandchildren of which I have 25, I am back to meet my friends with real fine contracts in Life, Health & Accident Insurance also Fire and E.C. for the city and Hail and Windstorm for farmers.

In Texas where everything and everybody are big I saw the Texas longhorns, with their 8-ft. wingspread, but felt quite safe as there was a 8-ft. fence between us.

The geese grow to enormous size there and they told me they had to go on a reducing diet before coming north. They also requested that authorities have all lakes cleared before they get here.

My new office is at 318 N. Horace, across the street from Trinity Lutheran Church.

I would like to invite everyone to drop in and see my gorgeous setup. Nothing like it in town.

Harold Sabo Shares in Soil Conservation

Harold Sabo of New Solum township was the 96th cooperator to sign up with Marshall county soil conservation district. He has a 240 acre farm, plus some land south of the "home place" which he is operating. His farm represents the Viking, Newfolden, Holt, and Middle River area.

He has farmed this home 240 acre place for the last ten years and is currently carrying on a livestock operation and plans to continue it. At present, he has 40 head of Holstein milk cows and young stock, plus 55 breeding ewes.

Sabo has done a great deal of heavy work on his farm improving his fields. Most of this work has been clearing off land and removing stones, which occur on the heavier clay loam soil over the greater portion of this farm. The small acreage of sand ridge land does not have stones, however. One piece of 28 acres was cleared entirely by hand.

At the present time, Sabo's greatest problem is field drainage on the heavier, more fertile soil. He estimated a drop of as much as 17 feet per ½ mile and feels that with proper planning he should be able to do a complete job of drainage in order to establish a good crop rotation and raise his expected yeilds of grain and large acreage of hay and pasture.

He has been fertilizing with straight phosphate over the past few years to raise his yields. However, the best years for cropping were the 1st 3 years on the farm when the county side was dry. Mr. Sabo recognizes the fact that dry weather such as this is unusual and he must plan his farm for the more "regular" years of rainfall. In order to do this, he is planning on investing approximately $300 per year in his field drainage system. After this is completed, he feels he will then be able to plan a good crop rotation with other soil Conservation practices.

This rotation should then give him plenty of high quality feed for his dairy livestock operation.

All the children are high school age or younger, with Jerry the oldest planning to stay in farming.

No. Central Lines Revenue Mounts

Hits $10,801,000 in 1957, President Carr Reports

North Central Airlines, in its annual report issued today, reported record 1957 revenues of $10,801,995, an increase of 35 per cent over 1956.

Hal N. Carr, president, credited the increase to a substantial boost in all classes of traffic.

Carr said net earnings for 1957, after tax credits, were $80,791, compared with $34,116 the previous year. Operating profit, after depreciation charges, was $81,678.

He pointed out also that North Central has been operating under a temporary mail rate since Nov. 23, 1956. When the final rate is established, it will be retroactive to that date.

Carr said a total of 880,930 passengers were enplaned by North Central in 1957. This was 49 per cent above the second-ranking local airline.

North Central's fleet of DC-3 Northliners now numbers 31, as compared with 10 years ago when the airline began scheduled operations at Madison, Wisc., with three small nine-passenger planes.

Carr said the company is studying available aircraft with a view toward adding larger, faster, equipment on long-haul segments and high density routes. He said the plane most suited to North Central's need is probably the Convair 340, a twin-engine aircraft seating up to 50 passengers.

The Navy has an electronic "private eye" now that checks the accuracy of a Navy interceptor's guns while in flight and without firing them. Time element is reduced to minutes instead of hours.

The Navy's YAG 37 is an experimental ship completely dependent for propulsion on four 500-horsepower aircraft turbo-propeller engines mounted on the fore and after decks.

There seem to be a good many people that enjoy potato dumplings by the looks of the number served at the school by the S & S Club Tuesday evening. The rifle was won by Palmer Olstad of Karlstad and the boys left Wednesday morning to see the tournament in the cities.

Safety experts caution drivers against staring fixedly as the road ahead. Keeping your eyes roving from dashboard to road to rear-view mirror and back will help to keep you alert and ready for danger.

MIRAGE

I sat on the sands, watching the palm trees, the city silhouetted against the sky. And as I did, suddenly the city wasn't there any more. I saw only the palms.

It was like being transported to another time and place. I felt as if I were in old Jerusalem. It was the day when He was entering the city, and His devoted followers had strewn palm leaves in His path. In church that morning, our minister had told us the story of Palm Sunday. Now I realized how much this message meant to me.

Watching the palms, I realized that all of us need help in understanding life's basic truths. We find that help in the Church. Then we can dwell upon what we have learned until it has full meaning for us . . . as Palm Sunday, now, has for me.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

A peek at THE STARS

by LYN CONNELLY

THE similarities between the original Wyatt Earp and his modern ABC-TV counterpart on "The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp," are many and striking . . . Besides resembling the legendary frontier marshall in physical appearance, Hugh has the same quick mind, excellent muscle coordination and sharp sense of humor . . . As a further coincidence, Hugh O'Brian had no more intention of becoming an actor than Earp had of becoming a peace officer.

Born in Rochester, N. Y. of mixed Irish-German-French descent, Hugh grew up in Chicago, Lancaster, Pa., Long Island and Evanston, Ill. . . . Having expressed an early desire to go to military school, he was first sent to Roosevelt Military Academy in Toledo, O., then to Kemper Military college in Booneville, Mo. . . . Before graduating here, however, he went to the University of Cincinnati — his father's alma mater . . . At the age of 18, Hugh enlisted in the U. S. Marine Corps and became one of the youngest drill instructors in the history of the marines.

After the war, he decided to study law and applied for admission to Yale but was sidetracked when called upon to replace an actor-friend in a Little Theatre group . . . This led to an engagement with the famed Lobero Theatre and to movie assignments with Republic, Lippert and MGM studios . . . Next came a contract with Universal-International and after 18 films, Hugh headed for 20th-Century Fox and from there to "Wyatt Earp."

All of Hugh O'Brian's talents aren't along acting lines . . . The handsome, six foot, 175-pounder has recently recorded an album of songs entitled "Wyatt Earp Sings" . . . What's more, it's good singing, one of the few actor-turned-singer we can say this about.

Farm Victory

Congress has intervened to protect our farm economy from further decline. Both the Senate and the House of Representatives have concurred in ordering a ban on any reductions in price support levels in 1958 below the 1957 prices—on all commodities. The same "freeze" protects producers from any reduction in acreage allotments. The action was a flat repudiation of Secretary Benson and his policies.

Up To President

Now it's up to the President. Perhaps by the time this is read, he will have made public his decision. While Secretary Benson has called for a veto and the President has indicated he may reject the action of Congress, there is hope among many of us that the President will finally decide to respect the right of Congress itself to determine farm policy. If he does veto the measure—Senate Joint Resolution 162—we will do everything in our power to get the veto overridden. Whether or not we can succeed will depend on how many Republicans are willing to join our Democratic majority in providing the two-thirds needed.

Farm Bloc Unity

Because I introduced and sponsored the Resolution through our Senate Committee on Agriculture that has now been accepted by the House and sent to the President, I am naturally pleased that Congress has overwhelmingly concurred in my effort to "hold the line." We were able to restore more unity among the so-called "farm bloc" in the Congress than has existed for a long time, despite efforts to divide us into commodity groups, each trying to protect ourselves. Early in the session it became evident to me that any single commodity approach, such as action to halt the dairy cut alone, would fail. Subsequent votes proved my judgement correct. For that reason I concentrated on the all-commodity approach, successfully lined up support of the Senate and House leadership for the measure, and got it enacted and sent to the President.

What It Means

If the President signs the measure into law, it will mean $3.25 per hundredweight dairy support prices instead of $3. It will mean $2 wheat support prices instead of $1.78. It will mean avoiding slashes on support levels for many other commodities. But if the President does veto it and his Minority in Congress supports it, it will mean probably taking at least another half billion dollars farm economy at a time when our Government is supposedly seeking ways to combat the recession. Such a veto doesn't make much sense, not only to rural America, but to all America.

Not The Final Answer

By no means is this "freeze" to halt any further answer to the serious economic problems confronting our farm people. It is just what the measure says—a "freeze" to halt any further reductions in farm income, until Congress can work out an enact a better farm program for the future. If the President votes the measure, he will in effect be denying the right of Congress to ask for more time to work on farm legislation, and acting just in reverse of his own public statements about "doing everything possible" to combat the recession.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

PARALLEL LINES

AT SCHOOL years ago it was affirmed that parallel lines meet only at infinity. This is a way of saying that they never meet. Now, would it not be a wondrous thing if some rocket adventurers should be able to reach the point where parallel lines meet?

But the writer has been disturbed by the thought of what might happen if a rocket should crash smack against the side of the moon. It would be infinitesimally less than little birds crash-bombing pigeons sitting on a limb. And the other side of our satellite would still be unseen by human eyes and earth-bound gazers could still talk of the "man in the moon."

As these lines are written, word has come that our Country has launched a satellite that is now traveling around the earth. Someone has asked if there is danger that it may crash with Sputnik in space. Aside from facetious thoughts about space travel, let us consider what may be learned from the satellites circling the world. And how would it do to forget the Russians for awhile, if we can, and give ourselves solely to our own business of making rockets and of learning from them.

SCANNING THE NEWS

WHY should we have trouble with rockets after our initial successes?

Such is a question on the mind of the man in the street. It's a good question, and there's an answer for it.

For one reason, today's large missile system contains a million and a half parts, and getting them all to work together is a problem of astronomical proportions, says Paul Lieberman, associate research engineer at Illinois Institute of Technology, who lectures on propulsion systems.

A homespun comparison is provided by the electric radio and the electric razor. They work well, individually, but not together.

The problem with rockets, then, is that of getting everything to work together. Even if the rockets were composed of only 300 parts which worked properly 999 times out of a thousand, the unit's probability of success would still be only [illegible] out of every 10 runs.

This explains why we can have a rocket that will travel 600 miles and not be able to turn it into an intercontinental missile by merely enlarging the size of the parts to make up a larger rocket.

But, says Lieberman, success is only a matter of time. Scientists and missilemen will work out their rocket problems and "most of us will see the space age in full bloom."

Point of interest during the current concern over the adjustment of the economy may be found in the fact that the American people have built up a strong annual income stabilizer in the form of personal protection programs.

Figures compiled from governmental and nongovernmental sources show that the combined public and private programs established to protect the individual against the economic impact of death, disability and retirement are currently contributing the huge sum of more than $23 billions a year in the aggregate to the nation's income stream.

This figure is the equivalent of about $1 out of every $13 of total personal income for the year based on 1957 data. Both the total of the payments under these protection programs and their relationships to aggregate disposable personal income have been going up steadily year after year, and now are at new record levels. The biggest single element of this great personal income source is life insurance, its benefit payments representing close to a third of the total.

With conditions as they are, it is interesting to note that the more publicized economic stabilizers, such as a personal income tax reduction, don't come close to the total payments the people are now receiving regularly out of the individual and family protection programs they have built up for themselves.

Style Show Is Climax to 1958 Spring Opening

1,500 Persons Enjoy Fashion Parade in Lincoln Gymnasium

A very well-staged fashion show staged by local apparel merchants as the highlight of the gala spring opening in Thief River Falls the past week-end received the plaudits of a crowd estimated at 1,500 or more persons Friday evening in the Lincoln high school gym.

Musical aggregations performing between features made for a lively showing of the 1958 fashions, which were very well received. Even the appearance of a few of the highly controversial 1958 chemise dresses failed to dampen the enthusiasm of those in attendance at the hour-and-one-half long affair.

The Lincoln high school concert band rendered several selections before the fashions were shown. During the show itself the crowd showed considerable appreciation for the renditions of the high school glee club under the direction of Bryandt Ulseth; vocal solo by Bert Tvelt; two numbers by a saxophone quintet, and two songs by the Lions club quartet.

Master of ceremonies duties were ably handled by Fred Franklin of KTRF, while Kay Barsen colorfully narrated the show. Background organ music was played by Jerry Joringdal.

Showing of fashions of past years made a big hit with the large assemblage. These ranged from a man's dress costume and woman's beach outfit of the Gay Nineties to the ankle length trousseau of the mid-1930's, with a glimpse of a girl high school graduate's dress in 1918, a woman's dress outfit from around the turn of the century, and, last but not least, chemises worn by the ladies in the Roaring Twenties.

Several of the men who enjoyed their hay-days in the 1920's probably enjoyed very much the vamp party dress as worn by a masked model who played the vamp part to the hilt.

The 1958 fashions for men, women and children were worn on stage by over 30 models, all well-known local residents. Children's outfits were shown first.

Dress-up styles followed, after which came casual styles and, to close the show, sport styles which were highly pleasing to all except, possibly, a few of the men who expect more swim suits to be modeled at a showing of sport fashions.

The style show committee was composed of Mrs. Robert Brooten, Montgomery Ward; Mrs. Walt Larson, Lein's and Junior Shop, and Mrs. Orvis Olen, Fashion Shop.

Firms participating in the fashion showing were Hamilton's, the Fashion Shop, B & L Store, Montgomery Ward, Lien's, and Bjorkman's. Local jewelry and shoe firms also furnished accessories for the fashions modeled in the show.

One Minor Traffic Mishap Saturday

$80 Damage Sustained by M. R. Leverson Car

Only one minor property damage accident was reported locally by city police over the past week-end, thus local drivers are keeping a fairly clean record for the year to date.

The accident occurred about 12:30 Saturday when Martin R. Leverson, city, made a right turn onto Second st. from Horace behind Marvin R. Nelson, Newfolden, who took an angle parking stall near the corner just passing the intersection. Nelson was driving on E. Second St.

In driving into the stall Nelson slowed somewhat, thus his continental tire arrangement projected into the street and Leverson apparently not noticing it, scraped the right side of his 1953 model car on it.

About $80 damage was sustained by the Leverson car, while the Nelson car was undamaged. Neither driver was tagged, police said.

Fire Department Responds to Five Calls in 24 Hours

$400 Damage Results from Blazes in and Near City on Friday and Saturday

The Thief River Falls fire department put in a busy 24 hours last week-end when it responded to five alarms from Friday afternoon to Saturday afternoon. Total loss was estimated at $400 by Fire Chief Roy Langevin.

The first call came Friday at 1:10 p.m. from the Elizabeth Marquette farm a mile south of Greenwood cemetery, where a grass fire endangered buildings, but no damage resulted.

Later in the afternoon firemen were called to a vacant house at 713 Kendall av. N., where a grass fire developed in the yard. There was no damage.

Two calls were turned in Saturday at 2:30 p.m. One came from the Ernest Lien place on Greenwood Blvd., where a grass fire destroyed a small shed valued at $100, another shed being saved by the firemen.

The second call came from the Carl Finstad farm three miles southeast of the city in Rocksbury township. The Finstads had been burning rubbish, and, thinking the fire was out, came into the city, but on their return found that a small shed had burned down and a chicken coop had caught fire.

The firemen used water from the rural truck water tank and from a stock tank to quench the blaze. Finstad credited the department with averting a heavy loss, as the chicken house was attached to a machine shed, milk house and barn. Loss was estimated at $300.

The last call in the series came from the Kenneth Ose home northeast of the round house, where a chimney fire developed at 3:15 p.m., there being no damage.

Consumers Co-op Reelects 3 Men to Board Saturday

1957 Volume of $642,544 Is Reported at Annual Meeting in TRF Armory

Attendance at the Consumers Co-op annual meeting Saturday in the armory was cut somewhat by many farmers being in the field doing spring work, but a highly successful meeting was reported by Leonard Furuseth, manager of the Co-op.

Harry Solberg, Robert Ramback and E. L. Swanson were reelected to terms on the board of directors.

Main speaker at the meeting was Andy Lampen, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, St. Paul, who delivered an address stressing the need for greater farm credit.

Lampen also outlined ways of obtaining farm credit and the various agencies through which credit may be obtained.

Lloyd Iverson, fieldman, presented the financial report for the year. He listed sales at $642,564.06, with net earnings reported at $41,425.29. The association has 94 per cent farmer ownership, and an assets to liabilities ratio of approximately 16 to 1 was reported.

Sheriff Richards Slugged by Youth

Darryl Mathson, 19, Due to Appear in Court Today

A rural youth from east Red Lake county, Darryl Mathson, 19, was to appear in municipal court here today as the aftermath of an altercation at Highlanding Hall Saturday evening, in which he slugged Sheriff Charles Richards and then ran away.

Richards said he had picked Mathson up for possession of beer by a minor and had taken him to his car. As the sheriff was holding the car door open for the youth, someone watching said something which diverted his attention.

At this time Mathson swung on Richards, breaking his glasses and knocking him against another car. Richards did not have his hands on the youth at the time so he fled.

Mathson's identity was learned later and he was picked up at his home and brought to Thief River Falls.

Richards was treated at Northwestern Hospital for cuts above

Florian Farmers Join in Soil Conservation

Dan Borowicz and Sons, Robert and Raymond who farm southeast of Florian, are new cooperators with the Marshall county soil conservation district. Their farms represent the west central area of Marshall County or the sandy type of soils found in the Florian, Radium and Strandquist areas.

Mr. Borowicz and his son Raymond operate the home farm of 540 acres. The older son Robert, has a 240 acre farm nearby.

The Borowicz family learned of the new Soil Conservation District through Leonard Yutrzenka, a district supervisor who farms in their area.

Their main interests in the district are to learn of land classification, have a soil survey on their farms, and obtain help with some drainage problems. The home 540 acre farm has 129 head of sheep and 42 head of cattle. The remainder of the land is in cash crops of either grain or potatoes.

Part of the dairy cattle are dual purpose. Long range plans call for culling out these cattle and replacing with high grade Holstein calves produced from the artificial breeding with their foundation Holstein cows.

Robert has 15 Holstein milk cows on his 240-acre farm. In addition to his dairy, he has cash grain crops. At present, he is not sure of future farm operation plans.

Both families are interested in working out a conservation plan for their farms and have already been using the stubble mulch practices with good results.

Wool Payment Plan Outlined by County ASC

Incentive Payment Applications Are Due Before May 1

If you have sold wool or unshorn lambs since April 1, 1957, chances are you have earned a payment under the federal wool incentive program. To collect it, be sure to file an application at your County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation office not later than April 30, Oscar J. Houske, county ASC chairman, reminded farmers today.

These applications, Houske said, are to cover wool and unshorn lambs marketed not later than March 31, 1958. If there is any detail of a sale which is not completed until after that date, the transaction goes over into 1958 marketings and will be eligible for payment in 1959.

Wool incentive payments are made under the National Wool Act of 1954. Payments on shorn wool are a direct incentive to increase production. Payments on unshorn lambs are made to encourage normal marketing of lambs with the wool on and avoid unusual shearing to get the shorn wool payment. The goal of the program is to increase U. S. production to 300 million pounds of shorn wool—about a one-third increase over production in recent years.

The program for 1958, recently announced, will be similar to that during the past year, with the incentive price continuing at 62 cents per pound. To encourage the best possible job of marketing by wool growers, the farmer earns a higher incentive payment by getting a higher price for his wool.

Both sheep numbers and shorn wool production appear to be on the increase in this country, according to a March report on the wool situation by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The report also states that imports are on the decline, and that the Government has disposed of the last of its wool holdings acquired under the 1952-54 price-support program.

Farm Economists in City Thursday Give Stimulating Talks

Prices paid Minnesota dairymen for whole milk are the lowest paid in any of the dairy states.

This was one of the facts emphasized at Thursday's farm discussion program which kicked off the 1958 spring opening in Thief River Falls. The program was held in the city auditorium Thursday afternoon, with fair attendance by area farmers.

The statement that Minnesota dairymen are so poorly paid for their milk, in relation to prices paid in some other states for whole milk, was made by Dr. Ermond Hartmans, farm management specialist from the University of Minnesota.

Hartmans was the featured speaker on the program. The event was opened by a review of farm records kept under the vocational agriculture training program, by Art Aune.

Dr. Lauren Granger, also a U. of M. farm management specialist, told those present at the program that gross income in this area is behind gross income in average Minnesota counties, while expenses in the same area run higher than those in the counties with the greater income.

Granger emphasized the importance of maintaining good farm records in the effort toward successful farming. "You can't figure profits without records," Granger stated.

Farmers can also note trends by keeping close watch on their records, Granger said. Records are a valuable evaluation tool and help the farmer chart his course for the future, he emphasized in urging other farmers to come into the farm accounting program offered through the local vo-ag department.

Dr. Hartmans, is a native of the Netherlands who came to the U of M. in 1953. His topic was "The Agricultural Revolution and How it Affects the Farm Business." The statement concerning low milk prices paid Minnesota dairymen was only one of many he made to jolt his farm audience.

He also showed contrasts in farming now and 25 years ago, when, before extensive farm mechanization, an acre of corn could be raised for $6, as contrasted to today's cost of $30. Labor involved 25 years ago was 25 hours, now six hours. As a result, Hartmans emphasized, the farmer has been forced to do a bigger volume in order to show a reasonable profit.

Unless a farmer has a gross income of $10,000 his chances of $3,000 net income are very poor, depending on the efficiency of the individual farmer, he said.

Figures taken from actual farms, he said, show that expenses for every $100 in sales rose from $53 in 1930-34 to $72 in 1956. Furthermore, he emphasized, the cost structure cannot be changed—it is related to competition between individual farmers. Another startling figure he quoted was that out of 5 million farmers in the U. S. 1½ million have a gross income of $2,500 or less!

One of the big competitors of

Solicitors in Red Cross Drive Urged to Finish Canvass

L. J. Gustafson, Drive Treasurer, Reports $480 Turned in up to Today

Little progress was reported in the current Red Cross drive in Pennington county, according to officials of the drive.

Contributions to date stand at approximately $650 according to L. J. Gustafson treasurer. He said most of the donations turned in so far are from the city area and that very little has been turned in from the rural phase of the drive.

The 1958 campaign is running about two weeks behind schedule in Pennington county so Gustafson urged that all drive workers complete their calls as quickly as possible so as to make possible conclusion of the drive by mid-April.

He stated that contributions turned in so far have been running slightly under those of 1957 but that not enough have been turned in to establish a definite trend for the drive as a whole.

Jacquelyn Bagley Wed To Dr. Kenneth Hanson

The United Lutheran church of Middle River was the scene of a beautiful candle-light wedding Saturday evening, March 8, when Miss Jacquelyn Bagley, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Bagley of Middle River, became the bride of Dr. Kenneth G. Hanson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Keneth Hanson of Los Angeles, Calif.

Her father performed the double ring ceremony assisted by Rev. Leslie Wassberg of Warren, brother-in-law of the bride. The altar was graced with baskets of pink gladioli, white carnations and lighted candelabra. The aisles were decorated with candles, leather leaf ferns and vanda orchids. The orchids were given by the groom's parents who came by plane from Hawaii.

Forrest Brown, brother-in-law of the bride, presided at the organ for the traditional nuptial music and also accompanied the soloist, Miss Joan Evenson, friend of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a white waltz length gown of candle-light embroidered crystellete over taffeta. The fitted bodice was fashioned with a scoop neckline outlined by a narrow embroidered edge and a full bouffant skirt with matching lace edging. Her matching gauntlets came to a point over the wrists and her fingertip veil of silk fell from a crown of seed pearls and paillettes. Her only jewelry was a strand of baby seed pearls belonging to the groom's mother. She carried a cascade bouquet of 12 white phanlenopsis orchids.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was her sister, Miss Carol Jean Bagley and bridesmaid was Mrs. Forrest Brown, Jr. of Zimmerman, Minn., also a sister of the bride. They wore identical dresses of pink, floral polished cotton with white elbow length gloves, gifts from the bride. They carried bouquets of crescent cascades of pink and white cymbidium orchids. Their headbands were garlands of deeper pink orchids.

The flower girls, Linda Wassberg and Beth Olson, nieces of the bride, wore pink organdy dresses with white accessories. They carried baskets of white carnations and deep pink sweetheart roses, centered with a white cymbidium orchid.

The groom chose as his attendants, Dr. J. N. Tolt of Minneapolis as bestman and Dr. Gordon Robertson, also of Minneapolis as groomsmen. Serving as ushers were Emil and Robert Bagley. They all wore dark dinner jackets with white carnation boutonnieres.

Mrs. Bagley, mother of the bride, chose a beige nylon lace dress with matching accessories and a corsage of deep purple orchids for her daughter's wedding. The groom's mother wore soft olive green with white accessories, and a corsage of chartruse cypridium orchids.

Following the ceremony a reception was given by the bride's parents in the church parlors for approximately 150 guests. Refreshments were served buffet style with Mrs. Forrest Brown of Zimmerman and Mrs. Dave Janssen of Minneapolis cutting and serving the wedding cake. The cake was decorated in pink and white and was topped with a pale pink orchid. Mrs. Orville Olson of Renwick, Iowa and Mrs. Leslie Wassberg of Warren, poured.

The bride is a graduate of the Middle River High school, class of 1951. She attended Augsburg College and is a graduate of the school of nursing at Fairview Hospital in Minneapolis. The groom is a graduate of the University of California Medical school, and is now establishing his residency at General Hospital in Minneapolis.

Following their honeymoon Dr. and Mrs. Hanson are now at home at 3122 37th Ave. So. in Minneapolis.

Falls Squares Met Saturday March 29

Falls Squares members and guests alike were unanimous in their praise of Lee Newton who called the figures of the sets at the dance held at Northrup Auditorium March 29. Newton kept all dancers on their toes during the evening.

Mixers and squares were on the program, among the favorites being "Alabama Jubilee", "Grand Square" and "Don't Blame It All On Lee! This last dance is a specialty with Lee, where the dancers had best not "get ahead" of the caller, or they will find he has changed the call and they are going the wrong way. With everyone on the floor "mixed-up" there was much comment and merriment. Mrs. Newton accompanied her husband and wore a two-piece square dance dress, which was complementary to the western apparel worn by Lee. Dancing terminated at 11:30 at which time coffee was served.

Little Chorale Concert Provides Musical Treat

(By Bryant Ulseth)

The favored few attended the final concert association presentation for the 1957-58 season Thursday evening in the form of "The Little Chorale". The program, a rare treat indeed, was alive and refreshing, as the warm personality of the group was evident from beginning to end. Each of the eight voices had its own distinctive quality and each one was an accomplished soloist; yet, a perfect blend could be obtained on the soft passages.

The choreography or changes in the formation of chorage added a great deal of interest to the production. In thinking of an octet on the stage, one has a mental image of eight people in a single line, but this group had several interesting stage settings.

The programming itself was excellent as the audience was carried swiftly through the old masters, art songs of the Romantic period, traditional folk tunes, Broadway musical excerpts and operatic selections. None of the four sections of the program was allowed to get too heavy and timely comments by members of the ensemble were welcome explanations of unfamiliar compositions.

Outstanding selections of the program included the "Grand Fugue" from Verdi's opera, "Falstaff," and a number of Schubert's art songs. These difficult works are usually performed by only accomplished soloists, however, it was rather amazing to hear the way in which the entire chorale could handle the nuances and little delicacies of the songs. The program was appropriately concluded as the octet sang the Easter chorale, "O Sacred Head".

Pleasant Weather Continues in Area

Field Work Promises to Become General Shortly

Spring continued her winning ways over the the past week-end, although some cloudiness Sunday threatened the area with rain, which probably wouldn't be unwelcome unless in heavy amounts. Spring field work gives promise of becoming general in a few days.

Temperatures since Thursday have ranged from a high of 51 Saturday to a low of 21 Friday. The temperature stayed above the freezing mark Monday morning, while other lows were 25 and 31. Barely a trace of precipitation was noted Sunday.

Incidentally, last Thursday's weather story was squeezed out of that Times edition, so it is worth noting, today that the ice went out of the river pool here at 6:09 a.m. Wednesday, March 26, which probably is the earliest it has gone out in the memory of any person in the city.

At least this date will stand as a record until someone definitely comes up with records to show it has opened earlier in years way back in the dim past. The ice, however, remains on most smaller streams and lakes in the area, as noted in observations by this reporter Sunday.

The forecast, as furnished by KTRF: partly cloudy with scattered very light showers tonight and Tuesday. No important temperature changes. Highs today will range from 52 to 62 and the low tonight is expected to be 30-35.

Drivers Tagged in Traffic Accident

Car Hit North of City as It Turned off Highway 59

Two drivers were tagged by the highway patrol Saturday after they were involved in a minor accident seven miles north of the city on highway 59 about 5:30 p.m., Capt. Walter Anderson reported today.

Harvey L. Copp, rt. 2, city, and Lenos A. Olson, Newfolden, were both travelling north on 59 when Copp allegedly tried to make a left turn without signalling just as Copp was attempting to pass him.

Anderson said both drivers were at fault since turning without signalling and passing at an intersection are both violations of traffic rules. The accident occurred in Marshall county so they will appear in court at Warren or Middle River.

Farm Economists Give Stimulating Talks Thursday

Minnesota dairy farmers is another crop raised in Minnesota, soy bean oil. A pound of soy bean oil can be produced for 10c, while it costs more than 30c a lb. to produce butterfat. Thus oleomargerine can be priced so competitively it is easy to see why per capita butter consumption has dropped from 18.7 to 8.7 lb. and is certain to drop even more. He cited large numbers of dairy farmers who do not buy butter for their own home consumption!

Because of a poor market for Minnesota whole milk, 80 per cent of it goes into manufactured milk products—and last year 60 per cent of the powdered milk produced in the U.S.A. had to be given away, Hartmans related. Thus, he stated, the real problem of the dairy farmer is that he is producing products for which there is not a good market. The average return for the Minnesota dairyman's labor is only 75c an hour as a result.

Beef is a much more profitable product for our area, according to Hartmans. In 1925 a dairyman had to produce 300 lb. of milk to equal the income from 100 lb. of beef. Now the ratio is 650 lb. of milk to 100 lb. of beef. Hogs, in contrast, pay $2.50 and sheep are highest of all at $2.87 per hr. of labor spent in raising them.

The net result of the present economy in Minnesota is that too many farmers are living on the interest on their investment, and are not showing a profit. Asked about the possibility of changing the market picture for Minnesota milk, Hartmans said every state has its own restrictions which make it almost impossible to sell milk produced in Minnesota in other states, even though many of the states are deficient in milk production. Minnesota has restrictions of its own, he added.

The successful farmer, in many cases, will quit dairying completely to go into sheep, hogs or feeder cattle. He forecast a dim future for cash grain farmers, however. He urged that farmers work through their county extension service to keep up with farm developments, in order to be more efficient. He, too, urged that farmers keep records. Last, but not least, he emphasized, adjustments must be made consistently to assure greater success in farming.

The meeting was adjourned following Hartmans' address, after which refreshments were served those present, at the area vocational school cafeteria.

Guided tours of the vocational school closed the Thursday program.

Last Rites Are Conducted For John Henning

Funeral services for John Henning, a long time resident of the Middle River community, were conducted Wednesday, March 19 at Our Saviors Lutheran church in Thief Lake with Rev. Merlin Pleson and Rev. E. G. Bagley officiating. Interment was made in the church cemetery. Mr. Henning passed away at Northwestern Hospital March 16 at the age of 87 years.

John Henning was born July 23, 1870 in Bergsjo Helsingland, Sweden, and at the age of 22 years he migrated to the United States, living for one year in the state of Iowa. In 1893 he moved to Marshall county, living in Spruce Valley township, where he was united in marriage to Emma Anderson. Mr. and Mrs. Henning then moved to Thief Lake where they homesteaded. Mrs. Henning passed away in 1921.

In 1923 he was united in marriage to Clara Abrahamson and they farmed in Thief Lake township until 1945 when they retired from farming and moved to this city. Mrs. Clara Henning passed away in 1957.

In his early years at Thief Lake Mr. Henning did extensive grain farming. Later his primary interest was in dairy farming becoming one of the outstanding dairymen.

He served as an assessor for Thief Lake township for many years. He was vice president of the Middle River creamery board, also serving on the school board of District 147 for several years as treasurer.

Survivors include four daughters, Mrs. Holger Borg (Ress) of Quartz Hill, Calif.; Mrs. Alton Clark (Alice) of Minneapolis; Mrs. Joseph Blom (Hazel) of Middle River and Miss Viola Henning of this city; five sons, John, Alfred, Evald and Eddie Henning all of Middle River; Alvin of St. Paul; 6 grandchildren; ten great-grandchildren; one stepdaughter and one step-son. He was preceded in death by his first wife, Emma and second wife, Clara and one daughter. Collins Funeral Home of Middle River were in charge of arrangements.

Large Audience at Cantata Sunday

Community Chorus Gives An Excellent Rendition

The Lincoln high school auditorium Sunday evening was well filled by an audience that enjoyed the presentation by the 75-voice community chorus of the Easter cantata, "The Seven Last Words of Christ", by Theo. Dubois.

The large group responded well to the direction of Bryant Ulseth, while Mrs. Alan Purdy ably filled the difficult role of piano accompanist.

Effective renditions were given by the three soloists, including Mrs. Verne L. Hagen, soprano; James Roller, tenor; and Professor James Fudge, baritone all of Grand Forks, N. Dak.

Mayor O. D. Beich spoke briefly during the intermission, complementing the participants on their excellent performance, and expressing the hope that cantata could be repeated next year.

ALTAR BOUND . . . Singer-actor Frank Sinatra and Lauren Bacall, widow of Humphrey Bogart, will soon marry, according to Hollywood reports.

GROWING WITH YOUR CHILD

Institute of Child Welfare

It's Lucky that We Never Quite Grow Up

It's lucky that we never quite grow up." A Dutch physician, Dr. Meerlo, makes this point, an apt one for parents and teachers prone to become impatient with growing children. Compared to the lowliest insect, your new baby seems so poorly equipped for life. Dr. Meerlo cites the digger wasp with its full life's span of knowledge present at birth. He knows that spiders are its juciest tidbit. It knows that a sting properly placed in a spider's head ganglia paralyzes it so that it remains fresh to be eaten at will. These things it knows in spite of its mother having disappeared as soon as her eggs were laid. The wasp's early independence in survival comprises its main advantage, though, because paralyzing spiders and building breeding holes is about the sum total of the life achievement of the wasp. It is a slave forever of these innate dictators.

The human baby remains dependent a relatively longer time. But this long infancy and prolonged dependency are not time wasted. They lay the groundwork for the human to surpass all other creatures in creativity and control of environment. The human child uses this extra time to absorb infinitely more ideas and experiences. Not only does he absorb them, but he sees, hears, tastes, smells, and feels, and then he proceeds to squeeze, roll, bang, divide, and combine, so that he either learns what things are or changes them into some new form which pleases or serves him more. Best of all, he remembers what he has learned, and he applies and adapts as he grows.

Parents and teachers may well think of these prices preliminaries when they weary of children's slow progress toward some "ideal" maturer status. They may well think of them when they are tempted to give a restraining "No," or when they are anxious to fit them too soon into some routinized way of life.

For the real producer is always in a state of "becoming" and he has more tools to "become with" when his early experiences have been rich and varied. In this sense it is lucky that human beings never quite grow up.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Paul Schenky, who passed away 5 years ago, March 31st.

Gone is the face we loved so dear.
Silent is the voice we loved to hear.
Too far away for sight or speech
But not to far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.

Sadly missed by wife, Gladys and daughters, Gloria and Bonita. 1126p

Card Of Thanks

We wish to extend our sincere appreciation to all the friends of our brother Richard Lorentson, who extended aid and visited him while he was confined in the hospital and for all the kindness and sympathy expressed in memorials and floral offerings. SCANNING THE NEWS

THE "baby boom" so significant on the American family scene for the past decade is expected to taper off in the next few years and, possibly, by 1965 to be replaced by the early teen group (10-14) as the largest single age group in the population.

The latest Bureau of the Census figures show that the age group under five numbered just about 19 million as of July 1 last year, the equivalent of one out of every nine in the entire population. Projections into the middle of the next decade anticipate a halt in this group's rapid growth, with a decline of somewhat over a million by 1960 and a rise to near the current number by 1965.

The early teen group, which totaled 15 million at the middle of last year, is expected to add up to over 17 million in 1960, and to cross the 19 million level in 1965 to become the largest single age group in the population at that time. And the age group between 15 and 19, which numbered under 12 million last July, will according to projections increase to nearly 13½ million in 1960 and cross the 17 million mark by 1965.

These changes are certain to have far-reaching effect on the saving and spending patterns of the American family. Raising children becomes progressively more costly each year as they grow up, reaching the costliest period when they are ready for college or other institutions of higher learning in their late teens.

This inevitable strain on the average family budget has been accentuated in recent years by two developments in the economy and in the composition of the population. The first is inflation, which has raised the cost of living and of education and other necessities to record high levels. The second is the growth in the number of large families, with families of three and four children more common now than they have been in many years.

Whatever effect this changing structure of the population may have on personal consumption expenditures over the next decade, it points up the average family's need for more personal protection and more saving to meet the financial responsibilities that, for many, are just around the corner.

Something else to look for: a change in voting patterns brought about by the increasing number of voters in the young age group.

"As the bumper crop of babies born since World War II matures into 21-year-old voters," says Economist Frank G. Dickinson, Director of the A M A Bureau of Medical Research," the electorates of the Western nations will start 'younging'."

This means that:

". . . As the proportion of older voters, which has been rising rapidly in the 20th century, reaches a peak and then declines, the accent will again be on youth.

". . . The 'younging' of the electorate—one force of many—will lessen the clamor for the guaranteed future,' the riskless society.

". . . Political leaders will want to please the younger voters at every turn, instead of the older voters."

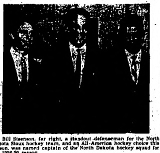
Joey Poole UND Hockey Co-captain



Bill Steenson, far right, a standout defenseman for the North Dakota Sioux hockey team, and an All-America hockey choice this season, was named captain of the North Dakota hockey squad for the 1958-59 season.

Named as alternate captains of the Sioux were Joey Poole, left, a fast-skating center-ice player from Thief River Falls, and Julian Brunette, center, a sturdy defenseman from Fort Frances, Ont.

The Sioux, under the coaching of Bob May, recorded a very successful season, winning the championship of the MIHL conference, and being runners-up in the NCAA hockey tournament held in Minneapolis a couple of weeks ago.—Grand Forks Herald photo.

Keeping Score with 'Huck' Olson

They Had A Plan

Coach Adolph Rupp's Kentucky Wildcats produced quite an upset when, in the finals of the NCAA basketball tournament at Louisville last week, they succeeded in "stopping" Seattle's famed Elgin Baylor, and defeat Seattle, 84 to 72.

Here's what the "Sports Illustrated" magazine has to say with regard to the strategy that was used by Rupp and Kentucky:

"It seems obvious now that Rupp decided there was nothing he could do about Baylor; he just didn't have the height or the skill. There was only one course open: get rid of Baylor. And that's what he did.

"He did it through a young man named John Crigler, easily the most under rated player in this tournament. Rupp set up a fast-moving pattern that forced Seattle into a continuous switching of defensive assignments until Baylor was left guarding Crigler and Crigler was left with the ball. So far so good and, actually, not too difficult to accomplish. But the crux of the matter was that at the moment Baylor was forced switch to Crigler, Crigler had taken advantage of an intricate series of legal blocking maneuvers and was already a half-step ahead of him and driving on a cleared out path to the basket. Baylor had to concede two points each time or try to stop Crigler without fouling him. In a tournament game players like Baylor concede nothing, and rightly so—of course. But he could not avoid the fouls, and before the game was 10 minutes old he had three. Two more and Seattle's key man would automatically be out of the game. The issue was decided with a full thirty minutes to go."

That was the NCAA tournament game. But just change the name of John Crigler to Jim Brown of Brainerd, and Elgin Baylor to Ray Cronk of Bemidji. Isn't it remarkable how the pattern of play in the Brainerd vs. Bemidji Lumberjacks state tournament game followed the pattern of the Kentucky vs. Seattle game? Or rather, the Kentucky vs. Seattle game was patterned after the Brainerd vs. Lumberjack tilt, for the NCAA finals was played on Saturday night, and Brainerd succeeded in fouling out Cronk on the Thursday night preceding.

Prexy Bob

At a meeting of team representatives—with six teams, Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, Erskine, Winger, Fosston, and Bagley, being represented—Bob Carlson of Thief River Falls was elected president of the Northern Minnesota baseball league for the 1958 season. Armand Sannes of Winger was chosen vice president, and Morris (Mush) Nornes of McIntosh was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Bemidji and Gonvick had "observers" at the meeting, but whether or not the two clubs will join the league is doubtful.

It was agreed that the league would revert to a one-game-a-week schedule. Last year's twice-a-week schedule did not prove a success.

Baseball Chatter

The directors of the Thieves senior baseball organization, at a meeting held last week, appointed Frank Gunderman manager for the 1958 season. Frank, a native of Ulen, Minnesota, joined the Thieves in mid-season last year, and turned in a capable performance at second base.

Managing won't be a new chore for Gunderman as he was manager of the Ulen club in the Norman-Polk circuit.

Lyle Westrum, player-manager of the Erskine Merchants, was in town the other day on business (he is in the insurance business in Erskine), but he had time to talk a bit about baseball. When asked if Erskine had hopes of securing the services of Bemidji's Clark (Corky) Johnson this season, Lyle expressed doubts. He added that he had heard rumors to the effect that Corky was running into scholastic difficulties at Minnesota, and that he, Lyle, wouldn't be surprised if Johnson joined a major league tryout camp.

Bemidi to Have Regional Science Fair April 12th

Some of America's future scientists will have their day when the high schools of northwest Minnesota send their top students to Bemidji on Saturday, April 12 for the regional science fair. These students will be typical of the boys and girls all over the state and nation whose interest in science has led them to do special research and create extra-curricular scientific projects which they will exhibit at science fairs throughout the county.

According to Dr. William Britton, associate professor of chemistry at Bemidji State college and Martin Thames, science instructor at Bemidji high school, co-directors of the fair for this region, there will be about sixty exhibitors at the fair. They also point out that the Bemidji fair is one of the seven such events being held throughout Minnesota under the sponsorship of the Minnesota Academy of Science.

The Minnesota Academy of Science is an association of Minnesota teachers of science, industrial scientists and medical researchers.

Estimated Income Tax Return Explained

(This is the fourteenth in a series of articles on Income Tax. These articles are made available as a public service by the Minnesota State Bar association, public relations committee.)

You may be required to file a declaration of estimated 1958 income tax in addition to filing your 1957 federal income tax return. If you are single you must file an estimate if your gross income can reasonably be expected to exceed $5,000; if you are married you must file an estimate if the gross income of you and your spouse can reasonably be expected to exceed $10,000 and your income $5,000.

However, if your gross income from sources other than wages can reasonably be expected to exceed $100 you must file an estimate if oyur gross income can reasonably be expected to exceed by more than $400 the product of $600 multiplied by the number of exemptions you are entitled to.

Your first quarter payment should be made when your estimate is filed. You will be sent notices prior to the dates the three remaining quarterly installments become due. If your payments of 1957 income taxes are in excess of your liability, your refund may be credited against payments due on your estimated 1958 income taxes. In preparing your estimate you should refer to your 1957 income tax return to determine whether you requested your refund to be credited on your estimated 1958 income taxes.

A charge of 6% is imposed on any underpayment of any installment. However, the fact that your 1958 income tax liability turns out to be greater than the amount included in your declaration of estimated 1958 income tax will not necessarily result in the imposition of a charge. If your payments are equal to or greater than 70% of your actual tax liability no charge will be made. And if your payments are larger than your liability for the previous year there will be no charge.

If you estimate that your 1958 tax will be less than your 1957 income tax liability, you may be in a penalty position. If during the year it appears that your 1958 income tax will substantially exceed what you had estimated it would be, you may have to amend your declaration of estimated tax to avoid the imposition of an extra charge.

This is the last of the series of articles prepared by the Minnesota State Bar Association to assist you in preparing your 1957 federal and Minnesota income tax returns. The purpose of the articles has been to discuss problems of general interest and to suggest areas of tax savings common to most taxpayers. Many deductions and exclusions applicable to only a small minority of taxpayers were not discussed. Clarity and complete accuracy have often been sacrificed in favor of making the articles brief. It has been assumed that if a possible tax saving has been suggested to you, you will further explore the possibility of taking the deduction by carefully studying the instructions or by consulting an expert, since it is in your self-interest to minimize your tax liability.

Michigan College Joins State Group

The Minnesota State College Conference, formerly made up of the state colleges at Bemidji, Mankato, Moorhead, St. Cloud and Winona, has been enlarged by the addition of Michigan College of Mining and Technology at Houghton, Michigan, it was announced today by Dr. C. R. Sattgast, chairman of the Minnesota State College President's Council, following a meeting of the group in St. Paul.

The best-selling book in the past 60 years is "In His Steps" by Charles Monroe Sheldon. It was published in 1897 and has sold more than 8 million copies.

Terms Sales Tax Burden to Farmer

'U' of M. Farm Economist Tells Results of Study

A sales tax in Minnesota would likely put a heavier portion of the total tax burden on farmers, according to Philip M. Raup, agricultural economist at the University of Minnesota.

His conclusion is based on a study he made while a member of Governor Freeman's tax study commission last year. He reports on this study in the current issue of "Minnesota Farm Business Notes," a University Agricultural Extension Service publication.

The sales tax has recently been considered as a possible method of increasing state tax revenue in Minnesota. It also has been proposed as a way of relieving the burden on the property tax. But in either case, Raup says, a sales tax would shift a larger portion of the tax burden to farmers.

He explains that the income tax falls relatively lightly on the farmer. A sales tax, however, is based on volume of purchases. Since farmers are heavy buyers of household goods and farm supplies, both for the farm business and for the home, a sales tax hits them harder than non-farmers.

Both Illinois and Iowa have 2½ percent sales taxes, although the two states handle them somewhat differently. A recent report from the University of Illinois shows that sales taxes on farm household items and farm machinery in that state averaged about 50 cents per acre, or roughly $24 per farm person annually. This was higher than the sales tax burden on the non-farm population.

Besides, the Illinois report did not include all farm purchases; it omitted building equipment, fencing, well supplies and other items. Therefore, the actual sales tax burden per farm person in Illinois is even higher than these figures show.

In Iowa, 1954 sales tax collections averaged $28 per person for farm families and $18 per person for non-farm families.

DFL Sets Precinct Caucuses April 8

To Select Delegates to County Conventions Apr. 19

"Grass roots politics will be in evidence in all parts of Minnesota Tuesday, April 8," Ray Hemenway, state DFL chairman said in Minneapolis today.

"That's the day the Democratic-Farmer-Labor caucuses will convene in every precinct in the state as the first step in party organization leading toward the state convention at Rochester May 23, 24, and 25.

"Persons attending the precinct caucuses will elect delegates to the county conventions which will be held April 19. County conventions, in turn, elect delegates to the state DFL convention where the party's official election year business is conducted.

"An interim step will be the party's district conventions set for May 3. This meeting elects district officers, names persons to serve on the various committees at the state get-together, and plans congressional district activities."

Each precinct in the county is entitled to one vote for each 100 votes cast for the DFL candidate for Governor in the 1956 general election.

Minnesota law requires that the precinct caucus meet from 8 to 9 a.m. before adjourning, Hemenway said.

Service Stations Have Gas Tax Guide

Tells How to Compute Income Tax Deductions

A handy guide for use by Minnesota motorists in computing the gasoline tax payments deductible on their federal and state income tax returns is being distributed at service stations throughout the state.

The free guide gives a breakdown of state and federal gasoline taxes paid by motorists last year for every 1000 miles of travel on the basis of 14 miles to the gallon. Only the 5 cent a gallon state gasoline tax is deductible. The three-cent a gallon federal gasoline tax may not be claimed.

The guide has been prepared by the Minnesota Petroleum Industries Committee. Robert T. Thornburg, Executive Secretary of the Committee, said his office has been swamped with questions from taxpayers concerning the amount of gasoline tax deductible.

"By using the tax guide, a motorist can estimate at a glance how much his state gasoline tax cost him last year," he pointed out. "If he traveled 10,000 miles, for instance, he paid $35.71. He also paid $21.43 in federal gasoline tax, which he may not claim as a deduction," he noted.

Crescent rolls represent the crescent moon on the Turkish flag and were first made in Budapest in 1686. The Turks had planned to take the city by night, but were heard by the bakers working in the night, who gave the warning and saved the city. As a reward they were permitted to make crescent-shaped rolls.

SLOW DOWN AND LIVE!

Propose Plan to Add to Wildlife Refuges

According to word received Thursday at the Mud Lake national wildlife refuge, Secretary of the Interior Fred A. Seaton announced the Department of the Interior has proposed that all net proceeds from duck stamp revenues be used for acquisition of lands of national wildlife refuges. This would be a new approach to the problem of preserving key wetlands for waterfowl management.

The proposal also calls for an increase in the price of the duck stamp from $2 to $3 to make possible an acquisition program at the pace necessary to offset the disappearance of these waterfowl areas in the face of expanding demand for new sites for home, farm and industry. This part of the proposal already has the endorsement of the International Association of Game Fish and Conservation Commissioners and the Secretary's advisory committee for fish and wildlife.

"I am convinced this could be one of the most important steps in the furtherance of the wildlife refuge system since its establishment by Theodore Roosevelt in 1903. The proposal makes sense as good fiscal policy and it also makes sense as good conservation," commented Secretary Seaton.

At the present rate of duck stamp sales, the proposal would make available $66 million in the next ten years for the preservation of important wildlife lands before they are lost through development for other purposes.

The present law contains no requirement for any specific portion of the revenues to be spent for acquisition. The only earmarking now is that not more than 15 percent may be used for law enforcement and printing and distributing the stamps. Much of the remainder has been spent for refuge operation and development, surveys and investigations.

Under the new proposal, these items would be handled by direct appropriation by Congress. The relatively small cost of printing and distributing would be the only charge covered by duck stamp funds, except acquisition.

To make possible the flexible refuge management required to handle harvests in the face of shrinking areas for public hunting, the department proposes that up to 40 percent of a refuge can be opened for hunting when the Secretary determines it to be sound wildlife practice. The plan also would make it possible to leave open to hunting such small ponds and potholes as may be acquired under this program.

Call It A Mistrial

When Governor Orville Freeman announced the appointment of a nonpartisan committee to study ethical and moral standards in state government, we were favorably impressed with the idea. There is a need for such a study, and while representation from rural Minnesota was singularly lacking in his list of appointees, the committee he named, headed by Dr. Charles J. Turck, president of Macalester college, deserved the respect and the confidence of all citizens.

We are satisfied that the members of this committee, having accepted the assignment, would have approached the problem in a fair manner and without reference to personalities. Only by such an approach could they hope to achieve a good result, acceptable to all groups and factions. Their objective, clearly, was to draft a code of ethics in government, reviewing present practices and defining as clearly as possible, which of these might be considered contrary to public interest.

Their field was not limited to one branch of the government. The judiciary and the executive branches are just as much in need of a study of this kind as is the legislative. We are sure the members of the committee would recognize the unfairness of limiting their research to only one part of the governmental process. Having confidence in the capacity and the integrity of the members of the committee, and recognizing a need for the kind of a study they were asked to conduct, we were hopeful of a good result.

We no longer are hopeful. A series of six editorial-page articles by the Minneapolis Tribune, dealing specifically with instances of alleged misconduct by members of the legislature, are unfair both to the great majority of the law makers and also to the members of the committee who are charged with the responsibility for bringing in a report based on an impartial study.

By the manner in which it has approached the problem, dealing largely in personalities, it is clear that the Tribune needs a fresher course in the ethics of journalism.

One of the commandments most newspapers impress upon their reporters is the generally accepted rule that law suits should not be tried in the news columns before they are tried in court.

The Governor's committee to study ethical and moral standards in state government is sitting as a court, not for the purpose of righting past wrongs or punishing past offenders, but to examine facts and to offer for consideration a code that will more clearly establish what of our present practices might properly be considered improper.

We do not need a new code to define ordinary corrupt practices. They are quite clearly defined in our present statutes. A new code of ethics is not needed in this field.

But there is a very real need for rules of conduct, and perhaps some limitations upon the activities of both private citizens and public officials, in dealing with public matters. This is the field, as we understand it, for which the Governor's committee was named and in which, we believe, it could have made a useful contribution.

Now that the Tribune has converted what should have been a thorough but orderly study into a witch hunt, there is no justification for the present committee to spend more time on the problem. Regardless of their merit, its findings will be looked upon as the verdict of a jury that has been subjected to improper influences. The present effort can now be written off as a mistrial.

But the idea behind such a study is a good one and deserves another chance. Considering the fact that the Governor's office itself is one of the state agencies that should be included in a study of ethical practices it probably would be well to have some independent agency name the committee that should handle the problem. That, however, is a matter of secondary importance.

Teacher Training

Charles Christianson, superintendent of schools of Roseau county, has made an earnest appeal to the members of the Thief River Falls board of education to reconsider their action in ordering the teachers training department discontinued.

Mr. Christianson makes a strong case for the continuation of the department. There is a need for it in the area. This need has been recognized by the state to the extent that the entire cost of operating the department is paid by the state. The need for the department as a source of supply for rural school teachers in the area is recognized by the state department of education.

So far we have heard no reasonable excuse for the action of the local board in discontinuing the department. As far as our community is concerned the dollar factor favors the operation. The state pays the cost. The payroll and the personal expenses of 16 students making their homes here, make it worthwhile as a little industry.

It has been said that such one-year teachers training courses should be discontinued because all teachers should be required to have college training. We know some competent school administrators who say the graduates of these one-year training courses are often better qualified as teachers than some college graduates, mainly because, to start with, they are eager-beavers to get started in teaching as a field in which they hope to advance.

And it is at the state level that general standards are established. Determining what the teacher qualifications shall be in rural schools is not one of the responsibilities of our local school officials.

Another excuse, and it has been offered seriously, is that we do not have room for this vast operation that requires space for 16 chairs and a desk. If our school officials wanted this service continued we are quite certain adequate space could be found within our present expanded school facilities. But we will not labor that point. If room for a class of 16 cannot be found within our schools we are certain a committee of citizens can find adequate room elsewhere in the community.

We believe the facts justify the reconsideration that the Roseau school official requests. Mr. Christianson has an excellent record as a rural school administrator, and he and the good people of the area he represents should have an opportunity to be heard.

And it is a matter about which our own forward-looking citizens should be concerned. As a community we have an interest, as well as a responsibility, in the overall education problems of the large area we serve. We have established an area vocational school, which is making good progress. We have hopes that at some future time we may be able to expand our high school to provide two years of college training.

Neither an area vocational school nor a junior college would be justified here to provide only for the needs of our immediate community. If we have serious ideas of growing greater as an educational center, we must realize that we will grow only as we are willing and able to serve.

Bill Knox, editor of Hoard's Dairyman and a long-time leader in the fight for a self-help program for the dairy industry, lets it be known in the current issue of his good magazine that he does not hold in high regard the leaders in the industry who have contributed nothing to the formulation of a plan and now find fault with the plan that is before Congress. He thinks they occupy a low rung on the ladder of ethics, recalling the oft-quoted comment of Benjamin Disraeli, that "it is much easier to be critical than correct."

There is an important election being held up in Canada today, a national election to decide who will be in charge of the government for several years to come. It isn't particularly pleasant to contemplate the fact that in the election campaign which is now ending, our country has been pointed to by both sides as a selfish and inconsiderate neighbor. Many Canadians feel toward us as many of our people felt toward England a few decades ago. Some of our neighbor's criticism of us no doubt is justified.

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

"The bravest man I ever knew?" said an explorer. "He was the man who took a taxi to the Bankruptcy Court and then invited the driver as a creditor."

Nature couldn't make us perfect, so she did the next best thing—she made us blind to our faults.

Common colds, says a New York researcher, are due to faulty use of our noses, which nature seems to have fallen behind the cigaret manufacturers in equipping with adequate filter tips.

THIS WEEK

—In Washington

With Clinton Davidson

Rep. Perkins Bass, a New Hampshire Republican, recently made a speech in the House that some think may have been the turning point that will lead, eventually, to repeal of all farm price supports and production controls.

Using figures supplied him by the White House and the Department of Agriculture, Rep. Bass attempted to show that Federal farm programs not only have failed to help farmers, but have also placed an unfair burden on consumers.

Many members sat in shocked silence, but the number who rose to support and praise Rep. Bass was a clear indication of a substantial division of opinion in the House over continuation of programs costing about $3 billion a year.

The threat of a consumer revolt against farm supports is one that farm spokesmen have feared for a long time. They recognize that if consumers are organized in opposition to farm programs there can be little doubt of the final result.

With a farm population already dwindled to 12% of the national total, the political power of the Farm Bloc is becoming weaker and weaker. It will become increasingly difficult to muster a majority back of programs sponsored by the Bloc.

Farm spokesmen are girding for a showdown vote at this session of Congress, but many of them concede, privately, that they face an up-hill battle. Two speeches emphasize the wide differences in opinion in Congress over farm legislation.

The farm viewpoint, as expressed by Rep. George Christopher, a Missouri Democrat, will be reported next week. Following are quotations from the speech of Rep. Bass:

"The program for high price supports is a failure. It has never and will never solve our farm problem. It has cost taxpayers untold billions of dollars.

"Most Americans would be astonished and deeply shocked at what it costs them to carry on this farm price support program. It cost in 1957 more than $3 billion, plus $2 billion in other USDA costs.

"If they knew what this program costs them as individuals they would become very curious indeed about what benefits, if any, they are getting for their money.

"Consumers are forced to pay twice for the farm support program. First, through taxes they pay to finance the program and, second, through higher costs of the food and clothing they buy.

"For example, suppose I told a young man with an income of $6,000 a year that it is costing him $11.50 a year for Federal programs to support the price of wheat. He would say 'Well, what do I get for my money?'

"And I would have to tell him that the effect is that the bread he buys costs him about $20 a year more than it otherwise would. The young man would say 'Are we crazy? Is the Federal Government carrying out a program to lower the standard of living of Americans?'

"Suppose that instead of paying for farm programs out of the Treasury, each of us walked up to the tax window and said 'How much do I owe for the farm program?' The answer would be $36.30 a year (on a $6,000 income).

"How would we feel about paying that at the tax window, and still pay in higher food prices also? We would say 'no, that's one I don't want to pay.'"

QUESTIONS answered for VETERANS

Additional information or assistance on veterans' benefits may be obtained by writing or visiting the VA contact representative at the Grand Forks VA office.

Q—My State has just paid me a veterans bonus. Must I count it as income for VA pension purposes?

A—No. Under a recent law, state bonuses are not to be considered as income for pension purposes.

Q—I exchanged my permanent GI insurance policy for a paid-up policy of a smaller amount on which I no longer have to pay premiums. Will I continue to receive dividends on this paid-up policy?

A—Yes. Your paid-up policy will share in any dividends declared.

Q—Would the fact that I previously had attended a farm school prevent me from taking on-the-farm training under the Korean GI Bill?

A—The law would prevent you from taking GI farm training if the proposed course is substantially equal to the course you already had in school. If it's not the same as your school course, you could take it under the Korean GI Bill.

Q—Since I am eligible for VA outpatient treatment, could I just go to my family doctor and have him send VA the bill for his treatment of my service-connected disabilities?

A—No. You first must obtain VA approval for medical care by your family doctor.

PARKINS CORNER DRUGS

REPORT from the GOVERNOR

by Orville L. Freeman

I am well aware of the number of wisecracks that are made about special "days" or "weeks" that are set aside for special observance of some worthy cause or activity. Yet such observances do serve a useful purpose, and often provide an opportunity for calling special attention to an activity that deserves more notice than it usually gets.

Clean-up Week

Clean-up Week is one such promotion. It has become traditional to designate one week each spring for emphasis on community activities to get rid of all accumulations that may be drab, offensive, unhealthy or hazardous. Local officials, business men, and community organizations usually do a good job in promoting such activities. This year April 14th to 19th is to be Clean-up Week in Minnesota.

Duties of Health Officers

Under Minnesota's health laws and regulations, the health officer of each city and village must make a "thorough sanitary inspection of his municipality in the month of May, and present a written report of such inspection, together with his recommendations, to the council . . ." A copy of this report is also sent to the Minnesota State Board of Health. Another regulation provides for the service of abatement notices upon those who still have nuisances on their premises.

Beauty, and Safety

An effective clean-up campaign can do wonders to improve the attractiveness of any community. It can also be a major contribution to public health and safety. Accumulated refuse can be sources of disease, and breeding grounds for rodents. Debris left around can contribute to fires and accidents. And a general clean-up campaign that improves the appearance of the outdoors is a real stimulus to citizens to get rid of refuse and debris that may have accumulated within their homes.

Accident Prevention

Accidents are the leading cause of death in children. They account for more than one-third of all deaths in the early years. One half of these fatal child accidents are home fatalities, and one-third are due to some type of motor vehicle accident. Yet accidents are preventable.

Community campaigns can do much to remove many of the causes of accidents to children. We all know the appeal of a junk yard to children. And we are aware of the hazards it can contain. We can eliminate the dangers that lie in abandoned wells and refrigerators, and in accumulated debris that can invite fire. Boys and girls themselves can be taught what kinds of things constitute serious hazards, and can be volunteer inspectors to search out and help to eliminate such materials.

Community Responsibility

Minnesota communities have done an excellent job in making themselves attractive, and we expect an even more effective effort in this, our centennial year. We hope that those who visit our state this year will be impressed with the attractiveness and community spirit of our cities and towns.

Citizen Responsibility

We are hoping, too, for continued improvement along our highways. The state spends more than two hundred thousand dollars each year in cleaning up debris thrown along our highways. We think, however, that our campaign against "litter bugs" is having a good effect, for last year showed some improvement over the previous year. But as the snow melts each spring, and before the vegetation can hide it, we see accumulations of tin cans along our roads. We need the cooperation of all who use our highways to prevent this kind of blot on the beauty of our state.

THE MINNESOTA STORY

Prepared by the

SPEED DEMONS

Apparently traffic hazards existed before the day of the automobile. The "St. Paul Press" of December 27, 1871, complained, "If there is no ordinance compelling all persons who glide around in cutters to have bells on their horses, there ought to be."

"Pedestrians who have their ears done up in warm muffs or voluminous scarfs," he went on, "should have some chance for their lives these days when the streets are so crowded with vehicles. Under any circumstance, it is scarcely the proper thing for a man to drive at the rate of six or seven miles an hour through the streets, without making some sort of a demonstration. Ring the bells, or look out for these noiseless cutters."

GENERAL SHERMAN'S VISIT

General William Tecumseh Sherman of Civil War fame was in command of the army's Division of the Mississippi with headquarters at St. Louis in 1866. In May of that year he spent five days in the Twin Cities area while on a tour of inspection to Forts Snelling, Ridgely, Ripely, Abercrombie, and Wadsworth.

Elaborate plans had been made for the Civil War hero's reception, but he arrived before he was expected and went unescorted to a St. Paul hotel. He spent the first two days of his visit seeing prominent Minnesotans and the commandant at Fort Snelling.

A great public demonstration in Sherman's honor was arranged for May 28. He and his party spent the morning at Fort Snelling, Minnehaha Falls, and Minneapolis, where they visited the flour mills and attended a reception and dinner at the Nicollet House.

The group then returned to Fort Snelling where the members boarded Commodore William Davidson's new steamboat, the "City of St. Paul," which had come up from St. Paul carrying three hundred people. A reception honoring Sherman was held on board the boat as it moved downstream. According to a contemporary newspaper account, the affair was a "splendid collation, consisting of champagne and dessert delicacies," which were "served in a plentiful manner to all the excursionists."

Upon arriving in St. Paul Sherman was taken to the Merchants Hotel, where a huge crowd awaited him. From a balcony overlooking Third Street he made a brief address.

At nine o'clock that evening he was the guest of honor at a banquet attended by two hundred invited guests, who sat down to "one of the most tempting suppers ever spread in St. Paul," plentifully accompanied by champagne. The banquet and the band concert that followed lasted well into the night.

OSCAR WILDE

Victorian writer Oscar Wilde visited the Twin Cities during a tour of the United States in 1882. Apparently his eccentric behavior and his unusual clothes attracted more attention than the topics of his lectures, for little discussion of his ideas appears in newspaper reports of the day.

An announcement in a St. Paul paper of the Irishman's forthcoming appearance contained the statement that "this utterly, all but and entirely if, concentrated too too young man has secured more gratuitous notoriety than any Wilde animal which has heretofore landed on these hospitable shores."

After Wilde's Minneapolis appearance on March 15, reviewers devoted much space to his costume, which included a "low-necked shirt with a turned-down collar and large white necktie, a black vest of the same material, knee breeches, long black stockings, and low shoes with bows."

A St. Paul audience on the following night saw the speaker "dressed in purple silk velvet wide sleeves, cut-away coat and knee breeches. One had was encased in a white kid glove and the other sported a lace handkerchief."

Wilde lectured on "The English Renaissance" in both cities. But he also found time to advise Americans to develop a native art and to make use of indigenous materials and designs.

GEORGE NORTHRUP

One of the most romantic figures in early Minnesota history was George Northrup. His many exploits and his untimely death made him a popular hero of his day.

Northrup was sixteen years old when he arrived at St. Paul in 1853. At first, he found employment in a mercantile and fur establishment.

Possessed of a restless spirit, however, he shortly set out on foot in search of adventure, following a Red River trail to Pembina, a settlement near the Canadian border. He later estimated that he had walked seven hundred miles to reach his destination, and he claimed that he had made the journey "for nothing more or less than to go out on the plains and kill a buffalo."

Northrup was soon asked to teach in a mission school at Pembina. He accepted the job, although he knew that his predecessor had been killed by hostile Indians while he was engaged in building the school-house.

In 1855 Northrup was again on the go. Accompanied only by his dog, and with all his supplies packed on a handcart, he tried to follow the westward trail of the Pacific railroad survey of 1853. The attempt ended in failure, but many years later Edward Eggleston made Northrup famous by recounting his exploit in an article entitled "The-Man-that-Draws-the-Handcart," which was published in "Harper's Magazine."

During the Civil War, Northrup enlisted as a member of Breckett's cavalry battalion and in 1864 as a scout he joined the Sully expedition against the Sioux in Dakota. He sent back reports of the expedition's progress for the "St. Paul Press".

On July 28, at the age of twenty-seven, he was shot from ambush by the Indians. His body was found pierced by ten arrows.

Crankcase Crisis!

It seems this nice old lady drove into a Phillips 66 Station to fill up with Flite-Fuel. When the attendant checked the dipstick, he found she had only about a quart of oil left in her car. When he pointed this out, she replied: "Fine . . . as soon as I use that up, I'll put in some more!"

Of course the Phillips Dealer explained that she needed five quarts of oil for adequate lubrication!

Now that spring is here, it's time to think about the oil in your crankcase. If you are still using "winter grade" oil, it's time to change it. But why use two, when one will do? Better switch to Phillips 66 Trop-Artic* which gives you the effects of 10w, 20 and 30 grade oils. Compared to old-fashioned oils it can actually double engine life. Drive in today for your spring change-over.

New Ornamentals

Two garden chrysanthemums are available this year which have been developed and introduced by the University of Minnesota.

Minnehaha is a medium-tall, upright, bushy plant with salmon-colored, rose-tinted, fully double flowers. It starts blooming about mid-September and continues until killing frost. By September, the sturdy plant is usually completely covered with blossoms. Almost as wide as it is tall. The plant should be set in the middle ground or background of the flower border.

Princess is a vigorous-growing, high-mound type of plant reaching a height of 15 to 18 inches. The double, 2 inch flowers are old rose in color, with gold centers and gold-tipped petals. Since the petals are split at the ends, this variety is in the carnation-flowered class of chrysanthemums. Blooming starts early in August and within a few weeks the plant is covered with blossoms and continues blooming until freezing weather.

Also on the list of new introductions from the University this year is Radiant, a flowering crab apple. The tree is compact and upright in habit of growth, with sturdy, wide-angled crotches. Its form makes this variety ideally suited for landscape purposes on smaller properties. The new foliage in the spring and early summer has a bright reddish cast, contrasting nicely with the green foliage. The flower buds are a deep red, opening to a deep pink, with single flowers of medium size. The flowers are produced annually, in profusion, making a brilliant display for about a 10-day period.

The flowers of the Radiant crab are followed by small, bright red fruits that average ½ inch in diameter and reach their peak of color in early September. The fruits retain their bright color until heavy frost in late October. They remain attached to the tree and serve as food for birds during the winter months.

The trees are completely hardy in all parts of the state tested and appear to be highly resistant to scab, cedar rust, and fire blight.

DISTRICT PER CAPITA INCOME BELOW NATIONAL

Five industries account for nearly 60% of the industrial output of the Ninth District, according to Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank: Chemical products 6.3%; printing and publishing 9.4%; pulp and paper products 10%; machinery 10.5%; food and kindred products 23.7%. In ten years only change in rank has been rise of pulp and paper from fourth to third and fall of printing from third to fourth. Strangely enough, in Paul Bunyan land, fabricated metal products lead lumber and wood. From South Dakota's $1,330 through North Dakota's $1,305, Minnesota's $1,745, to Montana's $1,862, the District trails the country's average per capita income of $1,940—which figures have trebled since 1920.

The number of Russian graduates from colleges and universities has quadrupled in the last ten years.

Eighty-eight seniors graduated from the Northwest School of Agriculture, Crookston, at commencement exercises held on Friday, March 28. This class, according to Superintendent B. E. Youngquist, came from sixteen counties in Northwwestern Minnesota and from four counties in North Dakota.

Miss Rose Marie Johnson, organist and a member of the school staff, played the processional and recessional. The Reverend C. J. Felger from Crookston pronounced the invocation. The valedictory address was given by Ronald Filipy of Warren. Miss Arlene Bergh of St. Vincent was salutatorian. The mixed chorus sang, under the direction of Miss Beverly Bergh, music instructor.

Dr. Eric Selke from the Department of Education, University of North Dakota, delivered the Commencement address on the topic, "Where From Here."

Citizenship awards were presented to Arlene Bergh of St. Vincent and Ronald Filipy of Warren.

Included in the list of graduates are Trygve O. Abrahamson, Wannaska; Dennis Breiland, Wannaska; Ronald Engelstad, Gatzke; Yvonne Filipi, Angus; Larry Hagen, Gatzke; Russell Jelle, Grygla; Larry Kennedy, Red Lake Falls; Owen Lee, Ross; Duane Loven, Gatzke; Luke Maidment, Thief River Falls; Lloyd Perrault, Brooks; Sheldon Pigeon, Brooks; Juel Stenberg, Thief River Falls; Beulah Stolaas, Oklee; Parnell Thibert, Brooks; Roger Troska, Goodridge.

New Flax Variety Is Released by 'U'

Arny Flax Has Yielded Well in Widespread Tests

Release of Arny flax, a new variety, was announced today by W. W. Myers, head of the department of agronomy and plant genetics at the University of Minnesota.

The variety was developed by the University in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It was named after the late A. C. Arny, long-time agronomist and flax specialist at the University.

J. O. Culbertson and Verne Comstock, U. S. Department of Agriculture agronomists, describe Arny flax as having blue flowers and brown seeds. It is about four days later in maturity than Marine and about a day later than B5128. Arny has given good yields in widespread tests and has good lodging resistance. The variety is slightly taller than the varieties recommended in Minnesota — Marine, B5128, Redwood and Bolley — and is similar in test weight.

In oil quality, the variety is slightly superior to B5128 and Redwood, while in oil content it is similar to the recommended varieties.

Arny is immune to prevalent races of flax rust and has a type of resistance not contained in the varieties Redwood and B5128.

Arny is quite superior to the recommended varieties in wilt resistance and is a resistant to pasmo as Marine.

According to Carl Borgeson, University of Minnesota seed specialist, about 500 bushels of seed have been allotted to approved growers through county seed distribution committees for 1958 planting in Minnesota. Other states that have distributed seed to their growers are North and South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Seed produced this year will be available to flax producers for 1959 plantings.

The nine million tons of waste paper used annually in the United States by the paper industry is equivalent to the annual growth of trees in the forests of New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia.

Despite election upsets and/or old age, 12 Congress members have served that body 40 years or more.

Landscape Architect Hints On Best Ways to Enhance Site

There's nothing like April showers interspersed with sunny, dewdrop days to lure green thumbs and the family carpenter out of doors.

However, before you avid gardeners assault the sprouting greens, you should cock an ear toward some sound advice proffered by a prominent landscape architect, Robert Hale Ellis, Jr.

Ellis, a member of both the American and the Oregon Society of Landscape Architects, has this advice for homeowners: "Remember the purpose of landscape design," he says, "is to enhance his dwelling, not to add complications which detract from the house and the beauty of the site."

"Even the smallest and barest of sites has qualities which can be exploited and, indeed, the small site offers a great challenge in that planting and outdoor structures such as fences and patio areas should conform gracefully and naturally without crowding and confusion."

Ellis said the fence was probably the one element of the garden which was the most misunderstood and misused. Often, he pointed out, and especially in suburban developments, the fence is used as a barrier, a means of shutting out the rest of the neighborhood. This is acceptable, he conceded, provided that existing vistas and pleasant outlooks are recognized and that some thought is given to achieving a decorative result.

For instance, even the most handsomely designed wood fence can become monotonous and heavy when it is placed along the lot line like an industrial installation. Add textural contrasts and dimensional relief, and this same fence becomes a thing of beauty and livability.

In determining the proportions, Ellis recommended, make sure that it is not too tall in ratio to the height of the house, nor too ponderous for the size of the lot. Keep it as light and airy as possible to avoid a boxed-in feeling.

Select a fine wood such as Douglas fir or western red cedar and be sure that posts have been properly treated. Chemically treated fir or cedar posts can be placed directly in the ground, eliminating the need for concrete support.

Then, rather than erecting the fence in a straight line, vary its depth and texture by using parallel panels offset and putting in sections of appropriate planting to act as a supplementary screen. Clumps of slender bamboo at the breaks and corners of the fence give a pleasant effect.

DAVID NIVEN, one of the three owners of Four Star, Inc., makes an interesting observation about westerns: "Westerns always will be a staple of TV . . . Should TV confine itself to indoor pictures, it would kill the medium . . . People want to escape via the TV screen to the outdoors" . . . incidentally, Four Star will produce 200 TV films this year at an average cost of $40,000 each . . . Desi Arnaz announces that Desilu Productions is blueprinting TV film's most ambitious series to date . . . a series of 37 hour-long video films involving a production outlay of about $7,500,000 . . . The series will be tagged "Desilu Playhouse" and, including time and production coin, will involve about $15,000,000.

CBS has promised Victor Borge a serious dramatic show . . . it is a paradox in show business that the men who work hardest to get people to enjoy themselves are the ones who take themselves the most seriously! Five clients were ready to share the tab on the Groucho Marx show but the $52,500 price tag scared them away . . . James Mason is being paged to star in a TV series based on the movie, "The Third Man."

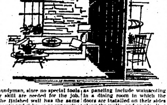
Practical Decorating Ideas:

Use Pine Panel Doors for Dividing Wall



To most everyone, the only use for a door is a door. But to an imaginative home decorator, doors can be used in many other ways to beautify and enrich a house.

The drawing shows one interesting and practical new use for panel doors of ponderosa pine. Three tall doors provide a movable dividing wall between a living room and dining area.

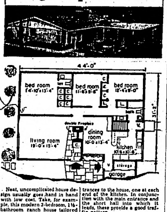
The doors are hinged together with folding-screen hardware and suspended from the track attached to a fake ceiling beam. The result is a paneled "wall" that folds out of the way when it isn't needed.

Panel doors are carried in stock by building material dealers. Since the doors come in clear, natural ponderosa pine, they can be stained or painted to match or harmonize with any interior decoration theme.

Wood panel doors also are ideal as wall paneling. They can be installed by the average home handyman, since no special tools or skill are needed for the job. The finished wall has the same beauty and richness as expensive custom-made wood paneling.

Some other uses for panel doors as paneling include wainscoting in a dining room in which the doors are installed on their sides along the walls, and as paneling to give a drab, narrow hallway character and interest.

Design Keeps Costs Low



Neat, uncomplicated house design usually goes hand in hand with low cost. Take, for example, this modern 3-bedroom, 1½-bathroom ranch house tailored for leisurely indoor and outdoor living.

Designed by architect Rudolph A. Matern, Jamaica, N. Y., the house has a 24-foot-long porch with connecting doorways to the living room, dining room, kitchen, and garage. The porch opens on an 18 by 20-foot patio, an ideal arrangement for family dining, informal entertaining, or children's recreation.

Framing for the house has been simplified without any loss of livability or eye appeal. The main roof section, of conventional gable construction, has a gentle slope. It is covered with an attractive blend of light-color asphalt shingles. The roof sets the color scheme for the exterior of the house. The siding is in a harmonizing shade and the window trim repeats the roof color.

There are two service entrances to the house, one at each end of the kitchen. In conjunction with the main entrance and the short hall into which it leads, these provide a good traffic pattern.

The three bedrooms extend across the rear of the house. The hallway separating the living and sleeping areas serves well as a sound barrier. The L-shaped kitchen is separated from the dining room by a breakfast bar.

The house can be constructed with or without a basement.

Thick mineral wool insulation acts as a heat barrier to keep winter warmth in the house and summer heat out. It makes possible the installation of a smaller, less expensive central air-conditioning system and reduces the day-to-day cost of operating it as well as the cost of heating fuel.

Additional information, blueprints and specifications can be obtained from Rudolph A. Matern, 90-04 161st St., Jamaica 32, L. I., N. Y. Refer to plan No. 9399.

Stay in Your Own Backyard This Summer and Stay Alive

Many a U. S. family will seek pleasures in their own backyard this summer and stay off crowded, danger-filled highways.

What may be the all-time biggest boom in patio and home playground construction in our nation's history will get under way with the first spring weather.

Fences, to provide privacy for family at home, will be high on the list of improvements. Lounging decks, fireplaces for outdoor cooking, and all types of lawn furniture and playground gear will be built or bought.

Retail lumber dealers report stepped up interest on the part of their neighbors in all sorts of outdoor improvements to their homes, says the West Coast Lumbermen's Association.

Glamour boy of the outdoor patio, the lumbermen report, is the patio deck, and nearly every homeowner has his own idea of how he will create cruise-ship luxury right in his own backyard. Husky Douglas fir 2x4s or 2x6s seem most popular for the deck. They attract most homeowners because they require no upkeep or maintenance once they are in place. Generally, the dimension lumber is firmly nailed to a sturdy frame of Douglas fir which has been set on cement blocks to keep it free of the ground. Deck boards should be laid with a slight opening between each board to allow for water and rain runoff. Less than a quarter inch spacing is needed, the lumbermen say, so that narrow heels won't get caught.

Decks can be laid to give all sorts of patterns. Some look like checkerboards with alternate squares of decking set diagonally. Permanent benches can be installed along the edge of the deck to give additional seating.

Decks built of durable fir can be glamourized with potted trees and plants and brightened up with colorful deck furniture. Portable barbecue grills can be moved about to keep smoke out of the eyes.

Financing Now Easier For Modernization and Remodeling of Homes

Many families contemplating remodeling projects to make their homes more comfortable and up-to-date needlessly delay their improvements because of limited funds. Actually, it has become increasingly easy in recent months for the homeowner to obtain financing for home improvement purposes.

Keep in mind that remodeling is an investment. If your home is structurally sound, and if the alterations or additions you plan are well-conceived and properly executed, the remodeling will add substantially more to the value of the home than the dollars you spend.

Financial institutions have come more and more to recognize this fundamental truth, and as a result offer several major methods for obtaining repair-remodel financing. The amount of money you require is the first item to consider in determining the financing method which best suits your needs.

Here, as summarized by Home most important methods of obtaining large sums of home improvement money:

New mortgage financing—means exactly what the term indicates, a new mortgage on a "paid-up" home. The owner of such a property can often borrow up to 50 percent or more of its appraised value.

Refinancing—If the owner has a substantial equity in his home, he can refinance, a procedure whereby he acquires a new mortgage loan of an amount large enough to pay off the existing mortgage and to finance a modernizing project as well.

Open-End Mortgage

Open-end mortgage—a fairly recent development in the mortgage lending business which makes refinancing procedures unnecessary for many thousands of families, even where major remodeling projects are involved. Stated simply, the open-end mortgage contains a clause under which the lender can make additional advances of money for modernizing up to the amount of the original loan. If you are not sure whether your mortgage contains this clause, consult your lender, who may write in such a clause if his institution has adopted open-end mortgages as standard procedure since the original mortgage was written.

Smaller home modernizing projects, requiring expenditures of less than $3,500, can usually be financed without a mortgage involved in the transaction. Here are some of those methods:

FHA-Insured Loans

Title I loan—in which a local lender advances the money required and the Federal Housing Administration insures repayment. Loans are issued for a maximum of five years and $3,500. Five per cent discount interest (deducted from the amount of the loan at the time the money is borrowed) is charged on the first $2,500 and four per cent on any portion of the next $1,000.

Individual loan plans of banks and other lending institutions—comparable in all respects to Title I loans.

Usually, with both Title I loans and individual loan plans, it is possible for the contractor or dealer with whom the homeowner dealing to secure the loan after the homeowner fills out a simple credit application form.

In many cases, building supply dealers and contractors will allow the homeowner to repay his charges for small modernization-improvement jobs on the installment basis. This practice is particularly common in metropolitan areas, where dealers and contractors do business on a large scale.

Five Ways to Finance Home Improvements

1. New Mortgage loan on paid-up home to cover cost of improvement.
2. Refinancing: securing new mortgage loan large enough to pay off existing mortgage and cover modernizing project as well.
3. Open-end Mortgage under which lender will make additional advances of money for modernizing.
4. FHA Title I Loan for a maximum of five years and $3,500.
5. Individual Loan Plans of banks and other financial institutions, comparable to Title I loans.

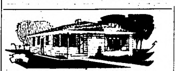
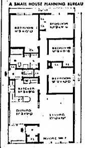
Practical Ways to Create Useful Extra Rooms

TEEN-AGE HAVEN for fun and frolic at home is this attractive rumpus room, finished off in a hitherto unused attic with ceiling tile and wall paneling. Materials in this category are so easy to handle that many home-owner, reasonably adept with tools, finds that he can make the conversion himself.

FIREPLACE and western pine paneling in a basement finishing project create a warm, gracious family room.



A SMALL HOUSE PLANNING BUREAU DESIGN NO. C-391-F



DESIGN C-391 F. Departing from the usual wide frontage arrangement, this plan was designed for a narrow lot, yet is also suitable for a corner lot.

There is a full basement with a grade entry on the side and the first floor consists of a living room, dining room, kitchen, bath and four bedrooms.

The dining room can be closed off from the living room by means of a folding door. The bathroom has two lavatories, a recessed tub and towel cabinets.

Other features range from the coat closets at each entrance, linen cabinet and wardrobe closets to the covered front stoop.

The exterior finish is wide siding, asphalt shingles, wide eave overhang and hip roof. The floor area is 1303 square feet, and cubage is 24,431 cubic feet.

Annuals Produce a Profusion Of Blooms All Summer Long

Are you a new home-owner who needs to stretch your garden budget to beautify your yard? Or one who craves an attractive "outdoor living-room" without much expense? Or just an average gardener who likes lots of colorful flowers in the garden as well as extras for bouquets? Then let annual flowers dress up your grounds.

Right now is the time to visit your seedsman and learn all about that versatile assortment of flowers which you start from seed this spring for bloom from mid-summer until frost.

Jot down the names of the varieties you prefer for different locations in your yard—giant Zinnias, big Marigolds, Spider Plant, tall Snapdragons, Cosmos, Tithonia and tall Celosia for backgrounds or "shrubs" at the corner of your house; Asters, Marigolds and Zinnias of medium height, Cornflowers, Calendulas, Gaillardia, Scabiosa, and Salvia for the central section of borders; and dwarf Zinnias, French Marigolds, violet or white Alyssum, dwarf Petunias, Ageratum, Phlox, Lilliput Celosia, Portulaca and Verbena to edge your beds or to highlight a path.

A few easily followed suggestions give essential instructions for success in growing annuals.

Nearly all annuals do best in a sunny location, where the soil is reasonably good. Choose a level spot away from tree roots, where water does not stand.

The ideal time to prepare the ground is when the soil can be squeezed into a ball, but will break apart easily.

Spade thoroughly, work in four pounds of a complete fertilizer per 100 square feet.

INSULATION PRODUCED FROM MOLTEN MINERALS

Mineral wool insulation is made from three principal materials: rock, glass, or slag.

In the manufacturing process, one or more of these raw materials is mixed with coke and heated to a molten state. Jets of steam blow the molten mass into millions of fibers.

The fibers fall naturally into a thick, interwoven mass containing millions of tiny dead air spaces. These dead air spaces provide an efficient barrier to heat transmission.

SAWING TUBING

Mounting two blades on your hacksaw with teeth pointing in opposite directions will prevent the saw from grabbing on the return stroke. This will make the job of sawing thin wall metal tubing easy.

PICTURES STAY STRAIGHT

A picture or mirror that ought to hang crookedly can be straightened permanently by driving a brad halfway into one lower corner, filing the brad to a sharp point, and pressing the point into the wall.

Landscaping Hikes Value Of the Home

Landscaping and planting the home property is one of the first considerations in a home improvement program. Fifty million home gardeners this season will be planting trees and shrubs to make their home properties more liveable, more beautiful and more valuable, says the American Association of Nurserymen, with the jobs ranging in size from a few shrubs to complete landscaping programs.

An advantage of home improvement through landscaping is that the home-owner, if he ever wants to sell the property, will get a higher resale price. Well landscaped homes bring 15 to 20 percent more in the real estate markets. In setting out to improve your property with landscaping, start with a well-conceived plan.

Study Location

First study the location of your house and the slope of the ground. Look at the property as a whole, not just house, or drive, or yard.

Your planting for best effect must have unity, that is it must tie house, drive, walks and land together to make a pleasing picture.

Eventually you will want a planting around the foundation of the home to tie it to the ground in a natural way. Bare, stark walls are unsightly. In the foundation planting you will want low growing shrubs and plants that will not grow above the first floor windows.

A tree at the most open corner of the home will be desirable for accent. In front of the foundation planting open lawn space is popular in order to present an unobstructed sweep of grass.

Frame the View

If you have a lovely open view from any location on the property do not plant anything but low growing plants to set off the view. Tall shrubs and trees should only be planted to frame the view, not to block it.

Conversely, if you have an unsightly view, or need privacy where houses are close together, a screen planting of tall shrubs or trees should be made.

Sometimes one wishes a low line of demarcation between his property and the next. A living fence of roses or low shrubs may serve in that case to be admired by your neighbor as well as your own family.

Soft Green Blend Best-Liked Color On U.S. Rooftops

Americans still prefer green on their rooftops, although their tastes run more to soft, muted tones than they did 15 years ago, a national study shows.

The study, undertaken in 1956 by the Asphalt Roofing Industry Bureau, a manufacturers' association, shows that almost one-third of the asphalt shingles shipped from plants were in soft, blended greens.

A similar study made in 1941 revealed that 20 percent of the asphalt shingles that year were in a bright, solid green. More than 20 percent were hexagonal in shape.

The new study shows a trend away from hexagonal shingles, with only 5 percent sold in 1956. Most popular today is the square-tab strip shingle.

Preferences for color differ in various regions of the United States, according to the study. On the Pacific Coast, light gray was most popular, while homeowners in the Northwest preferred solid black or blue-black and gray blends.

In the Southeast, straight white led with 24.8 percent of the shingles sold, and in the Southwest, white shingles totaled 16.9 percent. In both the Southern regions, solid color shingles were preferred.

Of the total asphalt shingles shipped from 68 manufacturing plants during the survey period, 11.3 percent were white.

Praise Can Be Heavy, Too

Everyone knows how heavy a burden blame or criticism can be. No one likes censure, and overdoses of it can bring on the whole range of maladjustments or downright illness. Many children, by the time they reach school, are so bogged down by critical treatment that their first learning problems are more emotional than intellectual.

But praise can weigh heavily, too. It might even be argued that it takes more maturity and experience to handle large amounts of praise than criticism. Ella, entering kindergarten from a home where she has been the beloved center of attention, has a hard time becoming one of thirty sharing the teacher's praise.

Ella is self-satisfied and takes all suggested changes as personal criticism. She does not try as hard as the others to improve her work, because in the past anything that she has done has met with instant delight and praise. Her kindergarten teacher uses praise more sparingly and makes it count by attaching it only to those times when children are really giving their best efforts.

The story is told of a golfer who lifted himself into championship circles only after moving away from an area where, from an early age, his score was best and praise was extravagant. He claims the praise hurt his game more than the lack of competition, because he could not apply himself to the business of finding flaws in his strokes.

Holly, a college student learning to be a teacher, began her practice work with a group of children who "took to her" instantly, largely due to her personal charm. But instead of this auspicious start goading her to greater efforts, the praise rang in her ears so that she relied more and more upon charm rather than acquiring more teaching skills and additional information. The more praise she had the harder it became to counsel her toward improvement.

In theory at least, the effective use of praise and blame depends upon the same general principles as teaching reading or baseball or singing. There is first a "readiness" factor to be considered, after which learners respond best to methods which combine a balanced mixture of criticism and praise.

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. W. J. Arterburn, Webb City, Missouri: I remember when I went to a one-room country school which had about 80 pupils in all the grades—with one teacher. Many received county graduate diplomas.

Our playground was outside and we played ball, prison base, King William and other old games.

I remember McKinley and Roosevelt and the lapel pins with the full dinner pail and pictures on it. I still have one.

We walked two miles and took our own lunches and apples. We had a cellar full of apples with names that are never heard any more. These were Ben Davis, Genetains, Willow Twig, Romanites, Bell Flower and many others . . . all with such good flavors.

I remember how we kids had chores to do when we got home from school and how we could never get by with "no" when father said "yes."

From M. M. Reese, Cincinnati, Ohio: I remember, as a child out in Cheyenne, Wyoming, the blizzards that would drift snow over our house and snow us in. We dug tunnels through the drifts after the snow hardened.

I remember "tame" Indians coming to our door to sell beadwork, and that our main diversion was to walk down to the depot to get a penny's worth of gum from a machine and watch the Union Pacific trains come in.

Once a year we had a rodeo called "Frontier Days." Cowboys came from surrounding ranches, rode bucking bronchos, roped and bulldogged steers. The calvary from Fort Russell staged sham battles on the prairie. Indians danced their war dances and everything ended with a stage coach holdup. This was the high spot of our year.

Painting Hints from Paint Headquarters

Notes on Painting Boats

by Bud Kelly

Doing a good preparation job is probably more important in boat painting than any other type of paint job. It's best to take the old paint down to the wood—unless (and use a sharp eye) the old undercoats are in good condition.

Then wash the boat with hot water; caulk where needed; fill holes and apply a good exterior primer like SUPERMIX Exterior Primer, and let dry for 12 hours.

Never, never, never use ordinary house paints on boats. Always use SUPERMIX Marine Paints. They're specially made to withstand the "magnifying glass" effect of sunlight showing through water droplets which causes ordinary paints to crack and scale off.

For natural-finish surfaces, use SUPERMIX Plasti-Film Varnish. It never darkens or yellows. It's made from new epon resins and combats water, oil, alcohol and grease.

Sand thoroughly between coats. Make sure the first coat is bone dry before applying the second.

In painting, start at the top and work down. Brush in well to eliminate bubbles. Paint with the grain. Don't worry about brush marks with SUPERMIX Marine Paints. They're made to minimize brush marks and lap marks.

Remember: two thin coats are always better than one thick coat.

Painting a boat is quite an art. We'd like to pass along our knowledge for your boat painting job. Let's talk about it before you start.

Landscape Architect Hints On Best Ways to Enhance Site

There's nothing like April showers interspersed with sunny, dewdrop days to lure green thumbs and the family carpenter out of doors.

However, before you avid gardeners assault the sprouting greens, you should cock an ear toward some sound advice proffered by a prominent landscape architect, Robert Hale Ellis, Jr.

Ellis, a member of both the American and the Oregon Society of Landscape Architects, has this advice for homeowners: "Remember the purpose of landscape design," he says, "is to enhance his dwelling, not to add complications which detract from the house and the beauty of the site."

"Even the smallest and barest of sites has qualities which can be exploited and, indeed, the small site offers a great challenge in that planting and outdoor structures such as fences and patio areas should conform gracefully and naturally without crowding and confusion."

Ellis said the fence was probably the one element of the garden which was the most misunderstood and misused. Often, he pointed out, and especially in suburban developments, the fence is used as a barrier, a means of shutting out the rest of the neighborhood. This is acceptable, he conceded, provided that existing vistas and pleasant outlooks are recognized and that some thought is given to achieving a decorative result.

For instance, even the most handsomely designed wood fence can become monotonous and heavy when it is placed along the lot line like an industrial installation. Add textural contrasts and dimensional relief, and this same fence becomes a thing of beauty and livability.

In determining the proportions, Ellis recommended, make sure that it is not too tall in ratio to the height of the house, nor too ponderous for the size of the lot. Keep it as light and airy as possible to avoid a boxed-in feeling.

Select a fine wood such as Douglas fir or western red cedar and be sure that posts have been properly treated. Chemically treated fir or cedar posts can be placed directly in the ground, eliminating the need for concrete support.

Then, rather than erecting the fence in a straight line, vary its depth and texture by using parallel panels offset and putting in sections of appropriate planting to act as a supplementary screen. Clumps of slender bamboo at the breaks and corners of the fence give a pleasant effect.

By LYN CONNELLY

DAVID NIVEN, one of the three owners of Four Star, Inc., makes an interesting observation about westerns: "Westerns always will be a staple of TV . . . Should TV confine itself to indoor pictures, it would kill the medium . . . People want to escape via the TV screen to the outdoors" . . . Incidentally, Four Star will produce 200 TV films this year at an average cost of $40,000 each . . . Desi Arnaz announces that Desilu Productions is blueprinting TV film's most ambitious series to date . . . a series of 37 hour-long video films involving a production outlay of about $7,500,000 . . . The series will be tagged "Desilu Playhouse" and, including time and production coin, will involve about $10,000,000.

CBS has promised Victor Borge a serious dramatic show . . . It is a paradox in show business that the men who work hardest to get people to enjoy themselves are the ones who take themselves the most seriously! Five clients were ready to share the tab on the Groucho Marx show but the $52,500 price tag scared them away . . . James Mason is being paged to star in a TV series based on the movie, "The Third Man."

PLATTER CHATTER

CAPITOL: The very popular "Tequila" gets a rousing rendition from the bales of Stan Kenton . . . This is a number that should make new fans for Stan . . . Reverse has something called "Cuban Mumble" that makes a small noise but who cares with "Tequila" doing so well? Jack Jones, Allan's talented son, does a magnificent job with "A Very Precious Love" from "Marjorie Morningstar" . . . "What's the Use?" is on the flip side.

MERCURY: A disk destined for big things is "Wishing for Your Love" done beautifully by a new group called "The Voxpoppers" . . . Flip has "The Last Drag." "Golden Ruby Blue" is the eye opener done by Jimmy Edwards who combines it with "My Honey"

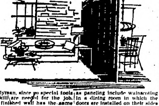
Practical Decorating Idea:

Use Pine Panel Doors for Dividing Wall



To most everyone, the only use for a door is a door. But to an imaginative home decorator, doors can be used in many other ways to beautify and enrich a house.

The drawing shows one interesting and practical new use for panel doors of ponderosa pine. Three tall doors provide a movable dividing wall between a living room and dining area.

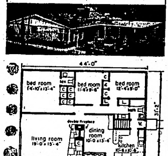
The doors are hinged together with folding-screen hardware and suspended from the track attached to a fake ceiling beam. The result is a paneled "wall" that folds out of the way when it isn't needed.

Panel doors are carried in stock by building material dealers. Since the doors come in clear, natural ponderosa pine, they can be stained or painted to match or harmonize with any interior decoration theme.

Wood panel doors also are ideal as wall paneling. They can be installed by the average home handyman, since no special tools or skill are needed for the job. The finished wall has the same beauty and richness as expensive custom-made wood paneling.

Some other uses for panel doors as paneling include wainscoting in a dining room in which the doors are installed on their sides along the walls, and as paneling to give a drab, narrow hallway character and interest.

Design Keeps Costs Low



Neat, uncomplicated house design usually goes hand in hand with low cost. Take, for example, this modern 3-bedroom, 1½-bathroom ranch house tailored for leisurely indoor and outdoor living.

Designed by architect Rudolph A. Matern, Jamaica, N. Y., the house has a 24-foot-long porch with connecting doorways to the living room, dining room, kitchen, and garage. The porch opens on an 18 by 20-foot patio, an ideal arrangement for family dining, informal entertaining, or children's recreation.

Framing for the house has been simplified without any loss of livability or eye appeal. The main roof section, of conventional gable construction, has a gentle slope. It is covered with an attractive blend of light-color asphalt shingles. The roof sets the color scheme for the exterior of the house. The siding is in a harmonizing shade and the window trim repeats the roof color.

There are two service entrances to the house, one at each end of the kitchen. In conjunction with the main entrance and the short hall into which it leads, these provide a good traffic pattern.

The three bedrooms extend across the rear of the house. The hallway separating the living and sleeping areas serves well as a sound barrier. The L-shaped kitchen is separated from the dining room by a breakfast bar.

The house can be constructed with or without a basement.

Thick mineral wool insulation acts as a heat barrier to keep winter warmth in the house and summer heat out. It makes possible the installation of a smaller, less expensive central air-conditioning system and reduces the day-to-day cost of operating it as well as the cost of heating fuel.

Additional information, blueprints and specifications can be obtained from Rudolph A. Matern, 90-04 161st St., Jamaica 32, L. I., N. Y. Refer to plan No. 9399.

Stay in Your Own Backyard This Summer and Stay Alive

Many a U. S. family will seek pleasures in their own backyard this summer and stay off crowded, danger-filled highways.

What may be the all-time biggest boom in patio and home playground construction in our nation's history will get under way with the first spring weather.

Fences, to provide privacy for family at-homes, will be high on the list of improvements. Lounging decks, fireplaces for outdoor cooking, and all types of lawn furniture and playground gear will be built or bought.

Retail lumber dealers report stepped-up interest on the part of their neighbors in all sorts of outdoor improvements to their homes, says the West Coast Lumbermen's Association.

Glamour boy of the outdoor patio, the lumbermen report, is the patio deck, and nearly every homeowner has his own idea of how he will create cruise-ship luxury right in his own backyard. Husky Douglas fir 2x4s or 2x6s seem most popular for the deck. They attract most homeowners because they require no upkeep or maintenance once they are in place. Generally, the dimension lumber is firmly nailed to a sturdy frame of Douglas fir which has been set on cement blocks to keep it free of the ground. Deck boards should be laid with a slight opening between each board to allow for water and rain runoff. Less than a quarter inch spacing is needed, the lumbermen say, so that narrow heels won't get caught.

Decks can be laid to give all sorts of patterns. Some look like checkerboards with alternate squares of decking set diagonally. Permanent benches can be installed along the edge of the deck to give additional seating.

Decks built of durable fir can be glamourized with potted trees and plants and brightened up with colorful deck furniture. Portable barbecue grills can be moved about to keep smoke out of the eyes.

Financing Now Easier For Modernization and Remodeling of Homes

Many families contemplating remodeling projects to make their homes more comfortable and up-to-date needlessly delay their improvements because of limited funds. Actually, it has become increasingly easy in recent months for the homeowner to obtain financing for home improvement purposes.

Keep in mind that remodeling is an investment. If your home is structurally sound, and if the alterations or additions you plan are well-conceived and properly executed, the remodeling will add substantially more to the value of the home than the dollars you spend.

Financial institutions have come more and more to recognize this fundamental truth, and as a result offer several major methods for obtaining repair-remodel financing. The amount of money you require is the first item to consider in determining the financing method which best suits your needs.

Here, as summarized by Home, most important methods of obtaining large sums of home improvement money:

New mortgage financing—means exactly what the term indicates, a new mortgage on a "paid-up" home. The owner of such a property can often borrow up to 50 percent or more of its appraised value.

Refinancing—If the owner has a substantial equity in his home, he can refinance, a procedure whereby he acquires a new mortgage loan of an amount large enough to pay off the existing mortgage and to finance a modernizing project as well.

Open-End Mortgage

Open-end mortgage—a fairly recent development in the mortgage lending business which makes refinancing procedures unnecessary for many thousands of families, even where major remodeling projects are involved. Stated simply, the open-end mortgage contains a clause under which the lender can make additional advances of money for modernizing up to the amount of the original loan. If you are not sure whether your mortgage contains this clause, consult your lender, who may write in such a clause if his institution has adopted open-end mortgages as standard procedure since the original mortgage was written.

Smaller home modernizing projects, requiring expenditures of less than $3,500, can usually be financed without a mortgage involved in the transaction. Here are some of those methods:

FHA-Insured Loans

Title I loan—in which a local lender advances the money required and the Federal Housing Administration insures repayment. Loans are issued for a maximum of five years and $3,500. Five per cent discount interest (deducted from the amount of the loan at the time the money is borrowed) is charged on the first $2,500 and four per cent on any portion of the next $1,000.

Individual loan plans of banks and other lending institutions—comparable in all respects to Title I loans.

Usually, with both Title I loans and individual loan plans, it is possible for the contractor or dealer with whom the homeowner is dealing to secure the loan after the homeowner fills out a simple credit application form.

In many cases, building supply dealers and contractors will allow the homeowner to repay his charges for small modernization-improvement jobs on the installment basis. This practice is particularly common in metropolitan areas, where dealers and contractors do business on a large scale.

Five Ways to Finance Home Improvements

1. New Mortgage loan on paid-up home to cover cost of improvement.
2. Refinancing: securing new mortgage loan large enough to pay off existing mortgage and cover modernizing project as well.
3. Open-end Mortgage under which lender will make additional advances of money for modernizing.
4. FHA Title I Loan for a maximum of five years and $3,500.
5. Individual Loan Plans of banks and other financial institutions, comparable to Title I loans.

Annuals Produce a Profusion Of Blooms All Summer Long

Are you a new home owner who needs to stretch your garden budget to beautify your yard? Or one who craves an attractive "outdoor living-room" without much expense? Or just an average gardener who likes lots of colorful flowers in the garden as well as extras for bouquets? Then let annual flowers dress up your grounds.

Right now is the time to visit your seedsman and learn all about that versatile assortment of flowers which you start from seed this spring for bloom from mid-summer until frost.

Jot down the names of the varieties you prefer for different locations in your yard—giant Zinnias, big Marigolds, Spider Plant, tall Snapdragons, Cosmos, Tithonia and tall Celosia for backgrounds or "shrubs" at the corner of your house; Asters, Marigolds and Zinnias of medium height, Cornflowers, Calendulas, Gaillardia, Scabiosa, and Salvia for the central section of borders; and dwarf Zinnias, French Marigolds, violet or white Alyssum, dwarf Petunias, Ageratum, Phlox, Lilliput Celosia, Portulaca and Verbena to edge your beds or to highlight a path.

A few easily followed suggestions give essential instructions for success in growing annuals.

Nearly all annuals do best in a sunny location, where the soil is reasonably good. Choose a level spot away from tree roots, where water does not stand.

The ideal time to prepare the ground is when the soil can be squeezed into a ball, but will break apart easily.

Spade thoroughly, work in four pounds of a complete fertilizer per 100 square feet.

INSULATION PRODUCED FROM MOLTEN MINERALS

Mineral wool insulation is made from three principal materials: rock, glass, or slag.

In the manufacturing process, one or more of these raw materials is mixed with coke and heated to a molten state. Jets of steam blow the molten mass into millions of fibers.

The fibers fall naturally into a thick, interwoven mass containing billions of tiny dead air spaces. These dead-air spaces provide an efficient barrier to heat transmission.

SAWING TUBING

Mounting two blades on your hacksaw with teeth pointing in opposite directions will prevent the saw from grabbing on the return stroke. This will make the job of sawing thin wall metal tubing easy.

PICTURES STAY STRAIGHT

A picture or mirror that tends to hang crookedly can be straightened permanently by driving a brad halfway into one lower corner, filing the brad to a sharp point, and pressing the point into the wall.

Landscaping Hikes Value Of the Home

Landscaping and planting the home property is one of the first considerations in a home improvement program. Fifty million home gardeners this season will be planting trees and shrubs to make their home properties more liveable, more beautiful and more valuable, says the American Association of Nurserymen, with the jobs ranging in size from a few shrubs to complete landscaping programs.

An advantage of home improvement through landscaping is that the home owner, if he ever wants to sell the property, will get a higher resale price. Well landscaped homes bring 15 to 20 percent more in the real estate markets. In setting out to improve your property with landscaping, start with a well conceived plan.

Study Location

First study the location of your house and the slope of the ground. Look at the property as a whole, not just house, or drive, or yard.

Your planting for best effect must have unity, that is it must tie house, drive, walks and land together to make a pleasing picture.

Eventually you will want a planting around the foundation of the home to tie it to the ground in a natural way. Bare, stark walls are unsightly. In the foundation planting you will want low-growing shrubs and plants that will not grow above the first floor windows.

A tree at the most open corner of the home will be desirable for accent. In front of the foundation planting open lawn space is popular in order to present an unobstructed sweep of grass.

Frame the View

If you have a lovely open view from any location on the property do not plant anything but low-growing plants to set off the view. Tall shrubs and trees should only be planted to frame the view, not to block it.

Conversely, if you have an unsightly view, or need privacy where houses are close together, a screen planting of tall shrubs or trees should be made.

Sometimes one wishes a low line of demarcation between his property and the next. A living fence of roses or low shrubs may serve in that case to be admired by your neighbor as well as your own family.

Soft Green Blend Best-Liked Color On U. S. Rooftops

Americans still prefer green on their rooftops, although their tastes run more to soft, muted tones than they did 15 years ago, a national study shows.

The study, undertaken in 1956 by the Asphalt Roofing Industry Bureau, a manufacturers' association, shows that almost one-third of the asphalt shingles shipped from plants were in soft, blended greens.

A similar study made in 1941 revealed that 20 percent of the asphalt shingles that year were in a bright, solid green. More than 20 percent were hexagonal in shape.

The new study shows a trend away from hexagonal shingles, with only 5 percent sold in 1956. Most popular today is the square-tab strip shingle.

Preferences for color differ in various regions of the United States, according to the study. On the Pacific Coast, light gray was most popular, while homeowners in the Northwest preferred solid black or blue-black and gray blends.

In the Southeast, straight white led with 24.8 percent of the shingles sold, and in the Southwest, white shingles totaled 16.9 percent. In both the Southern regions, solid color shingles were preferred.

Of the total asphalt shingles shipped from 68 manufacturing plants during the survey period, 11.3 percent were white.

Praise Can Be Heavy, Too

Everyone knows how heavy a burden blame or criticism can be. No one likes censure, and overdoses of it can bring on the whole range of maladjustments or downright illness. Many children, by the time they reach school, are so bogged down by critical treatment that their first learning problems are more emotional than intellectual.

But praise can weigh heavily, too. It might even be argued that it takes more maturity and experience to handle large amounts of praise than criticism. Ella, entering kindergarten from a home where she has been the beloved center of attention, has a hard time becoming one of thirty sharing the teacher's praise.

Ella is self-satisfied and takes all suggested changes as personal criticism. She does not try as hard as the others to improve her work, because in the past anything that she has done has met with instant delight and praise. Her kindergarten teacher uses praise more sparingly and makes it count by attaching it only to those times when children are really giving their best efforts.

The story is told of a golfer who lifted himself into championship circles only after moving away from an area where, from an early age, his score was best and praise was extravagant. He claims the praise hurt his game more than the lack of competition, because he could not apply himself to the business of finding flaws in his strokes.

Holly, a college student learning to be a teacher, began her practice work with a group of children who "took to her" instantly, largely due to her personal charm. But instead of this auspicious start goading her to greater efforts, the praise rang in her ears so that she relied more and more upon charm rather than acquiring more teaching skills and additional information. The more praise she had the harder it became to counsel her toward improvement.

In theory at least, the effective use of praise and blame depends upon the same general principles as teaching reading or baseball or singing. There is first a "readiness" factor to be considered, after which learners respond best to methods which combine a balanced mixture of criticism and praise.

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. W. J. Arterburn, Webb City, Missouri: I remember when I went to a one-room country school which had about 80 pupils in all the grades—with one teacher. Many received county graduate diplomas.

Our playground was outside and we played ball, prison base, King William and other old games.

I remember McKinley and Roosevelt and the lapel pins with the full dinner pail and pictures on it. I still have one.

We walked two miles and took our own lunches and apples. We had a cellar full of apples with names that are never heard any more. These were Ben Davis, Genetains, Willow Twig, Romanites, Bell Flower and many others . . . all with such good flavors.

I remember how we kids had chores to do when we got home from school and how we could never get by with "no" when father said "yes."

From M. M. Reese, Cincinnati, Ohio: I remember, as a child out in Cheyenne, Wyoming, the blizzards that would drift snow over our house and snow us in. We dug tunnels through the drifts after the snow hardened.

I remember "tame" Indians coming to our door to sell beadwork, and that our main diversion was to walk down to the depot to get a penny's worth of gum from a machine and watch the Union Pacific trains come in.

Once a year we had a rodeo called "Frontier Days." Cowboys came from surrounding ranches, rode bucking bronchos, roped and bulldogged steers. The calvary from Fort Russell staged sham battles on the prairie, Indians danced their war dances and everything ended with a stage coach holdup. This was the high spot of our year.

Painting Hints from Paint Headquarters

Notes on Painting Boats

by Bud Kelly

Doing a good preparation job is probably more important in boat painting than any other type of paint job. It's best to take the old paint down to the wood—unless (and use a sharp eye!) the old undercoats are in good condition.

Then wash the boat with hot water; caulk where needed; fill holes and apply a good exterior primer like SUPERMIX Exterior Primer, and let dry for 12 hours.

Never, never, never use ordinary house paints on boats. Always use SUPERMIX Marine Paints. They're specially made to withstand the "magnifying glass" effect of sunlight showing through water droplets which causes ordinary paints to crack and scale off.

For natural-finish surfaces, use SUPERMIX Plasti-Film Varnish. It never darkens or yellows. It's made from new epon resins and combats water, oil, alcohol and grease.

Sand thoroughly between coats. Make sure the first coat is bone dry before applying the second.

In painting, start at the top and work down. Brush in well to eliminate bubbles. Paint with the grain. Don't worry about brush marks with SUPERMIX Marine Paints. They're made to minimize brush marks and lap marks.

Remember: two thin coats are always better than one thick coat.

Painting a boat is quite an art. We'd like to pass along our knowledge for your boat-painting job. Let's talk about it before you start.

WILDLIFE in Minnesota
by JIM KIMBALL

Every normal sportsman wonders and should be told how the money he spends on hunting and fishing licenses is used. Last year it was about like this:

1. The Warden Service used over a fourth of it. The cost of maintaining 150 wardens and pilots was over a million dollars. They arrested 3,710 violators who were fined $77,668. The other services performed by wardens cannot be weighed or measured, but they may be even greater than their enforcement duties.

Twenty-three percent of the budget ($953,370) was spent by the Bureau of Game. Much of this went for the acquisition and development of refuges, wetlands, and public access to lakes. Between twenty and thirty thousand acres of land were acquired; 51,000 pheasant chicks produced and over a million trees and shrubs distributed for cover development. Building dikes, dams and other water control structures for waterfowl and fur bearers was another big item. Then, of course, there is the new field force of regional and area game managers who are performing much needed services throughout the state.

Rough fish removal cost $583,847, or about 14% of the total. Approximately 13 million pounds of rough fish are removed from Minnesota lakes each year. Where the value of the fish is greater than the cost of catching them, the job is done by commercial fishermen, but when it is a money losing proposition, the state must take over the job. Last year, in addition to 25 fishing contracts, 85 permits and licensed fishing on some boundary waters, we had 6 state crews on the job. These state crews removed over 3 million pounds of rough fish from our inland lakes.

In addition to rough fish removal, the Fisheries Bureau spent almost a million dollars in fish management and production. Almost 150,000,000 fish were stocked in our lakes and streams from the 18 fish hatcheries in operation. Forty-one state owned and 170 cooperative rearing ponds were in operation to raise fish to the fingerling size before stocking. Over 11,000,000 fish were rescued from shallow lakes or removed from lakes having over-populations of panfish. The 38 lake and stream improvement projects cost over $118,000. Development and control of natural spawning areas for northern pike was another important item.

Between 11 and 12% of the budget goes to the Bureau of Research and Planning. Two-thirds of this is for surveys and investigations essential to management, which cannot be considered as research. These jobs include surveying and mapping lakes, streams, and game areas; providing statistics on fish and game crops and harvest; serving the public on matters such as pollution abatement, aquatic weed control and technical information. Last year 277 lakes, streams and waterfowl marshes were surveyed and 260 were mapped.

Actual research is not a large item. The 92 game and fish research projects in progress accounted for only 4% of the Game and Fish budget.

Three percent of the budget went for administration.

This should give us an idea of what the Game and Fish budget looks like but did you know that almost a million dollars a license money succumbs to legislative transfers (called "diversions" by most sportsmen) before it ever gets to the budget? Did you know that during this biennium we are using a million dollars from the Game and Fish surplus just to keep in business? And did you know that our surplus will be about half a million by the end of this biennium — a figure below which it should not go. Unless some changes are made, the job being done by the Division of Game and Fish will have to be cut back to the tune of over a million dollars during the next biennium.

More about this problem and what to do about it in the next issue.

Group Seeking Survey of the TR Watershed

To Request Action by Army Engineers in Thief River Area

A group of landowners in the Thief River watershed are making good progress in securing signatures on a petition asking for a survey of the entire watershed area by the U. S. Corps of Engineers for the purpose of redesigning of the drainage systems for the establishment of a watershed plan for the proper control of waters in the watershed, compatible with the interests of agriculture, conservation and wild life.

They are hopeful projects designed to accomplish these purposes can be advanced under the sponsorship of the Red Lake River Drainage and Conservancy District, the agency that represented local interests in the channel improvement program on the Red Lake and Clearwater Rivers.

A temporary organization has been formed with the following farmers serving as officers and directors: Otto Rupprecht, chairman; Arthur Moe, secretary; and as directors, Julius Falman, Julian Rodal, Adolph Steinhauer and John Augustine. The present petition is directed to the members of Congress.

The interest shown in the petition indicates that a permanent organization more representative of the entire area is justified, and the temporary leaders state that another meeting will be held in the near future to include all groups that have a common interest in the development of the watershed.

Donations to Red Cross Hit $1,140

Fund Treasurer Notes Big Progress This Week

Contributions reported in to L. J. Gustafson, treasurer of the current American Red Cross drive in Pennington county, took a big jump this week to $1,140, Gustafson said today.

The figure represents slightly over a third of the quota for the county drive, he stated. Most of the contributions to date have come from the business and residential areas of Thief River Falls, with very little progress noted in the rural drive so far.

Gustafson said some areas had bettered their 1957 figure, while others had fallen below 1957 contributions. He expressed pleasure at the progress noted this week.

Drive workers are still on the job in the city, many of whom are now making call-backs while others have yet to report in with the proceeds from their districts. Gustafson urged that workers make a concerted effort to complete the drive as quickly as possible.

Odd Fellows to Remodel Building at Cost of $30,000

To Double Frontage of Parkins Drugs and Build Addition for Bakery

At a regular meeting of Young Fine Lodge I.O.O.F., Tuesday night, an extensive remodeling project was authorized, combining the two 25 ft. fronts of the Odd Fellows property on LaBree at Second into a 50 ft. store to be occupied by the Parkins Corner Drugs. Work is expected to get under way at once and it is hoped that the improvement will be completed by July 1.

Along with the remodeling of the present buildings, a 30 ft. addition will be built fronting on second st. to provide a retail sales room for Carlson's Rainbow Bakery. This addition will be constructed as the first step in a probable future expansion to the alley and as a base for a two story structure.

In charge of the building program are the members of the board of trustees, Alfred Longren, chairman, Elmer R. Johnson and R. A. Werner, who will be assisted by a special building committee composed of Ole Ihle, Helmer Halland, Ralph Hunt and Harry Lund. Expenditures up to $30,000 were authorized.

The two stores facing LaBree Ave. will be tied together by a canopy front. The stairs to the second floor will be at the north side and the entrance to the Parkins store will be about at the center. There will be a complete rearrangement of the store, with the coffee counter probably being shifted to the north wall. New fixtures will be installed thruout the store according to James Parkins, proprietor. The remodeled store will be double the size of the present operation.

Plans call for an extensive remodeling of the second story and provision will be made for enlarged and greatly improved club rooms, Mr. Longren stated. The addition on Second Street will be completed first to enable the Rainbow Bakery to vacate its present retail space for the second phase of the remodeling program.

Council Orders Plans on Three City Projects

Ask Specifications on Fourth st. Paving and 2 Storm Sewers

The city council at a special meeting last night voted to instruct City Engineer Douglas Stewart to prepare plans and specifications on two storm sewer projects and the paving of Fourth st. from Main av. to Atlantic av., which had been discussed last week at hearings conducted by the council.

Projects on which Stewart was instructed to submit plans include:

A drainage system in the area from Ninth to Eleventh sts. and from the alley east of Main av. to the Soo Line tracks.

Storm sewers to complete the system in District No. 2 north of Fourth st.

Paving of Fourth st. from Main av. to Atlantic av.

'Brannan Plan' Is Supported by DFL Group

Alexandria Session on Farm Platform Asks 100 Pct. Parity

One hundred per cent of parity on basic farm commodities and a move in the direction of production payments on perishables, with full parity as a goal, were proposed at Alexandria Saturday as a prominent part of the farm plank in the 1958 Minnesota DFL party platform.

The "Brannan plan" proposal came out of a panel discussion on federal price support programs.

Chaired by State Sen. Roy Wiseth, Goodridge, the panel was one of three into which 250 participants were divided with objective of fashioning a farmers' plank for the Democratic platform.

Thirty-some farm forums of a similar nature had been held earlier at the county level.

"Production payments would be less expensive and more attractive to the consumer than would the present system of loans and the resulting storage of surplus crops", Charles Stickney, former federal production and marketing administration official, told the group.

Another panel, on state agricultural programs, numbered among its suggestions the appropriation of Minnesota research money to develop new markets for farm products.

Chairman of the latter group was Byron Allen, state commissioner of agriculture. The panel also suggested creation of a public relations office to explain farm programs to the public.

The third panel, chaired by State Rep. Alvin Hofstad, Madison, offered these among its suggestions for the farm plank:

Increase federal funds for soil conservation services.

Expand public law 480, (for disposal of farm surpluses overseas), but do not charge the cost of it to agricultural programs.

Oppose an increase in the current 2 per cent REA loan rate.

Make crop insurance available on all crops, the program to be administered by local agricultural conservation practices (ACP) committees.

Increase school lunch appropriations.

Spring Is Best Time to Fertilize Lawns

Early spring and early fall are the best times to fertilize lawn grasses, a University of Minnesota horticulturist said today. Those are the seasons when grasses awaken to a period of rapid growth if they have sufficient plant food to stimulate them.

According to Richard J. Stadtherr, in chage of grass turf studies at the University, applications of fertilizers at other times, especially during hot weather, may burn the grasses and stimulate crabgrass and other weeds.

Since grasses are heavy nitrogen feeders, the amount of fertilizer recommended is usually figured in terms of pounds of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet of lawn. Kentucky bluegrass requires 3 to 4 pounds of actual nitrogen per 1,000 square feet per season; Merion bluegrass requires a heavier application. The usual recommendation is to apply not more than 2 pounds of actual nitrogen at any one time. Lawns containing a big percentage of red fescues should not receive over 3 pounds per 1,000 square feet per season. If trees are present, doubling the rate beneath the spread of the branches will reduce the competition between trees and grass for nutrient.

A complete fertilizer based on a 10-6-4 formula is 10 percent nitrogen, 6 percent phosphorus and 4 percent potash. An 80-lb. sack of fertilizer would contain 8 pounds of actual nitrogen — enough for about 20,000 square feet of lawn per year.

Stadherr recommends applying 20 pounds of complete fertilizer to each 1,000 square feet of lawn area now. As long as the grass is not actively growing, it is not necessary to water the fertilizer into the lawn. However, if the grass is growing it is important to give it a thorough soaking after applying the fertilizer.

Many types of fertilizer are available, some organic, derived from such sources as sewage sludge, tankage and soybean meal, and some inorganic, purely chemical in nature. Both types are effective plant foods. Some commercial fertilizers are a mixture of these two. In general, the organic fertilizers, which cost more per unit of actual nitrogen, release their nutrients more slowly than the inorganic, thus giving more uniform stimulation to the grass over a longer period. Addition of organic material also improves the texture of most soils.

Some home owners may be interested in trying a relatively new, high-nitrogen, urea-form fertilizer. Sold under several different trade names, this fertilizer spreads easily and releases its nitrogen slowly. Applied at recommended rates, it will not burn grass leaves, doesn't overstimulate the plants and is effective over a longer period than some of the older-type fertilizers. Since it contains at least 38 percent of actual nitrogen, a much smaller quantity is needed to provide the recommended amount.

Cyrus Malberg, Viking community farmer, questions reports that the ice break-up here set a new early record this year. Turning back the pages of his memory 40 years, he recalls the winter and spring of 1918, and is quite certain that Jack Frost gave up the fight earlier that March.

Mr. Malberg has an especially clear recollection of the early arrival of spring in 1918 because he had spent the winter hauling logs into Spooner from the John Boe homestead south of that village. John Boe may be remembered by other old timers as a mail carrier here in Thief River Falls. Pat Roark, a Thief River Falls farmer and road builder of that period, had his many horses hauling in that same area.

The winter had been normal with plenty of snow for good sledding. But on March 10 Pat Roark asked to be relieved of his lumber hauling assignment because the farm work had been started back home. The ice had gone out here at Thief River Falls on March 5, so went the reports.

But the fellows who wanted the timber moved insisted that the until a few days the snow was gone and the sledding ended in the Spooner area it was the last of March when Mr. Malberg reached home with his horses and found the reports about the early field work and seeding to be true. And 1918 was a good crop year.

Mr. Malberg was born in Excell township in 1888, which qualifies him to speak with authority on the early history of the area. His father, P. B. Malberg, homesteaded in the Steiner community in 1881 and lived to a ripe old age, with a good record of public service.

Only two cases were brought to court by city police. Darrel D. Gregory, city, a miner, pleaded guilty to possession of strong beer and was sentenced to 10 days in jail, which was suspended on conditions.

Robert C. Arneson, Rt. 3, city, was charged with careless driving on a citizen's complaint and was fined $10 after pleading guilty.

Two highway patrol cases were recorded in court Monday. Darlene M. Shetler, Rt. 2, pleaded guilty to failure to heed a school bus stop sign and was fined $25 plus $3.50 costs, of which $15 was suspended.

During the Shetler hearing it was brought out that many people are not aware that motorists meeting a school bus that is loading or unloading passengers, are required to stop until the bus gets under way again. Area drivers are forewarned of this requirement.

The other two patrol cases were Leo H. Murray, Crookston, who pleaded guilty to driving under the influence of liquor and was fined $100 plus $4 costs, and had this license revoked; and Warren F. Kron, city, who paid $12.50 plus $3.50 after pleading guilty to a speeding charge.

Light Rainfall, Ushers in April

.15 Inch Recorded Here Tuesday and Wednesday

April came into northwest Minnesota living up to its name by bringing showers this week. Area residents, particularly the city dwellers, welcomed the rain and its cleansing effects but everyone hopes the flowers brought by the April showers won't be water lilies.

One thing everyone here is happy about is the absence of violent weather, such as other parts of the country is experiencing. Tornadoes are back in the news now, twin twisters having lashed Wichita Falls, Texas yesterday. Others were reported elsewhere.

With the advent of spring, precipitation is again measured in inches of rainfall, of which the KTRF weatherman reports a total of .15 inch fall Tuesday and Wednesday. This is considerably less that what fell in some adjacent areas, however. High temperature here this week was 57 Monday, while the low was a mild 40 Tuesday.

The forecast is for cloudy skies and little temperature change today and Friday, becoming partly cloudy Friday. East-southeasterly winds, 10-20 m.p.h. will prevail, and high temperatures today will be in the 46-52 bracket.

QUESTIONS answered for VETERANS

Additional information or assistance on veterans' benefits may be obtained by writing or visiting the VA Contact Representatives at the Grand Forks VA office.

Q—My GI term insurance policy has been lapsed about six months. Will I have to pay all back premiums in order to reinstate it?

A—No. You must pay two premiums: one covering the month your policy lapsed and one for the present month. Since your policy was lapsed more than three months, you will need a physical examination to reinstate it.

Q—If a school expels a veteran for misconduct, does he still have the right to use his change-of-course privilege under the Korean GI Bill and enroll for another course in another school?

A—No. If Korean GI training is interrupted or discontinued for misconduct, and the school refuses to readmit the veteran, the law denies him all further GI training.

Q—I am a World War II veteran and I own a house purchased with a GI loan. If by some chance I have to sell it for a compelling reason after July 25, 1958, the deadline for applying for World War II GI loans, may I still get my entitlement reinstated?

A—Yes. Once VA reinstates your entitlement you would have until January 31, 1965, to obtain another GI loan—even though the World War II GI loan deadline will have passed.

Q—I am over 18 and I plan to go to school under the War Orphans Education program. Would I be eligible to receive both my educational allowances and death compensation payments at the same time?

A—No. Since you are over 18, the law prohibits both payments simultaneously. If you receive War Orphans payments your death compensation payments will have to stop.

Pruning Fruit Trees

Failure of many fruit trees to produce high-quality fruit may be due to lack of pruning. Most people are either afraid to prune for fear of ruining the tree or else they put it off until it's too late. Early spring before growth starts is a very desirable time.

Young trees should be pruned to produce a good framework of branches. They should be 6 to 8 inches apart and well distributed around the main trunk. Cut back branches that are growing too fast and those that cross or rub each other. Make all cuts close to the trunk or main branches and just above a bud which is pointed in the direction where you desire the new growth to develop.

On larger trees cut out all dead or diseased branches or those that cross or rub. Remove water sprouts or shoots that grow up in the center of the tree. Remove branches inside the tree that have stopped growing at the tips. These usually produce only small, poorly colored fruits. Keep trees from growing too tall by cutting back to a fork or side branch. Keep growth developing outward.

Paint all wounds over 1½ inches with orange shellac or other suitable wound dressings.

With no engineering experience, Ferdinand de Lesseps planned, promoted, and built the Suez Canal. He talked Turkey's Viceroy of Egypt into giving right of way in 1854, but four years passed before he raised the capital.

The word "maelstrom" came into English as the name of a celebrated whirlpool off the Norwegian coast. The vortex was once believed to suck in all ships within a wide radius.

The celebration of Mardi Gras is derived from early pagan rites of Spring and was first celebrated in New Orleans by the French pioneers in 1699.

Recent studies revealed that a 150-pound man or woman who takes two ounces of whiskey can have driving ability impaired by as much as 35%.

Birdsfoot Trefoil

Birdsfoot trefoil has varied widely in pasture trials in Minnesota.

In some cases, research workers and farmers have found it was possible to establish good stands that produced well for five or more years. In other situations, the stands dwindled away in two or three years.

Lack of winter hardiness is one reason why trefoil often doesn't survive.

However, trefoil when managed correctly, can be a good pasture crop. This could be a good time for farmers to find out how it performs on their own land.

Trefoil shouldn't be the only pasture on the farm, through, because it starts later in spring than most grass or legume pastures. For establishing and managing birdsfoot trefoil, use land worth improving and suitable for pasture. Fall plowing is best, because that kills old sod. Fertilizer according to soil test.

Treat the seed with trefoil inoculant. Milk can be used to make the inoculant "stick". Use two or three times the normal amount of inoculant where trefoil is being raised for the first time.

Plant the Empire variety of Trefoil, early in spring. Seed 5 pounds trefoil with 6 pounds bromegrass or 5 pounds timothy. If possible, use band-seeding. Don't seed more than a half inch deep. Oats is a good companion crop, but it should be pastured when 12 inches high; or harvested as silage. If there's no weed problem, trefoil can be seeded alone.

Empire usually isn't ready to graze until mid-June or July. But it stands continuous grazing better than alfalfa or red clover and is fine for rotational grazing. When cattle have grazed an area, clip it and drag the droppings. Second growth trefoil recovers slower than alfalfa. There is no bloat danger from pasturing trefoil.

Put up surplus growth as silage or hay. Finally, keep up the soil supply of phosphorus and potash on established birdsfoot trefoil stands.

Oat Silage

If you plan to harvest your oats specifically for hay or silage this year, use a late variety.

But if you plan to have a particularly large acreage of oats for silage, you might be better off planting both a late and a medium-maturing variety. This will make it possible to spread the harvest season over a longer period.

Rodney Briggs, University of Minnesota agronomist, says 1957 trials at five stations showed that late varieties consistently gave the highes forage yields. This held true both on a wet and on a dry basis.

Highest silage yielder of all oat varieties in the 1957 trials was Rodney, averaging 11.38 tons per acre. Branch and Garry, also recommended late varieties, yielded 10.2 and 10.5 tons, respectively.

When the yields were figured on a dry-matter basis, these three varieties again yielded more than medium or early-maturing varieties. Rodney averaged 3.85, Branch, 3.84 and Garry 3.06 dry tons per acre.

These tests were conducted at University branch experiment stations at Waseca, Morris, Crookston, Grand Rapids and Duluth.

Minnesota ranks first among the 48 states in the following industries and business according to the latest census: Iron Ore shipped, butter manufactured, sweet corn processed, calendar and calendar pads, window and door frames, hoisting machinery, linseed oil, number (license) to fish.

Survey of Thief River Watershed Is Urged by Sportsmens Club

Members of the Thief River Falls Sportsman's Club went on record in favor of a petition calling for a survey of the Thief River Watershed, at their regular meeting in the auditorium Tuesday night. This action was taken following an explanation of the purpose of the petition and the procedure that is being followed, by W. E. Dahlquist.

A resolution supporting the proposed survey of the Thief River watershed pointed up the needs of that area for better drainage and also possible better use of lands not suited for agriculture at this time to be developed for upland game propagation.

The club voted in favor of a smelt fry dinner to be held later in the month. Conservation department officials will be invited to attend this meeting and the date will be announced after the club officers have heard from state officials and possible open dates in their schedules.

Movies on youth training in the handling of firearms were shown and Herb Dill ran a series of interesting slides on trout fishing in Crow Lake.

Lightweight braces for polio victims are now made from titanium, only half as heavy as steel, but just as strong.

Cleman Teal New Archery Club Head

The annual meeting of the Thief River Archery club was held at the Gunder Legvold residence on Sunday afternoon March 30th, with Emil Burdick presiding.

New officers elected for the coming year are: President, Cleman Teal; vice president, Gary Humes; secretary-treasurer, Art Overbye, board of directors, Emil Burdick, Andy Annenson and Ted Kusmak.

Plans were made to set up the roving course for the coming year. It was announced the April fun shoot will be held in the field house in Grand Forks at 9:30 Sunday, April 13. The first league Shoot will be on the Crookston course May 11, and the shoot at Thief River Falls will be August 10th. A membership drive will be conducted at once, and all interested archers are urged to contact any of the above officers.

Smelt Season in Lake Superior to Open about Apr. 20

Fishermen planning to take smelt in Lake Superior this spring will find no changes in the regulations, according to Hjalmar O Swenson, state fisheries chief.

The smelt run in Lake Superior usually begins about April 20, depending upon weather conditions.

All persons holding licenses to take fish by angling may take smelt with the use of dip nets and minnow seines not more than 25 feet in length nor more than 4 feet in depth.

Seines may not be used in any stream except the St. Louis River, nor in Lake Superior within 100 feet of the mouth of any stream, except the St. Louis River.

Smelt may be taken and possessed without limit and may be bought or sold at any time. Live smelt, however, may not be possessed, transported, or used for bait purposes.

Playing in a roadway was unlucky for 136 youngsters last year. Eight of these were killed and the others injured by passing cars.

It has been estimated that accurate long-rang weather forecasting could save the oil industry up to $100 million a year.

Anecdotes

The echoes of the recent reunion of the 1938 Prowler state champion basketball team continue to reverberate.

We recall one story related by coach George Lee, and which pertained to the football season of 1937. That year the Prowler gridders were undefeated, and in a game played at Grafton the locals were shoving the Spoilers around with considerable ease.

It marked the first time in a number of years that the Prowlers were able to defeat Grafton at Grafton, and the locals were feeling highly elated in piling up the score. The Prowlers won the game 25 to 0.

After the last touchdown scored by by the Prowlers, a fifteen-yard penalty was charged against the Prowlers. Coach Lee, being puzzled by the penalty, called his captain, Bob Hanson, to the sidelines for an explanation. And here's the answer that Bob gave: "The referee penalized us fifteen yards for gloating."

And that's a fact, too. The referee probably intended to charge the locals with unsportsman like conduct, for the disparaging remarks they were making about Grafton, but he called it "gloating".

You Can't Beat Power

After stubbornly resisting the trend toward greater horsepower, and increased speed, in outboard motors, John (City John) Jaranson has finally succumbed to the blandishments of advertising.

Last week John traded in his two-and-a-half horsepower motor for a three-horsepower job. As John said, "You can't beat Power."

Smelting Fever

The city's over-anxious smelt fishermen are casting hopeful and expectant eyes toward the North Shore of Lake Superior, and eagerly awaiting the first reports of the smelt run.

Favorite smelt dipping and seining spots in Minnesota are the stream mouths along the lower portion of the North Shore, and the beach along Park Point, the low sandy ridge that extends into Lake Superior at Duluth.

Most of the smelting is done at night, and often the April weather is bitter cold and a blazing wood fire on the beach is a requisite. No one knows how many are taken in Minnesota waters each year for the catch is spread among thousands of fishermen.

In ordinary years, the smelt run usually extends from April 14th to April 29th, with a variation of few days; but with this season's remarkable weather and early spring, the run may be advanced considerably.

The furore caused by the smelt run is exciting and colorful, and the numbers of the small silvery fish, about six inches long, that invade the shallows for spawning purposes is unbelieveable.

Shorty's Progress

Larry (Shorty) Perkins, in addition to winning the intramural badminton championship at Moorhead State Teachers College, won the college singles bowling title, and was a member of the intramural basketball championship squad.

In addition to these extra-curricular activities, Shorty found time for study, and he posted a straight 'A' this past quarter. Shorty, who is a member of the MSTC golf squad, is a junior at the Moorhead school and a math major.

Joey at Grand Forks

Joey Poole, who has been a vital player in the baseball Thieves' pattern of play the past six or seven years, will undoubtedly be among the missing when manager Frank Gunderman calls the roll for the local club this season.

According to reliable reports, Joey will remain in Grand Forks during the summer, and he has secured employment over there. Bob May, the North Dakota Sioux hockey coach, perhaps was instrumental in obtaining a job for Joey, for May intends to organize an independent baseball club at Grand Forks. With several of the Sioux hockey players, including Joey, this ball club of May's should be quite an attraction on the exhibition baseball circuit.

Plans Advance for VFW Convention

District Conclave to Be Held in City May 3 and 4

Commander Benhart Johnson of the local VFW Post announced that plans are progressing well for the 9th district VFW convention to be held here May 3rd and 4th. The selling of advertising is nearly completed.

Letters have been written to all high schools in the area by Alex Cloutier, parade marshal, inviting them to take part in the parade. All merchants are asked to contact H. B. Rafteseth if they wish to have a float or unit in the parade.

The theme of the parade is to be "Loyalty Day" to offset the wide publicity the Russians receive on their May Day parade. The local VFW post is planning a float with a Loyalty Day theme.

Social Security for Farmers Is Explained

Farmers must file income tax returns to report self-employment income for social security purposes, even though they have no income tax to pay. According to Walter D. Kistler, manager of the Grand Forks district social security office, any farmer who has a net profit of $400 or more in his tax year must file an income tax return to show income taxable under the Social Security Act.

Kistler emphasized that tax returns showing income subject to social security tax must also show the taxpayers' name, address, and social security number. When any of these items are omitted, the taxpayer might not get social security credit for the income on which he paid the tax. Since future social security benefits are computed on reported earnings, omission of identifying information on the tax return can seriously reduce a future social security benefit paid to a self-employed person, Kistler said.

Farmers who have less than $400 net farm profit, but who have $600 or more gross farm income can report earnings toward social security coverage. If the gross income is not over $1800, two-thirds of the gross can be reported if greater than the true net if the farmer wishes to increase his future benefit payment. Also, if a farmer's gross farm income is more than $1800, but the net is less than $1200, he may, if he wishes, report $1200.

Farm income of farm land owners who lease out their land to someone else is covered by social security only if they participate materially in the management or production of the crop by arrangement with the lease. Farm landlords who are not sure their income is covered by social security should consult their local social security office, Kistler said.

A representative from the Grand Forks Social Security Office, will be in Thief River Falls at the city auditorium on Tuesday, April 8, at 10:00 a.m. He will answer questions on social security, and assist in filing claims.

Easter Seal Group Asks Crippled to Apply Now

A call has gone out from the Easter Seal Society for all those interested in referring crippled children and adults to Camp Courage, the specially-designed Easter Seal camp near Annandale and Maple Lake, to write for application blanks right away.

Camp Director Toy Jambeck says he expects some 450 handicapped youngsters and adults to attend Camp Courage this year and it is necessary that anyone interested in referring campers contact the Easter Seal office by April 10.

"Anyone interested in the program who has not received information should contact the Easter Seal Society office, 420 East Lake Street, Minneapolis (8), right away," Jambeck said.

Camp Courage is just one of the many services for thousands of Minnesota's crippled children and adults made possible by contributions to the annual Easter Seal Appeal, which ends April 6.

Drive on Illegal Spearing Slated

Game and Fish Division Announces Crackdown

With the spring fish spawning runs about to begin, state game and fish director, James W. Kimball, announced today in St. Paul that he is ordering a statewide "crackdown" on illegal spearing activities.

"This spring," said Kimball, "I am ordering that our warden force be strengthened by additional division personnel in a determined effort to curb the illegal slaughtering of our game fish by spearing. Each spring countless thousands of spawning northern pike are taken by fish hogs who defy the laws and rob law-abiding sportsmen of their fair share of future angling enjoyment."

"This crackdown on spearing," continued Kimball, "will be patterned much after our crackdown last fall on illegal early duck shooting. In that statewide operation we successfully reduced 'sooner' shooting to a minimum. In fact, in most areas it was non-existent."

"We are not fooling," emphasized Kimball. "We propose to do all we can with the resources at our disposal to make spearing an unprofitable activity this spring. All citizens of our state, whether they are sportsmen or not, can render valuable public service by notifying their game warden or any nearby game and fish personnel of illegal spearing in their vicinity."

Hagopian, Plymouth's director of advertising and sales promotion. Mrs. Schneider also won a 1958 Plymouth automobile to become eligible in final competition for the grand prize.

THE MINNESOTA STORY

Prepared by the
Minnesota Historical Society

NEW YEAR'S DAY

"The festivities and hilarity of our town on New Year's confirm the truth that cold weather can never freeze warm hearts," wrote the editor of the "Minnesota Pioneer," on January 2, 1850.

The beginning of the year 1850 was celebrated in St. Paul by the exercises of the Minnesota Historiacl Society at the Methodist Church, where the Reverend Edward D. Neill delivered in the morning a "thrilling, eloquent, and instructive" lecture on the "French, Voyageurs in the Seventeenth Century." A band from Fort Snelling helped enliven the occasion.

A splendid ball was held at the Central House on the evening of New Years' Day, a function at which there were five sets of cotillions. "It was the largest collection of beauty and of fashion we have ever seen in the West," wrote the newspaper's editor, James M. Goodhue.

In the "Pioneer" of January 2, he addressed his readers in an editorial poem which sang of the future glories of St. Paul and the whole Northwest. The weather might be twenty or thirty degrees below zero, but, chanted the optimist, "For vigorous health no climate dare, With Minnesota to compare."

FIRST BOOK PRINTED

The first book published in Minnesota is believed to have been the "Annals of the Minnesota Historiacl Society," two editions of which were printed by James M. Goodhue of St. Paul in 1850. It was run off on the Washington hand press which Goodhue had taken to St. Paul the year before and which was also used to print the first newspaper issued in the territory — the 'Minnesota Pioneer."

The "Annals" is a paper-covered book or pamphlet, containing the constitution and by-laws of the society, a list of members, and an address dealing with the French explorers of the Minnesota country in the seventeenth century, which was delivered by the Reverend Edward D. Neill at the first annual meeting of the society on January 1, 1850.

The second edition differs from the first in that in includes four additional pages, which contain a description of Minnesota written by Henry H. Sibley. The last page also has a table showing the "Distances from St. Paul" of some thirty points in the territory. Copies of the first edition are extremely rare; the only ones known are in the possession of the Minnesota Historical Society and the Library of Congress.

DICKSON THE LIBERATOR

An old diary, a few faded manuscripts, and a Spanish placard signed "Montezuma II" are all that remain of a colorful chapter in Minnesota history, the story of a taggle, taggle army which crossed Minnesota from Fond du Lac to Pembina in 1836. Its leader was James Dickson, who called himself Montezuma II' and "The Liberator."

With some sixty followers recruited mostly from the Montreal area, Dickson sailed from Buffalo, New York, for Lake Superior in the summer of 1836. He declared that his purpose was to recruit half-breeds from the Red River colony, lead them to Santa Fe via the Missouri and its tributaries, west California from Mexico, and set up an Indian kingdom with himself as monarch.

To this new state, he expected all the prairie and mountain Indians to flock, as well as those tribes about to be removed from the United States. Was this fantastic project his real purpose, or was the expedition in reality directed against the powerful fur-trading company which controlled the Canadian Northwest?

Dickson's strange party went by canoe from Fond du Lac up the St. Louis River route to Sandy Lake, then via the Mississippi to Lake Winnibigoshish and Red Lake.

But Minnesota winter proved to be a formidable enemy. First Dickson's guides deserted; then part of the company turned back; soon a snowstorm obliterated the wagon trail which the party was following; the way was lost; the men were frostbitten. Finally, after three months of hardship the "Liberator" and his "army" straggled into Pembina.

Dickson failed to get re-enforcements in the Red River country, and his ill-fated expedition melted away. Some of its members, like Martin and Alexander McLeod, later became prominent early citizens of Minnesota. Others, like their leader, disappeared.

STATE 100 YEARS OLD

"Glorious News! Minnesota Admitted!" Telegraphed to Prairie du Chien expressly for the "Pioneer and Democrat". Thus the headlines of a St. Paul newspaper a hundred years ago announced the admission of Minnesota to the Union. The bill of admission was signed by President James Buchanan on May 11, 1858, and the news reached St. Paul on the 13th, rather speedy transmission for the time.

Minnesota's transition from territorial status to statehood was long, drawn out and complicated. The enabling act, passed by Congress on February 26, 1857, authorized the election of delegates to a convention to frame a state constitution. The results of this election, held in June, were disputed by both Democrats and Republicans, however, and on July 13, the day set for the assembling of the convention, two groups of delegates claimed the right to meet. The next day two separate conventions began to hold sessions. In the end, however, both groups agreed upon a single constitution, which was ratified by popular vote on October 13. At the same election representatives to the national Congress, state officers, and members of the legislature of the future state were chosen.

Although Congress had not admitted Minnesota, the elected state legislature assembled on December 2, 1857, in accordance with a provision of the newly adopted constitution, and proceeded to enact laws and elect two United States senators.

Meanwhile at Washington the bill for Minnesota's admission was delayed because southern senators refused to allow the entrance of another northern state until Kansas was admitted under the Decompton constitution. Finally both states were given places in the Union; the Minnesota bill was passed by the Senate on April 8 and went up from the House for the president's approval on May 11.

"50¢ a tablet can be cheap!"

No one likes to pay 50¢ for a single tablet—including us. Nevertheless, some of the newer drugs cost that much. They seem expensive—yes, only seem. Consider this: Pneumonia used to mean 4 to 6 bedridden weeks. Loss of pay. Often hospitalization. Often death. Now, a few dollars' worth of one antibiotic will generally cure pneumonia in days. And this is only one example . . . there are many others. When you consider what a few 50c pills will do for you, they seem downright cheap.

The First Year Report

Leaders of organized labor are not happy with the report of the McClellan committee on the results of its first year of activity in the investigation of labor and management racketeering. The committee, composed of four republican and four democratic senators, reached a surprising seven-to-one decision, the lone dissenter being from the state of Michigan who thought the report too critical of Labor.

Rank and file union members, however, should be satisfied with the findings even though they contain much unpleasant information. The report stated that in this first year of their activities the probers had found that over a period of 15 years more than $10 million of union funds had been "either stolen, embezzled, or misused by union officials".

It is only by revealing such facts that necessary reform measures can be secured. The rank and file members certainly have not been benefited by the racketeering that has been too common in some of the labor organizations that have been operated from the top down, for the interests mainly of the small group in control.

The record of one year of investigations by the McClellan group fully justifies its continuance.

Start the Fight Now

A Minnesota dairy products association will ask the state of Minnesota to make $60,000 available to carry on the fight against barriers to the sale of dairy products, and we have no objection to an appropriation by the state for such a purpose. But waiting for the state to act means a year's delay, and action along this line, long past due, should be taken at once.

And we are not impressed with the proposal that Minnesota's attorney general should be given the responsibility of directing the fight against such barriers to a free exchange of goods. We are not satisfied, for instance, that Miles Lord would support the interests of the unorganized dairymen of the state if they were in conflict with the interests of the well organized milk drivers union. And these milk barriers are politically untouchable mainly because they are supported by the unions.

The dairy industry of Minnesota and Wisconsin can well afford to finance its own battle for recognition at this time, and there should be no delay in setting up its own organization to start the fight. With the fight well under way [illegible] a way could be found to secure additional financial assistance from the state when the legislature convenes next year.

He Pointed The Way

Dr. Ermond Hartmans, farm management specialist of the University of Minnesota, didn't pull any of his punches when he talked at the auditorium last week about the agricultural revolution and how it affects the business of farming. It was not a political revolution he was talking about. He reported on the revolution in farming operations that we now are experiencing, and while some of his conclusions were decidedly discouraging, most of his audience, we are sure, recognized him as an authority whose business it is to deal with facts.

During the years of this agricultural revolution the number of farmers has steadily decreased and the total production has steadily increased. These trends will continue. Dr. Hartmans believes that in this elimination contest only the efficient will survive.

This problem of survival applies not only to individuals but to communities as well. Collectively, hereabouts, we have an area efficiency problem. We are competing with other areas of the state and nation. In this competition we have some advantages and some disadvantages. Our survival will depend largely on what we do for ourselves in taking advantage of our advantages and overcoming as best we can the disadvantages.

It is an interesting challenge that we should face realistically. The sooner we realize that we are on our own and that what the future has in store for us will depend largely on what we do to help ourselves, the better will be our chances for success.

This sums up in brief what we think Dr. Hartmans wanted us to know. We are sure that the things he said, were said in a spirit of helpfulness. He pointed the way as he knew the way to be.

Why Grand Juries?

The Financial Post, published in Toronto, Canada, surprises us with the information that one of the old British institutions, the Grand Jury, has long since "perished in Britain itself and everywhere else in the Commonwealth" except in Ontario and the Maritime provinces of Canada. In view of the fact the Grand Jury is still a factor in the judicial procedure in Minnesota the following observations by the Post are interesting:

> It is not often that public functionaries ask for the abolition of their functions; but the Grand Jury of York county that sat in Toronto this month did just that. In a unanimous report to the bench, its members say that the Grand Jury now has nothing useful to do and no longer protects the citizen against injustice.
> Grand Jury hearings, far from helping the accused, merely give the prosecution (and not the defense) a useful dry run. Only the case against the prisoner is presented. Defense counsel and witnesses are not present.
> Thus the Grand Jury has become a rubber-stamp for the Crown and only delays justice. On the rare occasions when it returns a "no bill" (only one at the recent Toronto sitting against 50 "true bills"), it has discovered a flaw which would be detected at once by a judge.
> The York county grand jurors sat for a week and cost the public treasury a tidy sum in fees. Since the same procedure is followed in every Ontario and Maritime county, the aggregate waste of time and money is very considerable."
> With all due respect to antiquities, the Grand Jury should be allowed to expire. It will be no loss.

We are glad to pass this opinion along to the legal department without further comment.

Facts Help the Schools

(Kansas City Times)

The first step toward solving the problem of hooliganism in the schools is to recognize it openly. Nothing is ever accomplished by trying to minimize the facts. . . .

It is normal enough for school principals and other administrators to try to hush-hush unpleasant things. This attitude assumes that any trouble tends to give a school a bad name.

But whenever school people are prepared to act aggressively on their problems we see no reason to be afraid of letting the public know the facts.

The facts show that the great majority of school pupils are decent, law-abiding young people. A small, ruthless minority has caused an increasing amount of trouble. The trend is national as well as local. It reflects on the schools no more than on other departments of government. In fact the schools might have a just complaint that they have been left to solve a very difficult problem with little help from law enforcement officials, courts and parents. The schools are no more responsible than others for the sentimental theories that aren't solving the national delinquency problem.

The spotlight is on the schools particularly because that is where the teen-age delinquents are required by law to spend five days a week. That is where the problem is concentrated. If it is to be solved, the public must look to school leadership for a strong course of action.

Borrowed Nonsense . . .

The ideal family should have three children—if one of them happens to be a genius there will be the other two to support him.

Two college professors were earnestly discussing the increasing cost of living.

"Everything is always going up," said one.

"Oh, I wouldn't say that," replied the other. "For instance, there's your opinion of me, my opinion of you, and the students' opinion of us both.

What is Easter?

Easter is promise of tomorrow,
The sweet oblivion of all sorrow.
Easter is Faith and Eternal Life.
The death of pain - triumph over strifes.
Easter is Hope - a Victory won
As man lives again - through God's own Son.

I am taking this opportunity to thank all those who have contributed news items to our column. Hope you will continue to give me your support. Wishing you all a Blessed Easter!

57,670 Auto Mishaps in Minnesota in 1957

An increase of seven percent in traffic accidents during 1957 over 1956 was recorded in the annual summary report of motor vehicle traffic accidents in Minnesota. This was noted in the 1957 report released today by the Minnesota highway department, which includes the latest information for that calendar year.

Minnesota drivers reported almost 3,000 more traffic accidents last year than in the previous year. A total of 57,670 accidents was reported, which involved 103,004 drivers.

During the same time it was estimated that the mileage traveled in the state increased 3 percent to 12,821 millions of vehicle miles. This was determined by permanent and periodic traffic counters and by sales of motor fuel in Minnesota.

Increases were noted in these items reported: The number of motor vehicles registered increased about 105,000 to 1,406,675.

The number of persons injured jumped almost 1,000 over 1956, as 23,634 persons suffered injuries in 15,328 accidents. The total of persons killed in traffic rose to the highest annual figure in the state's history with 684 persons killed in 569 fatal accidents, the summary reported. (After preparation of the summary, one more person died from a 1957 traffic accident to bring the death total to 685.) In 41,773 accidents, there was property damage, only.

By far, most fatal accidents in 1957 occurred on Minnesota's rural roads; only 152 of the 569 were charged against urban areas of over 2,500 population. In contrast, 42,149 of the 57,670 accidents, roughly four out of five, occurred in urban areas.

Of the accidents reported to the Highway Department, the most frequent cause was two or more vehicles attempting to occupy the same space at the same time. Thus resulted in 47,317 accidents, and 219 fatalities in collisions.

Death took the livest of 101 young people between the ages of 25 and 34; while 67 youngsters under 15 years died in 1957 traffic mishaps. To the final roll were added the names of 113 pedestrians and 10 bicyclists. The greatest number of pedestrians who died in traffic were between 65 and 74 years of age.

If you had been a traffic fatality in 1957, on the average, you would have been a younger man, driving your own car home from work in the afternoon. You were within a few miles of home on a very familiar road, which was in good condition during clear weather.

4-H Cooks to Share in 1958 Contests

Girls Eligible to Take Part in National Events

If Minnesota 4-H Club girls have anything to say about it the family dinner table will literally groan under the weight of all the delicious meals heaped upon it.

The girls are participating in three major 4-H food projects this year which will help them to learn the basic as well as the finer points of serving home cooked meals. These projects are girls' home economics, canning, and food preparation.

The young homemakers will learn to select, preserve, prepare, and demonstrate a variety of good things to eat. Not only will they be able to stretch the food budget, but will also step up the nutritive value of about 1,100 meals served during the year.

And it isn't all hard work. There is fun at fair time and at 4-H events where many club members will receive well deserved recognition. Each of the 4-H projects is supported by donors who provide valuable incentive awards. They are: Girls' home economics, Montgomery Ward; canning, Kerr Glass Mfg. Co.; food preparation, Betty Crocker of General Mills.

Awards are the same in all three programs. Six national winners in each category will receive $400 scholarships to the college of their choice and an expense-paid trip to the 1958 National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, next winter. The state winner will be a delegate to the Congress through funds provided by the donor. There is a maximum of four county awards in each project.

Additional information regarding these projects may be obtained from local 4-H club leaders or the county extension office.

Governor Endorses 5-point Safety Plan

Governor Orville L. Freeman today gave his approval to a five point legislative program prepared by the Minnesota Safety Council and aimed at the reduction of traffic accidents in Minnesota.

Presented to the governor by A. V. Rohweder, Duluth, council president, the report of the executive committee explained that it was made as a result of a comprehensive study of problems relative to traffic safety by various groups affiliated with the council.

The report recommended:

1. There be absolute minimum and more uniform and severe, penalties for driving after suspension or revocation of drivers' licenses, with up-grading of fines and jail sentences for more serious violations.

2. The adoption of an implied consent chemical test law for the purpose of controlling the drinking driver, by requiring that any driver upon applying for and receiving a driver's licence shall be deemed to have given consent to chemical tests for intoxication.

3. The enactment of periodic motor vehicle inspection (without recommendation as to private or state operation.)

4. A change in the basic law of arrest to permit an enforcement officer, after an investigation and upon reasonable cause, to issue a summons for a traffic misdemeanor which he did not see.

5. The licensing by the state of private driver training schools so that suitable standards can be met.

The council urged that these recommendations be made available to all affiliated local safety councils for deliberation and study.

"It is believed that this would greatly enhances public acceptance and result in a more general understanding of the recommendations made by local groups and organizations," the report said. "The sole purpose of the action is to strengthen the Minnesota safety program in an effort to reduce traffic fatalities and accidents on Minnesota streets and highways."

"This report is the result of much study on the part of responsible people of the council," the governor said. "I have concurred in its recommendations and shall do all I can to continue to urge the passage of appropriate legislation which will implement the program.

"I am sure that other legislative recommendations will be made by this and other groups interested in the traffic safety problem. They all should be given careful consideration in the period before the 1959 legislative session so that such laws, as may be enacted will be effective in strengthening our safety program."

FROM THE DIARY OF OUR DESTINY
And very early in the morning the first day of the week...

Thus begins the most amazing account of human experience ever written. And so simply, with just a notation of time: the hour, the day, the very moment!

But like a church bell sounding its call to worship, that simple notation of time has become the clarion of a New Life.

So deeply has it penetrated our preoccupation with the routine of every-day existence that millions gather at sunrise to greet the dawn of each Easter Day.

What has given such meaning to one moment in time?

Its PROMISE: Christ is risen. The One Who said, because I live, ye shall live also—He lives!

This tremendous moment, for all who worship Him in faith, became the first entry in the Diary of our Destiny.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Greatest Advance Since Pasteurization

All Land O'Lakes Grade A Milk 100% quick-chilled in bulk tanks . . . right on the farm, right after milking!

No longer need you accept milk that's handled on the farm in old-fashioned cans . . . that waits for pickup in cans . . . that travels the milk route, up and down country roads, and finally on into town—still in cans. Milk not once quick-chilled in a bulk tank!

100% quick-chilling is here!
It's brought to you by Land O'Lakes and by the select group of farmers in this area who have invested thousands of dollars in bulk handling equipment. But for them, we could not make this statement:

All Land O'Lakes Grade A Milk is 100% quick-chilled in bulk tanks . . . right on the farm, right after milking. The milk cans are gone!

Now, here's what this means to you: All farms selected to supply milk to Land O'Lakes (relatively few make the grade) are equipped with sealed, stainless steel bulk refrigeration tanks into which all milk is pumped immediately after milking.

Chilling begins at once!
At the source—fast! Within four hours from the time it enters the chilling tanks, Land O'Lakes Grade A Milk is brought down to 40° F. or lower.

Then it is rushed by tank truck—again in sealed, stainless steel—to a nearby Land O'Lakes plant for distribution. At no time (except for pasteurization) does Land O'Lakes Grade A Milk go above 40° until it is safely in your hands. Sweet and fresh!

That is the difference
That is the big difference between Land O'Lakes Milk and other milks. True, some dairies now get some milk that is bulk quick-chilled on the farm. And it's inevitable that the major dairies eventually will go 100%. But Land O'Lakes brings it to you today. Grade A milk that is 100% quick-chilled in bulk tanks . . . right on the farm, right after milking!

Tastes fresher, stays fresher longer. Naturally, milk that receives this premium care—milk that is chilled immediately after milking—tastes fresher and stays fresher longer. Doesn't your family deserve it—this premium milk at the regular price? Fresh Land O'Lakes!

Plummer Juniors Offer Play Friday

To Stage Guest Comedy in Plummer Auditorium

The junior class of Plummer high school will present "We Shook The Family Tree" on Friday, April 11, at the Plummer auditorium.

This three-act comedy takes place in the spring, just before the prom. Hildegarde, played by Mickey Jorgenson, is the girl who can't seem to stay out of trouble. Her date for the prom turns out to be none other than Freddie Shermer, played by Tom Fallon, who wears knickers!

Things get worse when her brothers, Bob, enacted by Duane Howard, and Jimmy, James Jolly, think up their own ways to tantalize their sister, Hildegarde.

The younger sister, Sally, who in real life is Carol Schjelderup tries to help out. But it really takes mother, Carole Mosserstad and father, Dick Kooyer, to settle the problems.

Ellis May, played by Jan Lefebvre, and Jill, Marilyn Perreault, are the boys' girl friends, and get into the act, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Shermer, played by Jim and Barbara Wright respectively.

To really set things off, Paige, played by a young sixth-grade girl, Mary Wichterman, "delivers" some old love letters.

Crookston Youth Slays Father in California City

John Cowlishaw, 14, Is Charged with Shooting Father at Stockton Home

A quiet 14-year-old boy with a ducktail haircut, who left Crookston less than two months ago to join his father in California was being held in that state Friday for the shooting death of his father.

The boy, John Cowlishaw, told authorities at Mariposa, Calif. Thursday that he shot and killed his father at their Stockton home, then went for a long drive with the body stuffed in the trunk of the family automobile. He later dumped the body in a roadside ditch.

He has shown no remorse for the shooting, authorities said Friday.

The boy was booked on a murder charge and held in the San Joaquin County, Calif., juvenile jail.

The boy had been attending Webster Junior High School, as a ninth grade student, since February, when he returned from a visit with his mother and two sisters at Crookston.

Deputy Sheriff Kenneth Phillips said young Cowlishaw had not elaborated on his reasons for shooting his father beyond saying "we just didn't get along."

2 R.L.F Youths Die in Crash at Maple Lake

David Smith and Harlan Harmoning Are Death Victims

An Easter Sunday evening drive along the shore of Maple Lake, near Mentor, Minn., ended in tragedy for the families of five Red Lake Falls youths this past week-end.

The 1957-model car driven by Robert Allen Luxenberg, 16, apparently missed a curve on the winding blacktop road east of the Maple Lake pavilion about 11:30 Sunday evening and two of the five youths in the car were killed in the ensuing crash.

David Smith, about 17, and Harlan Harmoning, about 16, died at the scene. Hospitalized in Red Lake Falls are Theodore Majeres, 16, Robert Berry, 15, and Luxenberg, the driver of the car. They all suffered cuts and other injuries.

According to Polk county Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Domeier the car was apparently travelling too fast on the narrow road and missed a 45-degree curve. It sideswiped a utility pole and then crashed into a large oak tree with the right-front wheel, demolishing the car completely.

Domeier said the case is still under investigation and that charges, if any, are pending.

Eisenhower Backs Red Cross Appeal

Goal May Not Be Reached in Current Fund Drive

President Eisenhower Friday endorsed a plea by the American Red Cross for increased contributions in its national fund raising campaign.

The Red Cross said earlier that it is a matter of "grave concern" that its drive for 99 million dollars is still about 25 millions short of the goal.

Eisenhower's comment coincided with his designation of most of flood-stricken California as a major disaster area, clearing the way for granting of federal relief funds.

In urging support of the Red Cross, the President noted that federal aid goes for public purposes while the Red Cross aids individuals and families.

The White House announcement referred to a letter from Red Cross president Alfred M. Gruenther saying the organization already has given emergency aid to 1,800 persons in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar N. Mattson and Mrs. Oliver M. Mattson of Warren visited with relatives and friends in the city Friday afternoon.

1st Blacktop Slated for Marshall County

Bids on a $525,000 highway construction program which includes the first bituminous surfacing of Marshall county highways, will be opened on May 20 by the Marshall county Board of commissioners, Henry I. Knutson, county highway engineer, announced last week in the Warren Sheaf.

The huge construction program includes base preparation and bituminous surfacing of County State Aid Road 3 from Warren, northeast for a distance of 8¼ miles and on County State Aid Road 6 from Middle River east for a distance of 10 miles. The Warren project is estimated to cost $127,000 while the cost of the Middle River project is estimated at $135,000.

In addition to the two bituminous projects, three grading projects are scheduled for 25.2 miles at an estimated cost of $268,000, said Knutson. These projects include projects west of Argyle and Stephen which are to be graded in preparation for bituminous surfacing in 1959 and one standard grading project west of Holt.

County State Aid Road No. 4 will be graded and prepared for bituminous treatment for a distance of 8.5 miles west of Argyle while County State Aid Road No. 5 will be graded and prepared for bituminous surfacing for a distance of 10.8 miles west of Stephen. County State Aid Road No. 7 will be graded for a distance of 6 miles west of Holt.

One-half of the cost of the road construction program will be paid out of federal aid funds on a matching basis from county funds, said Knutson. Roads are now being built to comply with federal specifications in order to be eligible to qualify for federal aid, the Engineer reported.

Condemnation proceeding to acquire necessary right of way for the new grading projects have been started in the county. Official publication of the condemnation notices appears in today's issue of the Sheaf.

Three public hearings are being held in three municipalities on April 9 and 10 by the County Commissioners in order to comply with federal regulations. These hearings are being held to discuss the economic effect the highways will have on the villages as these new graded roads reach to the corporate limits of the villages. On April 9 hearings will be held at Argyle at 10 a.m. and at Stephen at 2 p.m. and on April 10 the hearing will be held at Holt at 2 p.m.

Mayor Sets Cleanup Week for April 14-19 in Thief River Falls

Mayor O. D. Belch announced today that following the recent proclamation of Governor Freeman designating the week of April 14-19 as Cleanup Week in Minnesota, he has called for the observance in Thief River Falls at that time of Clean up-Paint up-Fix up Week.

An order to that effect will be published by Dr. H. Paul Wendt, city health officer, in Thursday's edition of the Times.

In calling for the observance, Mayor Belch commented as follows:

"Nothing is worse for a city—like a person—than an "I don't care" attitude. And a city is, after all, only a sum of its parts: people, you and I. With Clean up-Paint up-Fix up time approaching, it is time for us individually and collectively to rid ourselves of any indifference and get ready to support the coming campaign.

"If we continue to dump trash on that vacant lot down the block, scatter fruit peels and wrappers from car windows, and ignore garbage and trash regulations, we will soon have a reputation for messy unconcern.

"Tourists, visitors, new business are not attracted to that kind of city any more than you want to become better acquainted with an unkept, rumpled-appearing person.

"Let's each make a firm resolution to obey our city's disposal ordinances, stop littering streets and sidewalks, and otherwise blemishing our collective property. If we do, and then clean, paint, and repair our individual share of the city, whether it be room, apartment or house, apathy will be soundly defeated by energy."

Temperatures here since Thursday have ranged from 55 Good Friday to a low of 21 Saturday. Easter Sunday was sunny but windy. No precipitation fell during the period.

The forecast is for fair weather today and tonight, becoming partly cloudy Tuesday, with little temperature change.

Winds will be northerly, 15 m.p.h. today, diminishing tonight and becoming east southeasterly, 15-20 m.p.h. Tuesday.

Large Barn Near St. Hilaire Razed by Fire on Sunday

A heavy loss was sustained late Sunday evening when fire destroyed a 112-foot-long barn on a farm one mile northeast of St. Hilaire owned by Joe Wald of Crookston, the place being formerly known as the Beebe farm.

By the time the St. Hilaire and Thief River Falls fire departments arrived, the blaze had made too much headway to be checked, altho the St. Hilaire men, who arrived first, were able to save a shed which had been threatened.

Destroyed in the fire were the contents of the barn, including several pieces of machinery, a truck, 20 tons of fertilizer and three pigs.

No one was living on the farm at the time of the fire, and the place was being looked after by Frank Wald, who lives on an adjoining farm. The origin of the blaze has not been learned here.

The local fire department also was called to the city dumpground Friday at 2 p.m., when a grass fire developed, there being no damage.

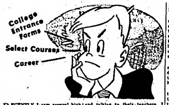
FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

By Clare D. Smith

Getting Into College Is Not So Easy



RECENTLY I saw several high school teenage juniors, who I thought had nothing more on their minds than the latest basketball scores, seriously examining college entrance forms and course catalogues, all the while carrying on a heated conversation about what they were going to study.

After questioning a few of them, and talking to their teachers, I learned that one doesn't just pack his bags one fine September morning, get on a train and go to the college of his choice. It appears those days are gone forever.

According to my information the nation's colleges are becoming more and more crowded, and by 1960, many youngsters will be unable to attend college because of lack of facilities.

Even now, the teenagers report, colleges are getting rather choosey about their students. They want the good students. To get in the college of their choice the average teenager in the last two grades of high school should have his application in months ahead of the entrance date.

This might be a good thing. If colleges are taking the good students first, it puts the pressure on the kids to really buckle down in high school.

Also, I think it tends to make teenagers give some serious thought to careers. At the same time, it definitely discourages "going to college just to be going."

I would like to know what other high school teenagers think about this college problem.

To Honor Citizens Age 90 or Older

To Receive Recognition During State Centennial

A statewide survey to find all Minnesota residents 90 years of age or older is now under way, according to an announcement made in St. Paul by the Governor's citizens council on aging and the Centennial commission. Purpose of this statewide canvas is to locate pioneer citizens and old settlers to be awarded a special centennial pioneer's certificate.

"Honoring Minnesota pioneer citizens is a natural tribute during this Centennial year," Governor Freeman stated, "for the heritage and prestige of our great state are the rewards we enjoy for their toil and perseverance."

The citizens council desires the following information on persons over 90 years of age: full name; address; birthdate; birthplace; length of time a resident of Minnesota; any interesting historical facts about the person, and a statement as to whether the person could atend a ceremony at the state capitol in May to personally accept the pioneer certificate from the governor.

Names and background information must be submitted by April 15, 1958, to Bernard E. Nash, executive secretary to the Governor's Council on Aging, Department of Public Welfare, 117 University Avenue, St. Paul 1, Minnesota.

From the Dearborn Independent, Dearborn, Michigan: Most economists agree that the present downward trend in business and employment could be promptly halted and turned upward if those employed (some 60 million) would realize their economic power to do the job.

Business depends upon employment. Jobs depend upon production and production depends upon demand. Any decrease in demand, such as a reluctance to buy the things we need, decreases production, jobs and business.

A reluctance to buy means that those employed are fearful of the future. They are employed and want to save every penny against the contingency of losing their employment. The truth is that their reluctance to buy will hurry their own entry onto the list of unemployed because they are decreasing demands for products which keep them on the job.

Somewhere along the line, confidence must break through if business is to take an upturn. Something must be done to show that the future is bright for this city, this state and nation.

Advertising can play a leading role in the restoration of confidence. Confidence, like measles, is highly contageous. Who among us can long be associated with a confident, self-assured person without having some of these qualities rub off on him?

Advertising is a force. It has the same expressions of force as education, publicity or propaganda. All attempt, by presenting suggestions and arguments, to make others believe and act in certain ways. A force is neither good or bad, but can be directed toward either end. Electricity can electrocute—it can also produce light. Advertising as a force can be directed toward good by showing that now is the time for prospective buyers to get the best bargains. The immediate bargain of quality merchandise at a relatively low cost. But the long-range bargain of increased demand, increased production and jobs will not only benefit the buyer but the advertiser as well, in increased sales.

The wise merchant should realize that through advertising he is also gaining a reputation. The wise buyer does not heed anonymous letters, neither does he heed anonymous products. The author of neither can be found. The advertiser, on the other hand, can always be found. His willingness to have confidence in the economy, future, as well as the present and past will be, is, and was in the hands of the people.

Rowell Plant at Baudette Offers New Medication

From the research laboratories of Rowell Laboratories, Inc., located on the Canadian border at Baudette, comes the announcement of a new type of first-aid medication.

Dr. R. M. Appel, the laboratories' research director, announces the release of a spray-on (aerosol) type of bandage in which is impregnated the wide range antibiotic Neomycin. "When sprayed on body surface injuries, a thin plastic film or bandage is deposited on the skin," Dr. Appel reports. "Further," he states, "the water-soluble film is so formulated that air may enter through it to allow rapid healing." The product has been named "NEO-BAND".

The Rowell Laboratories, Inc. is the northernmost pharmaceutical firm in the continental United States. The growing firm employs over 75 people.

CROP VALUES PER ACRE RANGE $18.40 TO $455

From rye at an average statewide return of $18.40 an acre, Sherburne county leading, to dry field peas at an acre return of $455, pretty much in Polk and Marshall counties, Minnesota field crops run a wide gamut of both local and price. Buckwheat's $18.70 is next the bottom, Carlton county's cabbage at $380 next the top. Martin leads in corn, more than three to one the state's leading agricultural product, with an average acre return of around $60. Polk leads in all wheat except winter, in which Roseau excels; Polk also is top barley, sugar beet, and potato county, and near the top in all varieties of clover and alfalfa. Otter Tail leads in oats and hay, and is a hot contender for the clover crown. Alsike at about $378 an acre is one of the top money crops. Ranging through $74 a sweet corn acre, $87 green peas, $100 cucumbers, to $330 for carrots and $371 for onions, the south central part of the state earns a lot of vegetable money. Soybeans follow corn and hay and lead oats as the state's top revenue crops, and Renville is the leading soybean county. One hundred ten acres of Minnesota tobacco brought in 1956 a cash return of $321 an acre.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that The Charles E. Hires Company and its Quality Control Division are able to include your organization among the 127 Hires Franchised Bottlers throughout the United States and Canada who, by consistently meeting the requirements of this department, achieved an enviable record in bottling quality-perfect Hires during the 1957 calendar year. We are confident you will accept with equal pride the 1957 Quality Control Award, which will be presented to you by our district representative at a later date, and will relay our congratulations to each member of your organization who has played a role in making your plant eligible for the honor.

In brief, the award was based on the quality of samples from your plant and from retail outlets in your territory. The general cooperation, ability and interest of your organization in striving for quality production and the frequency with which samples were received, likewise, were determining factors.

'Do-It-Yourself' Project Better Than 'Happy Pills'

Reach for a do-it-yourself project instead of a tranquilizing pill.

That's the advice more and more doctors are handing out today to ease the tensions of modern living. A simple home improvement project can be both relaxing and rewarding.

A popular do-it-yourself project is home insulation. Installing batts or blankets of mineral wool is light work which requires no special skills, uses ordinary tools, and the finished job will mean more year-around comfort plus heating and air conditioning economy.

The following tells how mineral wool batts or blankets should be installed in areas accessible to the home handyman:

Walls. For greatest comfort, wall insulation should be thick enough to fill the space between studs to its full depth. Fit blankets of insulation neatly in stud spaces and cut batts to fit odd shapes. Always leave flanges of vapor barrier at ends for stapling at top and bottom of wall. Keep the vapor barrier on the warm side of the wall and staple every six inches along stud. A staple gun makes this go faster. Work the bait or blanket behind small water pipes leaving vapor barrier intact.

Ceilings. With vapor barrier down on warm side of ceiling, fit insulation tightly in place between joists. No stapling is necessary, but ends of insulation blankets should fit tightly together. For the most effective job, the mineral wool should be a minimum of three inches thick. Six-inch batts are recommended for air conditioned or electrically heated homes.

Soft Green Blend Best-Liked Color On U. S. Rooftops

Americans still prefer green on their rooftops, although their tastes run more to soft, muted tones than they did 15 years ago, a national study shows.

The study, undertaken in 1956 by the Asphalt Roofing Industry Bureau, a manufacturers' association, shows that almost one-third of the asphalt shingles shipped from plants were in soft, blended greens.

A similar study made in 1941 revealed that 20 percent of the asphalt shingles that year were in a bright, solid green. More than 20 percent were hexagonal in shape.

The new study shows a trend away from hexagonal shingles, with only 5 percent sold in 1956. Most popular shingle today is the square-tab strip shingle.

Preferences for color differ in various regions of the United States, according to the study. On the Pacific Coast, light gray was most popular, while homeowners in the Northwest preferred solid black or blue-black and gray blends.

In the Southeast, straight white led with 24.8 percent of the shingles sold, and in the Southwest, white shingles totaled 16.9 percent. In both the Southern regions, solid color shingles were preferred.

Of the total asphalt shingles shipped from 68 manufacturing plants during the survey period, 11.3 percent were white.

Good Lawn Essential In Landscaping

Some open lawn space is essential for landscape beauty around the home. In many locations where the soil is loamy and rich, a good lawn can be maintained merely by cutting the grass often and allowing the grass clippings to remain says the American Association of Nurserymen. Only occasional seeding of bare spots and the plucking of weeds by hand or use of a good lawn weed killer is necessary.

Starting with bare ground, however, the following are steps which will assure the kind of lawn you can be proud of.

1. Proper grading and preparation of soil. The ground preferably should slope slightly away from the buildings to afford good drainage. If grading is necessary, push the top soil aside first and then replace it on top of the ground when the grading is completed.

The ideal soil is spongy enough to hold a store of water, sandy enough to crumble easily, and has enough clay to hold it together. Additives will give it the right consistency—if too sandy add clay soil; if too much clay, add sand and mix the top couple of inches thoroughly.

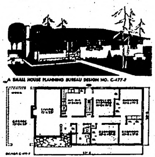
Fertilizer may be added. Commonly used formulas are 12 per cent nitrogen, 6 per cent phosphorous, and 6 per cent potash, as well as 10-6-4. Rake in thoroughly.

2. Favorite grasses for different climates vary widely. Be sure of what you are getting. The seed formula will be on the container.

3. After preparing the soil and planting seed or sod as the case may be, a good rolling to firm it down is desirable. Soak well with a fine spray from hose or sprinkler.

4. Watering is highly important. It is necessary for seed germination and to put fertilizer in soluble form for use by the plant. Water whenever the soil becomes dry until the grass is well established.

5. Mow often and allow the grass clippings to remain. Do not cut too short. The ideal way is to remove the top inch of the grass, leaving it at least two to three inches in height, depending on the variety.



DESIGN C-477-F. Versatility is the keynote of this plan. The dual bath combines economy in plumbing with an accessibility of location. The kitchen allows ample space for dining and access to the front vestibule.

An attached garage is indicated on the blueprint plans and helps show how the covered flagstone porch serves as a covered passage to the house and lets the garage, if desired, become integral part of the exterior design. Family needs would determine whether you would want a four bedroom house or a three bedroom house with an excellently located family room.

The all-brick exterior is combined with hip-roof and colorful asphalt shingles. Floor area is 1444 square feet, cubage 25,-092 cubic feet.

For further information about DESIGN C-477-F, write the Small House Planning Bureau, St. Cloud, Minn. In Canada, the Small House Planning Bureau of Canada, St. John, New Brunswick.

GLUE APPLICATOR

A novel but effective tool for spreading glue over large flat surfaces is a short piece of broken hacksaw blade. Used cutting edge down, the teeth act like a notched trowel and spread the glue out in an even layer.

FADE-PROOF WALLPAPERS

The brightest sunlight cannot fade today's modern wallpapers. Unlike in former days, manufacturers now make use of permanent colors and maintain rigid control on the amount of background color to prevent discoloration due to light exposure.

FLOOR SCRATCHES

To fix a scratch in hardwood floor that is too deep to remove by sanding, fill with Plastic Wood, building filler a little higher than board surface. Let harden; then sand down and finish with shellac.

HANDLING TUBING

To clamp thin wall pipe or tubing in a vise without crushing or scratching it, wrap the tubing with several steel wool pads before inserting in the vise. This gives a slip-proof grip and avoids damage to the tubing.

What About Weekly Teenage Allowances?

By Clara D. Smith

HOW DO I GET IN THESE FINANCIAL HOLES, ANYWAY!
BILL
DUE

Every time teenagers get together, boys or girls, one of their topics of conversation, and they are seriously concerned, is their allowance. It takes more for a boy to have a date in 1958 than it did his father in 1938; money just doesn't stretch like it did. I don't think I know a teenager who believes his allowance is adequate.

What's the answer? Does Dad dig deeper into his pocket to keep son and daughter financially solvent?

There are a couple of facts the teenager should consider before he answers with a big YES. First, Dad may not be able to dig deeper. And second, even if he can I'm not so sure he should.

The theory of allowances has been it gives a child a feeling of independence and teaches him how to manage money. That is true for younger children. I don't believe it is always true with the teenager.

A number of parents I know follow this plan, even though they can afford rather large allowances for their children:

They give their teenagers an allowance, but expect and urge them to supplement it with their own earnings. These parents report that their teenagers, especially the boys, suddenly acquire a new respect for money if they have had to earn it. And in every case, the parents report, they begin to manage their funds more efficiently.

Sounds reasonable to me. What do you think?

From The News, Ravenswood, West Virginia: A short "hurrah" for New York City school officials, who have finally realized that education is a privilege as well as an obligation. Because of the serious outbreaks of juvenile delinquency, the school authorities have kicked out more than 600 young terrorists. The city schools, the educators said, cannot afford to keep them around.

The action is not the first of its kind to the country. A few weeks ago a Massachusetts school board decided its schools were too crowded to pamper any longer pupils who were unwilling or unable to learn. The board said flatly that education was a privilege offered by the government, and it could see no reason to waste taxpayers' money on those who did not appreciate the opportunity.

Perhaps in these two actions the nation has found a workable weapon against juvenile delinquency, as well as a cure for some of our school problems. In the past generation we have adopted the bleeding heart theory that dunking or ousting a youngster would do permanent damage to his psyche. We had, at an even earlier date, decided not to do temporary damage to his posterior.

Teachers, between the Scylla of psyche and the Charybdis of shiva, were forced to pass a pupil on from grade to grade. Any attempt to discipline was met by outraged parents protesting that Junior was a good boy when he really was a goon. And the result was that each year the slow or lazy pupils held back the brighter or more willing ones. Teachers, conforming to a code that insisted there was no such thing as a bad boy and all people were equal in all things, spent too much time with the bottom of the class, not enough with the top.

So this nation, in an age demanding the best that uncommon men can offer, has turned out millions of common ones year after year.

Now, with the ugly threat of being forced to take a job hanging over his head, New York youngsters might not be so quick to turn to hoodlumism. They will work and behave, or they will leave. Cutting up, literally and figuratively, will not be so cute in the future.

Though the reasons for the change of heart in New York are tragic, the return of realism is a delight to behold.

Farm Homes Can Enjoy Running Water Benefits

Thanks to modern electric pumps and water systems, the farm home and the house beyond the water mains can now enjoy the same convenience of running water under pressure as the city home.

An adequate well with pumping equipment of the proper capacity will supply the kitchen and the bathroom and the various water-connected appliances of modern living just as efficiently as the water that flows through a city main.

Wells for home water supply are of four types: dug, bored, driven and drilled.

Drilled wells are the safest and most satisfactory source of water supply for a home beyond the water mains, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

Drilled wells reach the deeper water-bearing formations, and the deeper the source, the safer the supply.

Wells should be located at a safe distance of surface contamination. As an additional precaution, a well should be sealed at the ground opening to prevent dangerous surface seepage.

Once the well is delivering water and has been tested for capacity, it is time to select the pump and storage tank for the water system. No pump can deliver water faster than the well can supply it. For this reason, it is necessary to know the well's capacity before you buy a pump.

All pumps fall into basic categories—shallow well pumps or deep well pumps. The homeowner should rely on the recommendation of an experienced water system dealer for the type of pump best suited to his well.

A water system dealer figures the total peak demand that the system will need to supply. Then he recommends a somewhat larger sized pump in terms of gallons per hour pumping capacity. The purpose of this is to provide a reserve.

It is never advisable to size a pump entirely on the basis of current requirements. As families grow and appliances and bath rooms are added, water needs increase.

Probable future needs should, therefore, be given due weight in planning a water system.

Another point which should be considered in selecting a pump is fire protection. To protect a country home in a fire emergency, the pump should be capable of delivering 500 gallons per hour from a number of strategically-located hose outlets.

CHROME PROTECTION

To protect chrome plumbing fixtures from scratches when using a pipe wrench or pliers on them, wrap the fixtures with friction tape. The result is a non-slip surface for your wrench. The chrome is safe from marring and the tape removes easily after the job is done.

RE-SLOTTING SCREWS

If a screw slot is so stripped by the time the screw is part way out that a screwdriver can't turn it, at right angles to the damaged slot cut a new one with a hacksaw. Then use a narrow bladed screwdriver to back the screw out the rest of the way.

MOULDINGS ADD CHARM

An easy project for the home handyman is the application of mouldings to add design to plain fireplaces, to form wall patterns suggestive of a picture frame to set off prized pieces of furniture, or to make a room look longer or higher.

BATHROOM SAFETY

In remodeling bathroom, don't overlook such safety factors as grab bars for bathtubs and showers, non-skid finishes for flooring, light switches preferably located outside the bathroom.

Painting Hints from Paint Headquarters

Notes for the Amateur House Painter

by Bud Kelly

Cheer up, friend. Painting a house isn't the back-breaking job you think it is. In fact, it can be fun. If . . . if . . . if you plan right, use the right paint and tools . . . and take your time. And right now is a good time to plan your job.

First (and probably most important) do a good preparation job. Scrape off scale; sand rough spots; plug holes and leaks; get the surface as clean as you can.

Now, how about paint? You can't beat SUPERMIX House Paint. It hides beautifully, spreads easily, has fine coverage, doesn't dry out in the can . . . gives a tough, smooth film.

Use a moderate stroke and pressure to work the paint in. Dip the brush frequently . . . and keep the paint stirred. Get all the sidewall work done first. Do the trim later. Screen and sash can be delayed for evening or rainy-day work.

The big thing is: don't hurry. Rushing has spoiled more paint jobs than anything else.

Did you know SUPERMIX House Paint is especially formulated for this area? It is. That's why it looks so handsome for so many years.

Final note: good paint is only 20% of a professional painters' bill. And anyone can get professional results with SUPERMIX. If (like we said) you do a good preparation job . . . and take plenty of time. Stop in for a talk before you start painting. Chances are we can save you unnecessary work.

New Home Improvement Council's $125,000 'How's Your Home' Quiz To Dramatize Repair-Remodel Needs

An appealing contest for homeowners—with the catchy title, "How's Your Home?"—highlights 1958 activity of the home improvement and modernization industry banded together for the first time by the Home Improvement Council.

The contest, which has cash prizes totaling $125,000, helps the homeowning family compile valuable information about its home while competing for a total of $125,000 in cash prizes. The top prize is $25,000, second prize is $10,000, third is $3,000, and there are 1,000 other prizes adding up to $87,000.

Designed to stimulate participation by every member of the family, the complete contest guide and entry form makes a game out of what would normally seem an overwhelming chore: Careful examination of every room in a house; its exterior and the grounds around it.

A detailed checklist in the contest guide can be kept by the homeowner as a help in organizing his own home modernization program after he has entered the contest. The entry form itself consists of this statement: "Here's why we feel it is important for us to improve our present home (25 words or less) . . ."

Industry spokesmen explain that homeowners will be able to complete such a statement much more thoughtfully and effectively after they have made a thorough analysis of their homes in completing the home improvement checklist.

Deadline for entries in the contest is June 30, 1958. Only one entry will be accepted from each home. Entrants are not required to buy anything or do anything orther than complete the checklist and entry form.

The main purpose of the contest, according to the Home Improvement Council, is to acquaint homeowners with their specific repair-remodel needs, the benefits of improvement and modernization—and the fact that it is possible to make dramatic changes in an older home.

Through the courtesy of eight Thief River Falls firms the Times is presenting the "How's Your Home?" contest on a local level. In this issue of the Times is the announcement of the contest, which will be followed, next week, with the first of six sections of the contest.

The contest sections will be found on the Builders' Feature Page of the Times each Monday, April 14 through May 19. At the end of the contest, entrants will mail their entries to the Home Improvement Council for judging. Deadline for entries is June 30.

It is hoped many home owners will participate in the contest. There is nothing to buy, no obligation of any kind. Any person of legal age can enter, but only one member per household.

So, get your pencils sharpened—you may win some of that $125,000 prize money!

Buy and sell through Times Classified Ads. Small cost too!

Kitchens Can Be Up-Dated Step by Step

From the financial point of view, one of the best things about kitchen modernizing projects is that "everything doesn't have to be done at once".

Thus, if the current state of the budget will not permit an overall remodelling job, there are many indicidual improvements that can be made at relatively small cost. Each will make its own immediate contribution to the homemaker's convenience and well-being, and at the same time, be an important step toward the ultimate realization of her "dream kitchen".

Just re-covering the counter surfaces can often work wonders in perking up the appearance and stepping up the efficiency of the kitchen. Most commonly used materials are ceramic tile, linoleum, plastics, stainless steel or wood.

Equally pleasing results can be obtained by re-doing the flooring or the walls.

In choosing a new floor covering, make sure that it is both dirt and grease-resistant. Linoleum, rubber tile, asphalt tile and vinyl plastics are all good.

When it comes to new wall coverings, you can choose tiling, thin gauge linoleum or washable wallpaper. To give your kitchen a refreshing "new look".

Color Works Wonders

Even a fresh paint job, can change the whole appearance of your kitchen, if you use colors judiciously. Darker shades bring walls "closer", pale tones "push" them out, make the room look more spacious. Whites, grays, blues and greens are cool and restful. Reds, yellows, pink and beige are warm and cheerful.

The introduction of more adequate and convenient cabinet space need not await the complete "re-doing" of the kitchen. On the unit-by-unit replacement plan, you can start your improvement program at once, with the assurance that when the project is completed, the overall effect will be one of perfect harmony and functional coordination.

Wall and base cabinet units can be arranged in many different ways to create a kitchen "individualized" to your own needs and tastes.

Modern Appliances

One or more modern appliances may go a long way toward making your "life in the kitchen" less burdensome and more pleasant.

Typical of the way in which a single new appliance can transform a whole kitchen is a "refrigerator center" that combines the wall refrigerator with cabinettes; base cabinets (or even another major appliance) in a single free-standing unit. This you can use in many different ways in your kitchen: as a modern room divider, recessed in an alcove or set against a wall.

Or if eye-level cooking is prominent among the features you envision in your "dream kitchen", there is the easily installed "stack-on" gas oven.

Spruce Up Old Bathroom to Sell House

Modern and attractive bathrooms help sell houses. That's why, if you are trying to sell a middle-aged house, it's a good idea to bring the bathrooms up-to-date before you put the house on the market.

This suggestion is offered by the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers. The Institute points out that homes with dingy, unattractive bathrooms in need of modernization are hard to move in today's selective market.

With an FHA home improvement loan calling for small easy-to-make monthly payments, it is no strain on the family budget to modernize an out-of-date bathroom, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

The prescription is simple—have a plumbing contractor remove the old fixtures, replacing them with a matched ensemble of new fixtures in color. Here is the color palette you can choose from—blue, green, yellow, pink, ivory, suntan, gray or red.

Change the floor and wall treatment when you change from old to new fixtures, the Bureau advises. You'll want a completely different bathroom setting to show off the new fixtures, the Bureau adds.

Be sure to include a roomy medicine cabinet and plenty of accessories—towel racks, robe hooks, soap dishes and tumbler holders, tissue dispensers—for convenience.

Rose Plants Need Feeding Four Times Annually

Roses need special nourishment four times a year to achieve their maximum size and beauty.

A dependable, tested plant food, preferably one which has been formulated especially for roses, is recommended. The four feedings should be timed as closely as possible to the following schedule:

1. Early Spring: As soon as the ground can be worked, spread fertilizer around the rose bush and work it lightly into the soil.

2. Before Blooming: A second application at this time helps the healthy bush produce bigger blooms.

3. After Blooming: This feeding replaces the nourishment consumed during the heavy blooming.

4. End of Growing Period: Apply the fourth feeding in the fall about two weeks before the end of the growing season to assure a better start the following spring.

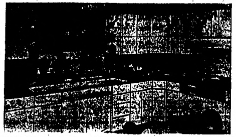
When you buy your fertilizer, follow the directions on the package as to amount to use.

MAKE IT DIFFERENT

In finishing off your basement, avoid making it a downstairs version of your living room. Your objective should be to create a real "family room" suitable for a variety of activities.

Old Kitchen Takes on New Beauty and Efficiency

BEFORE MODERNIZATION, this kitchen was as functionally deficient as it was uninspiring in appearance. Counter space was "broken up" by supports and sides of old-fashioned cabinets, which themselves were inadequate for the orderly and efficient storage of utensils and supplies. The over-all effect of "whiteness" was pallid and monotonous.



AFTER MODERIZATION the same kitchen becomes a much more efficient and cheerful place in which to work and serve informal meals. Modern cabinets save work and steps and provide ample unbroken counter space that sweeps around the corner of kitchen. The imaginative use of wallpaper adds color and interest to the effect. Larger Gas Heater Eases Many Household Tasks

The average family uses its water heated more than any other appliance in the home—for dishwashing, bathing, laundry, cleaning and a total of 140 different household tasks.

Overworking the heater takes years off its life, and it adds greatly to operating costs. The efficiency of many of automatic appliances depends upon the hot water supply.

Increasing use of home laundry and automatic dishwashing equipment has brought with it a need for larger size water heaters in most homes. A properly sized tank is one which is large enough to provide a margin of extra capacity to meet maximum current as well as possible future demands.

The wise homeowner plans for the future as well as today. By selecting the right size heater you can give your family the luxury of abundant hot water 24 hours a day, every day. And you can add the new labor-saving conveniences still to come without impairing the efficiency of your heater.

Water heaters range in size from 300 to 100 gallons. The size should be determined by two things: The amount of hot water you need and the recovery capacity of the heater to replenish hot water as fast as it is used.

With a fast recovery heater you can use a smaller tank, thus saving on purchase price, installation, maintenance and operating costs, with added advantage that it will take up less space.

Many 30-gallon gas fired water heaters will recover their entire capacity in about one hour. They give more hot water per hour than any other kind of automatic heater (even those twice as large), making them the fastest heaters.

Big Gain in Oil Heat

By 1960, approximately 2,000,-000 more homes will be heated by oil in addition to the more than 9,000,000 homes now centrally heated by oil, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau. Growing in popularity is the boiler-burner unit consisting of a complete package with all controls and accessories for easy and quick installation.

The importance of having the oil burner cleaned and checked sometime during the summer months is emphasized by the Bureau.

How to Pick Best Place For Bathroom

Accessibility is probably the most important single consideration in deciding where to put a bathroom.

The question of what is the best location for a bathroom or powder room comes up in modernization projects as well as in the construction of a new house.

One of the principal questions that has to be answered is who is going to use the room. Is it primarily for guests? Then it should be near their bedrooms, in the case of a bathroom.

If a powder room, it should be near the living room or entrance to the house. Guests should not have to go through other rooms to reach a powder room, the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau advises.

On the other hand, if the bathroom is primarily for members of the family, it should be near the kitchen, in the case of a powder room or near the family bedrooms, if it is a bathroom.

Another consideration in planning the location of a bathroom or bedroom is economy. Usually this is not as important a consideration as convenience, but it may be a factor. What you are trying to avoid is long runs of supply pipe and waste pipe which result if the bathrooms are widely separated or if the powder room cannot be placed near or below a bathroom.

The expert in this case as in everything else pertaining to the design and installation of a bathroom or powder room is your plumbing contractor. He will help you in achieving a satisfactory compromise between convenience and economy.

March Weather Here Mild and Lacked Snow

March was a miserable month in much of the U.S. in 1958 but northwest Minnesotans were fortunate in escaping snowdrifts and howling winds that reached record-breaking proportions in less fortunate areas of the country.

March was a dry month, as well in this area, with only scattered traces of precipitation. Temperatures were mild for March, although it wasn't exactly warm. The month's low temperature was March 6 when a 9-above was recorded. The high was 57 on the 31st.

Statistically speaking, the average low temperature in March was 21.3, which is warm for the month. The average high was 39.45, and the mean temperature, unofficially, was 29.74 above.

The most noteworthy thing about the March weather was the break-up of the ice on the river here. A modern-day record was set when the break-up came at 6:00 a.m. March 26, although it was not the earliest break-up in human memory, an earlier break-up having been recorded March 8, 1878, according to Cyrus Malberg.

Here is the March temperature summary:

Going Steady Popular With Teenagers

"GOING STEADY" HAS ITS DRAWBACKS...
AND ITS GOOD POINTS TOO...

It must be exasperating to teenagers to have their parents continually saying: "Well, when I was your age I didn't do that." This seems to imply that if the parents didn't do it when young, then it's wrong for the offspring to do it.

Several of my friends have exhausted my patience with their criticism of the teenage fad of going steady. Most of them never give specific reason, they just say "we didn't do it," thus implying their children shouldn't.

Personally, I can't decide whether this "going steady" is good or bad for the youngsters. But just because I didn't "go steady" when in high school, doesn't mean my son shouldn't.

It seems to me that the kids miss out on a lot of fun. I've known teenage boys to turn down invitations to dances and parties because their "steady" wasn't invited. The same is true of girls.

I believe this current trend confines youngsters to a narrow circle of friends, and I don't think this is good.

Also, 80 per cent of these friendships must be broken up when high school is finished. The boy goes to one college, the girl to another. There is likely to be a period of unhappiness in such cases.

I would like to hear other views on the subject, from both parents and teenagers. What do you think?

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, NATIONAL WEEKLY NEWSPAPER SERVICE, FRANKFORT, KY.

THE FIGHTER ALWAYS WINS

By F. L. Rowley

KERMIT SPENCER was the shy type. In the ten odd years he'd been in Hillcrest no one had heard him say more than a dozen words at one time. People liked him though, mostly because he minded his own business. When you went into his hardware store to buy something you never came out with a handful of things you didn't need. Kermit was not a high pressure salesman.

The only time I saw Kermit prick up his ears and look interested was one afternoon in Art Mullins' Coffee Shop. Art's pretty sister Eileen had just tottled in to announce:

"Ray is trying to get himself killed!"

Maybe I ought to tell you right here that Ray Jensen and Eileen Mullins were planning to get married.

Art sighed. "Ray been fighting again? Who did he pick on this time?"

"Gus Pappas. Ray's going to fight him tonight," moaned Eileen, "and everyone says that Ray will get his block knocked off this time."

"And it's just what he needs," Art grunted. "Only we can't let him do it; not ten days before your wedding. He wouldn't be out of the hospital in time. Gus Pappas is tough. Can't you talk Ray out of it?"

Kermit was studying my head. "You need a haircut," he said. "So do I. Wait until I get a few clippings from my store and we'll go over to Gus' place together."

"Clippings?" I didn't get it. Kermit ran into his hardware store and came out a few minutes later with a loose-leaf notebook under his arm.

When we reached the barber shop there were three men ahead of us. Gus was having a good day. No sooner had we settled ourselves than Kermit whipped open his loose-leaf book.

"This is my collection of fighters," he explained. His voice was loud, I kind of got the idea that Kermit wasn't trying to keep any secrets.

"Fighters?" I asked. "You mean boxers?"

"Right. Now look at this fellow here. Doesn't he look familiar?"

"Not especially. Is he supposed to be good?"

And Kermit began to reel off an impressive list of boxers who had kissed the canvas with the help of Batling Barton. Gus was looking our way now, and soaking up every word.

"How come we ain't heard about this wonder man?" asked Gus at length.

"Because of the accidents," said Kermit.

"What accidents?" Gus wanted to know. He sidled over to get a better look at Kermit's clippings.

Kermit shook his head sadly and said: "Batling Barton sent so many good men to the hospital that the commission advised him to give up boxing. And if you fellows promise not to breath a word of it I'll let you in on a little secret."

Raising our right hands to our midriffs we solemnly promised.

"Look at this picture good," Kermit invited. "He was younger when it was taken, but doesn't he look like someone we all know?" Here Kermit gave me a kick in the shins.

"It looks a bit like Ray Jensen," I said slowly.

Gus nodded numbly. "Yeh—it does at that."

"But don't even mention this," warned Kermit. "If Eileen ever finds out that Ray was a professional she'll drop him—and Ray will kill the man who squeals."

Once again we solemnly promised—especially Gus.

The next day I heard that Ray and Gus had shaken hands and called the fight off right after Kermit and I had gotten our haircuts.

Like I say, Kermit Spencer is the shy type.

Optometrists to Meet in St. Paul

A convention with a definite Minnesota Centennial tie-in is planned for state optometrists when they gather for their annual meeting at Hotel Lowry in St. Paul on April 19, 20, 21. One of the highlights of the annual meeting is expected to be a display by the optical supply houses and laboratories of "100 years of eye wear in ophthalmic materials." This exhibit is expected to attract widespread public interest.

Principal speaker on the convention program according to Dr. A. E. Tillisch, Sr., Minneapolis, president of the group, is Dr. Ralph E. Wick, Rapid City, S. D., who will discuss "Geriatrics—problems of aging vision."

Stars don't twinkle — you do, according to the Murine Company feature service. Since there are motions of your eye and body you can't control, a pinpoint of light from a star dances over cluster after cluster of cells in your eye, thus giving a twinkling effect.

Rev. Pelger, Long Time RLF Priest, Dies in Crookston

The Rev. Henry Pelger, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church in Red Lake Falls for 29 years, died at St. Francis hospital in Crookston Tuesday after a long illness. He was 81.

Father Pelger was born March 31, 1877 in Rotterdam, Holland, and attended high school and college in that country. After graduating from the College of Philosophy at Rosedaal in 1897, he attended Theological Seminary at Millhill, London, England and was ordained in 1901.

From 1902 to 1915, he was a missionary in Uganda, British East Africa, Father Pelger arrived in Crookston in 1917 and was appointed assistant at the Cathedral and attended missions at Hallock, Red River and Bagley.

Father Pelger came to Red Lake Falls in February 1922, and held the St. Mary's pastorate until his resignation October 1, 1951. He has spent the last several years at St. Vincent's rest home in Crookston.

Surviving are two brothers, Herman and Franz, and a sister, Mrs. Kley, all of Rotterdam, Holland.

A Solemn pontifical high mass was held this morning at Crookston Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception.

To Elect Potato Board Member at RLF This Evening

A meeting to nominate a committeeman and alternate committeeman to the Red River Valley potato committee and control board, for a two-year term for District No. 3, Red Lake and Pennington Counties will be held at Red Lake Falls at the court house at 8:00 p.m. this evening, Monday, April 7. There will also be a discussion on the proposed change in the marketing order regulations, and an opportunity for questions on the program of the marketing committee.

Shootin' the Breeze

BY Mack Draper

The title of this column reminds me that the breeze has been from the east a mightly long tim lately. Normally an east wind is a harbinger of rain but so far we've had less than a quarter-inch.

That was enough to call a halt to the small amount of spring work that was being done by our area farmers.

A few people were kind enough to ask why this column wasn't in last Monday's paper. I wish I could say the absence of the column was my way of saying, "No comment!" but the plain truth is, I forgot to write it!

The early break-up of the ice here wasn't a record after all, according to word brought here to the office. Well, the old-timers can still top us in many ways and their stories about the weather usually top that experienced by the younger generation.

But, when today's generation grows up they'll have a hard time because everything is documented nowadays and there's alwasy some bird who'll say, "Let's take a look at the record."

As I write this column I can look out the Times' front window at a small Volkswagon bearing a Canadian license. It reminds me of a certain small airplane built before the war. A fellow standing by one remarked that the small cockpit must be rather hard to enter. Another man cracked, "You don't get in it—you just strap it on your back and go!"

* * *

There was a time when the mythical Atlas was the strongest man in the world. Nowadays Uncle Sam is carrying most of the world on his shoulders. Getting tired, folks?

We don't know whether the highway safety commission was being facetious or not when, in its report in the Thursday Times, it stated that over 47,000 of the more than 57,000 accidents in the state in 1957 were caused by two or more cars attempting to use the same space at the same time. In short, they collided.

* * *

Speaking of irresistible forces and immovable objects, a government is the only thing that can be both at the same time.

I just came up with a way to shorten my lawn-mowing chore this summer. I'm going to spade up more garden! The garden is the missus' province, of course. Naturally, the project has her approval.

As we were headed for North Dakota Saturday, on a short stretch of highway 220 between Alvarado and East Grand Forks we saw hundreds of beer cans and bottles revealed by a fire that had burned off the ditch banks.

The cans and bottle were so thick, they were no more than a few feet apart at any place, and looked terrible.

A lot of folks, including yours truly, would like to see this thing stopped—even if we have to make it illegal to sell beer for consumption other than on the premises where sold, in order to stop it! Litterbugs cost taxpayers a lot of money.

Well, here's hoping you had a happy Easter and that you got home safely from wherever you spent the week-end. SO LONG!

Cadillac
When Distance Is Always Tempting!
Take a new Cadillac—point its hood toward some distant destination—and watch what happens!
We would be willing to wager that day's end would find you far closer to journey's end than you could ever have imagined!
We say this because we know how wonderful the miles are when they pass beneath the wheels of a new Cadillac—and how tempting distance is when seen through the windshield of the "car of cars".
First of all, imagine how comfortable and rested you would be! The seat-cushions are soft and deep and perfectly contoured. The steering wheel is ideally positioned . . . and the car is wonderfully spacious.
Then consider how easy the car is to handle! It is incredibly agile and responsive—and wonderfully smooth and level of ride. In fact, if you have selected the extra-cost option of Cadillac's air suspension, you can scarcely detect the presence of the road.
And think of your pride and contentment! The very knowledge that your motor car is so highly admired and so widely respected adds its own reward to each and every mile.
You ought to try it soon. Your dealer will be happy to explain the virtues of Fleetwood coachcrafting—and to give you the facts on every model, including the exclusive Eldorado Brougham.

APRIL SHOWERS

ALMOST as closely connected with April as "fool" is the word, "showers." Who has not heard of "April showers?" But do not let the month get you down because of its showers. For showers are necessary, you know, to water the earth.

And showers are necessary to break the monotony. For

"If all the skies were sunshine, our faces would be fain
To feel once more upon the cooling drip of rain."

The reader may have seen a poem about Jeannette and Jo. One was always apprehensive about the weather, the other believed the sun would soon break through the cloud. And sure enough, the shower would pass and the sun appear.

So on the darkest day let us look up to the "silver lining" of the cloud. It would be fine if we could always be as greatly exhilirated by glorious weather as we are depressed by dark days and gloom.
